SKETCH

OF THE

LIFE OF JOHN MILTON.

JOHN MILTON, the most distinguished of English poets, and one chose exertions in the cause of civil and religious liberty must ever entitle him to the grateful regards of his countrymen, was born in Breda Street, December 9, 1608, and received his early education at St. Paul's School. Young Milton was removed at the age of seventeen to Christ's College, Cambridge, and soon distinguished himself by the purity and elegance of his Latin compositions as well as for his general classical attainments.

On leaving college he repaired to his father's residence in Bucking-manshire, where he spent five years in the most diligent study of the Greek and Latin classics; and during this interval he appears to have produced both his exquisite "Masque of Comus," which is stated in the title to have been performed at Ludlow Castle, in 1634, before the Earl of Bridgewater, and some of the principal of his minor poems, of which we may especially notice his "Lycidas," the character of which is pastoral.

In 1638, Milton left England for the purpose of completing his education by foreign travel; and visited in succession Paris, Nice, Genoa, Pisa, Florence, Rome, and Naples. Honors from both the learned and the great waited upon the accomplished Englishman wherever he appeared. The state of his native country, however, worn by dissensions, and manifestly on the eve of a great convulsion, appealed too strongly to his patriotic ardor to suffer him to protract his stay abroad; and returning by the way of Geneva, he again reached home after an absence of about fifteen months. He did not now resume his residence with his father. He probably considered that for the unsettled times which were apparently at hand the fit preparation, which it behoved every man to make. was the adoption of some way of earning his bread by his own independent exertions; and hiring a house in St. Bride's church-yard, he opened a seminary for the instruction of youth in the classic languages. The school turning out very successful, he shortly afterwards removed to a house in Aldersgate Street, and in 1641 he published a treatise in favor of the Puritans.

In 1643, Milton married a daughter of Mr. Powell, of Forrest Hill, Oxfordshire, a firm Royalist. This marriage, in its early stage, seemed very inauspicious; for, either influenced by family considerations, or from want of congeniality in sentiments and feelings, they had only been married a month when his wife deserted him, and returned to her She made no reply to the repeated letters and remonstrances of her husband; which so incensed him, that he formed the resolution to receive her no more; and to justify this resolution, he published several pieces on the subject of divorce. He even proceeded so far as to pay his addresses to a young lady with the design of marrying her. Whilst this marriage was negotiating he was surprised by a visit from his wife, who implored pardon and reconciliation on her knees. This awakened his tenderest affection, and he received her with kindness to

Milton's political spirit agreeing with the republican spirit of these times, he strongly supported the cause of the Commonwealth and the destruction of kingly government by several publications on the subject.

In 1645 he published a collection of Latin and English poems. Soon after the death of the King he was advanced by Cromwell to the station of Latin secretary to himself and the parliament; and he continued to hold the latter office till the restoration of Charles II. In 1649, Salmasius, a professor of polite learning at Leyden, and a man of extraordinary literary attainments, produced his "Defensio Regis," to which Milton replied in so forcible a manner that it became difficult to determine whose language was best. After this Milton resided for some time with his family in Whitehall; but his ill health obliged him to take lodgings in the neighborhood of St. James's Park; where his wife died, leaving him three daughters. This painful occurrence was soon succeeded by another still more distressing-his own deprivation of sight. In these melancholy circumstances he directed his attention to another object, and was married to the daughter of a Captain Woodcock, of Hackney. She died within a year, from the same cause as the former wife. Milton has honored her memory in his eighteenth sonnet,

On the King's restoration, he found it necessary to conceal himself till the storm against him was blown over, and the interest of his friends had got him included in the general amnesty. He now retired from the busy scenes of the world, and devoted himself to the completion of his grand poem. For, although his circumstances had suffered by the Restoration, his independent spirit refused to accept any public employment, and he lived in the greatest simplicity in the neighborhood of Bunhill Fields, where we are told he used to sit in a gray coarse cloth coat at the door in the summer, to enjoy the fresh air and receive the visits of persons of distinguished rank and learning.

He had now reached his forty-seventh year; and being free from external interruptions, applied himself to the consideration of three works which had long been reserved for future exertion-an epic poem, the history of his country, and a dictionary of the Latin tongue. Impracticable as the labor of collecting a dictionary seems to be to a man in a state of blindness, we are told that he prosecuted that design almost to his dving day; the compilers of the "Cambridge Dictionary," published in 1693, availed themselves of three folios he left behind. His historical narrative did not proceed beyond the conquest, from the difficulty, it is probable, of consulting a variety of authorities with the help of other eves. For the subject of his epic poem, after much deliberation, he determined upon "Paradise Lost"—a project which could only be justified by the success that attended it. We have already seen that at the Restoration Milton concealed himself in Bartholomew Close, where he remained till the passing an act of oblivion, which secured his person and property in common with others; the reason of his being treated with such indulgence cannot be satisfactorily ascertained. About this time he removed to Jewin Street, and married a third wife, who contributed very little to his domestic comfort—she oppressed his children in his lifetime, and defrauded them at his death. From Jewin Street he went to reside in the Artillery Walk, near Bunhill Fields, which concludes the register of his London residences.

While he continued to divide his time between State affairs and his private studies, it was hardly possible for him to accomplish any literary undertaking of great importance; but on quitting the office of Latin secretary, he was left to the free exercise of his mental energies, which could not be employed upon a subject better suited to the extensive range they were accustomed to take than that he had chosen. The "Paradise Lost" is said to have been written at different times, and was sold on the 27th of April, 1667, to Samuel Simmons, for an immediate payment of 5l.; with a further agreement for the same sum when 1500 copies of the first edition should be disposed of; and again 5l. when the same number should be sold of the second edition; and another 5l. after a similar sale of the third. All the editions were limited to 1500 copies. The third edition was published in 1678, and the widow to whom the copy then devolved sold all her claims to Simmons for 8l.; whence it will appear that the sum of 28l. constituted the entire remuneration for a performance which, while it immortalized the name of the poet, conferred an honor equally imperishable upon the nation signalized for his birth. While he was thus engaged, he was materially assisted by his two daughters, who wrote to his dictation for many hours each day.

Four years after his "Paradise Lost," he published his "Paradise Regained," which was his favorite production—a preference which has ever been opposed to the opinion of the public. In the last year of his life he printed a collection of "Familiar Epistles" in Latin: to these (being too few to form a volume, he added some academical exercises.

In his last retreat, he produced his "Samson Agonistes," a tragedy written on the Greek model. A life of indefatigable study, and which had been exposed to a variety of vicissitudes, now began to draw to a close. (Milton had long been afflicted with the gout and other infirmities, and he died without a struggle on the 10th of November, 1674, in the sixty-sixth year of his age.) His person was so delicate and beautifut in his youth, that at Cambridge he went by the appellation of "the Lady of Christ's College;" and in Italy the celebrated Giovanni Baptista Manso, who had conferred considerable favors on him, gives a high idea of his beauty in a Latin epigram which has been thus translated:—

"So perfect thou in mind, in form, and face, Thou'rt not of English, but angelic race."

Campbell, the poet, a critic in every shape qualified to form an accurate opinion of the merits of Milton in regard to his powers of versification, furnishes the following remarks on the universality of his genius:—"In Milton," he says, "there may be traced obligations to several minor English poets; but his genius had too great a supremacy to belong to any school. Though he acknowledged a filial reverence for Spencer as a poet, he left no Gothic irregular tracery in the design of his own great work, but gave a classical harmony of parts to its stupendous pile—It thus resembles a dome, the vastness of which is at first sight concealed by its symmetry, but which expands more and more to the eye while it is contemplated. His early poetry seems to have neither disturbed nor corrected the bad taste of his age. 'Comus' came into the world unacknowledged by its author, and 'Lycidas' appeared at first only with his initials. These and other exquisite pieces, composed in the happiest years of his life at his father's country house at Horton, were collectively published with his name affixed to them, in 1645; but that precious volame which included 'L'Allegro' and 'Il Penseroso,' did not, I believe, come to a second edition till it was republished by himself at the distance of twenty-eight years. Almost a century elapsed before his minor works obtained their proper fame.

"Even when 'Paradise Lost' appeared, though it was not neglected, it attracted no crowd of imitators, and made no visible change in the poetical practice of the age. He stood alone and aloof, above his times, the bard of immortal subjects, and, as far as there is perpetuity in language, of immortal fame. The very choice of those subjects bespoke a contempt for any species of excellence that was attainable by other men. There is something that overawes the mind in conceiving his long deliberated selection of that theme, his attempting it when his eyes were shut upon the face of nature, his dependence, we might almost say, on supernatural inspiration, and in the calm air of strength with which he opens 'Paradise Lost,' beginning a mighty performance without the appearance of an effort.

"The warlike part of 'Paradise Lost' was inseparable from its sub-Whether it could have been differently managed is a problem which our reverence for Milton will scarcely permit us to state. I feel that reverence too strongly to suggest even the possibility that Milton could have improved his poem by having thrown his angelic warfare into more remote perspective; but it seems to me to be most sublime when it is least distinctly brought home to the imagination. What an awful effect has the dim and undefined conception of the conflict which we gather from the opening of the first book! There the veil of mystery is left undrawn between us and a subject which the powers of description were inadequate to exhibit. The ministers of divine vengeance and pursuit had been recalled-the thunders had ceased

'To bellow through the vast and boundless deep,'

(in that line what an image of sound and space is conveyed!)—and -ar terrific cenception of the past is deepened by its indistinctness. In optics there are some phenomena which are beautifully deceptive at a certain distance, but which lose their illusive charm on the slightest approach to them that changes the light and position in which they are viewed. Something like this takes piace in the phenomena of fancy. The array of the fallen angels in hell, the unfurling of the standard of Satan, and the march of his troops

'In perfect phalanx, the Dorian mood Of flutes and soft recorders.'-

All this human pomp and circumstance of war is magic and overwhelming illusion. The imagination is taken by surprise. But the noblest efforts of language are tried with very unequal effect to interest us in the immediate and close view of the battle itself in the sixth book; and the martial demons, who charmed us in the shades of hell, lose some portion of their sublimity when their artillery is discharged in the daylight of heaven.

"If we call diction the garb of thought, Milton in his style may be said to wear the costume of sovereignty. The idioms even of foreign languages contributed to adorn it. He was the most learned of poets; yet his learning interferes not with his substantial English purity. His simplicity is unimpaired by glowing ornament, like the bush in the sacred flame, which burnt but 'was not consumed.'

"In delineating the blessed spirits, Milton has exhausted all the conceivable variety that could be given to pictures of unshaded sanctity: but it is chiefly in those of the fallen angels that his excellence is conspicnous above everything ancient or modern. Tasso had indeed pourtraved an infernal council, and had given the hint to our poet of ascribing the origin of pagan worship to those reprobate spirits. But how poor and squalid in comparison with the Miltonic Pandamonium are the Syllas. the Cyclopses, and the Chimeras of the Infernal Council of the Jerusalem! Tasso's conclave of fiends is a den of ugly, incongruous monsters. The powers of Milton's hell are god-like shapes and forms. Their appearance dwarfs every other poetical conception, when we turn our dilated eyes from contemplating them. It is not their external attributes alone which expand the imagination, but their souls, which are as colossal as their stature-their 'thoughts that wander through eternity'-the pride that burns amidst the ruins of their divine natures, and their genius that feels with the ardor and debates with the eloquence of heaven.'

But the proudest monument that has been reared to the genius of Milton is the "Essay" from the pen of Dr. Channing. It breathes a spirit of poetry nearly akin to that with which that great poet was himself imbued, and furnishes the most masterly view of his genius that has yet appeared.

In speaking of the intellectual qualities of Milton, Dr. Channing says: We may begin with observing, that the very splendour of his poetic fame has tended to obscure or conceal the extent of his mind, and the variety of its energies and attainments. To many he seems only a poet, when in truth he was a profound scholar, a man of vast compass of thought, imbued thoroughly with all ancient and modern learning; and able to master, to mould, to impregnate with his own intellectual power, his great and various acquisitions. He had not learned the superficial doctrine of a later day-that poetry flourishes most in an uncultivated soil, and that imagination shapes its brightest visions from the mists of a superstitious age; and he had no dread of accumulating knowledge, lest it should oppress and smother his genius. He was conscious of that within him which could quicken all knowledge and wield it with ease and might; which could give freshness to old truths, and harmony to discordant thoughts; which could bind together, by living ties and mysterious affinities, the most remote discoveries; and rear fabrics of glory and beauty from the rude materials which other minds had collected. Milton had that universality which marks the highest order of intellect. Though accustomed almost from infancy to drink at the fountains of classical literature, he had nothing of the pedantry and fastidiousness which disdain all other draughts. His healthy mind delighted in genius, on whatever soil, or in whatever age it burst forth and poured out its falness. He understood too well the rights, and dignity, and pride of creatize imagination, to lay on it the laws of the Greek or Roman school. Parnassus was not to him the only holy ground of genius. He felt that poetry was a universal presence. Great minds were everywhere his He felt the enchantment of Oriental fiction, surrendered himself to the strange creations of 'Araby the Blest,' and delighted still more in the romantic spirit of chivalry, and in the tales of wonder in which it was embodied. Accordingly his poetry reminds us of the ocean, which adds to its own boundlessness contributions from all regions under heaven. Nor was it only in the department of imagination that his acquisitions were vast. He travelled over the whole field of knowledge as far as it had then been explored. His various philological attainments were used to put him in possession of the wisdom stored in all countries where the intellect had been cultivated. The natural philosophy, metaphysics, ethics, history, theology, and political science of his own and former times, were familiar to him. Never was there a more unconfined mind, and we would cite Milton as a practical example of the benefits of that universal culture of intellect which forms one distinction of our times, but which some dread as unfriendly to original thought. Let such remember that mind is in its own nature diffusive. Its object is the universe, which is strictly one, or bound together by infinite connections and correspondences; and accordingly its natural progress is from one to another field of thought; and wherever original power and creative genius exists, the mind, far from being distracted or oppressed by the variety of its acquisitions, will see more and more common bearings and hidden and beautiful analogies in all the objects of knowledge,-will see mutual light shed from truth to truth, and will compel, as with a kingly power, whatever it understands, to yield some tribute of proof, or illustration, or splendour, to whatever topic it should unfold.

"Milton's fame rests chiefly on his poetry, and to this we naturally give our first attention. By those who are accustomed to speak of poetry as light reading, Milton's eminence in this sphere may be considered only as giving him a high rank among the contributors to public amusement. Not so thought Milton. Of all God's gifts of intellect, he esteemed poetical genius the most transcendent. He esteemed it in himself as a kind of inspiration, and wrote his great works with something of the conscious dignity of a prophet. We agree with Milton in his estimate of poetry. It seems to us the divinest of all arts; or it is the breathing or expression of that principle or sentiment which is the deepest and sublimest in human nature; we mean of that thirst or aspiration to which no mind is wholly a stranger, for something purer and lovelier, something more powerful, lofty, and thrilling, than ordinary and real life affords. No doctrine is more common among Christians than that of man's immortality; but it is not so generally understood that the germs or principles of his whole future being are now wrapped up in his soul as the rudiments of the future plant in the seed. As a necessary result of this constitution, the soul, possessed and moved by these mighty though infant energies, is perpetually stretching beyond what is present and visible, struggling against the bounds of its earthly prison-house, and seeking relief and joy in imagination of unseen and ideal being. This view of our nature, which has never been fully developed, and which goes further towards explaining the contradictions of human life than all others, carries us to the very foundation and sources of poetry. He who cannot interpret, by his own consciousness, what we now have said, wants the true key to works of genius. He has not penetrated those sacred recesses of the soul, where poetry is born and nourished, and inhales immortal vigor, and wings herself for her heavenward flight. In an intellectual nature framed for progress and for higher modes of being. there must be creative energies, powers of original and ever-growing thought; and poetry is the form in which these energies are chiefly manifested. It is the glorious prerogative of this art, that it 'makes all things new' for the gratification of a divine instinct. It indeed finds its elements in what it actually sees and experiences in the world of matter and mind, but it combines and blends these into new forms and according to new affinities; breaks down, if we may so say, the distinctions and bounds of nature; imparts to material objects life, and sentiment, and emotion, and invests the mind with the powers and splendours of the outward creation; describes the surrounding universe in the colours which the passions throws over it, and depicts the mind in those modes of repose or agitation, of tenderness or sublime emotion, which manifest its thirst for a more powerful and joyful existence. To a man of a literal and prosaic character, the mind may seem lawless in these workings; but it observes higher laws than it transgresses, the laws of the immortal intellect; it is trying and developing its best faculties; and in the objects which it describes, or in the emotions which it awakens, anticipates those states of progressive power, splendour, beauty, and happiness for which it was created.

"We accordingly believe that poetry, far from injuring society, is one of the great instruments of its refinement and exaltation. It lifts the mind above ordinary life, gives it a respite from depressing cares, and awakens the consciousness of its affinity with what is pure and noble. In its legitimate and highest efforts it has the same tendency and aim with Christianity—that is, to spiritualize our nature. True, poetry has been made the instrument of vice, the pander of bad passions; but when genius thus stoops it dims its fires, and parts with much of its power; and even when poetry is enslaved to licentiousness or misanthropy, she cannot wholly forget her true vocation. Strains of pure feeling, touches of tenderness, images of innocent happiness, sympathies with suffering virtue, bursts of scorn or indignation at the hollowness of the world, passages true to our moral nature often escape in an immoral work, and show us how hard it is for a gifted spirit to divorce itself wholly from what is good. Poetry has a natural alliance with our best affections. delights in the beauty and sublimity of the outward creation and of the soul. It indeed pourtrays with terrible energy the excesses of the passions; but they are passions which show a mighty nature, which are full of power, which command awe, and excite a deep though shuddering sympathy.

We must now proceed to speak specially of "Paradise Lost," perhaps the noblest monument of human genius. The two first books, by universal consent, stands pre-eminent in sublimity. Hell and hell's king have a terrible harmony, and dilate into new grandeur and awfulness the longer we contemplate them. From one element, "solid and liquid fire," the poet has framed a world of horror and suffering, such as imagination had never traversed. But fiercer flames than those which encompass Satan burn in his own soul. Revenge, exasperated pride, consuming wrath, ambition though fallen, yet unconquered by the thunders of the Omnipotent, and grasping still at the empire of the universe,these form a picture more sublime and terrible than hell. Hell yields to the spirit which it imprisons. The intensity of its fires reveals the intenser passions and more vehement will of Satan, and the ruined archangel gathers into himself the sublimity of the scene which surrounds him. This forms the tremendous interest of these wonderful books. We see mind triumphant over the most terrible powers of nature. We see unatterable agony subdued by energy of soul. We have not indeed in Satan those barsts of passion which rive the soul as well as shatter the outward frame of Lear, but we have a depth of passion which only an archangel could manifest. The all-enduring, all defying pride of Satan, assuming so majestically hell's burning throne, and coveting the diadem, which scorches his thunder-blasted brow, is a creation requiring in its author almost the spiritual energy with which he invests the fallen scraph. Some have doubted whether the moral effect of such defineations of the storms and terrible workings of the soul is good; whether the interest felt in a spirit so transcendently evil as Satan favours our sympathies with virtue. But our interest fastens, in this and like cases, on what is not evil. We gaze on Satan with an awe not unmixed with mysterious pleasure, as on a miraculous manifestation of the power of mind. What chains us, as with a resistless spell, in such a character, is spiritual might made visible by the racking pains which it overpowers. There is something kindling and ennobling in the consciousness, however awakened, of the energy which resides in mind; and many a virtuous man has borrowed new strength from the force, constancy, and dauntless courage of evil agents.

Milton's description of Satan attests in various ways the power of his genius. Critics have often observed, that the great difficulty of his work was to reconcile the spiritual properties of his supernatural beings with the human modes of existence, which he was obliged to ascribe to them; and the difficulty is too great for any genius wholly to overcome, and we must acknowledge that our enthusiasm is in some parts of the poem checked by a feeling of incongruity between the spiritual agent and his sphere and mode of agency. But we are visited with no such chilling doubts and misgivings in the description of Satan in hell. Imagination has here achieved its highest triumph, in imparting a character of reality and truth to its most daring creations. That world of horrors, though material, is yet so remote from our ordinary nature, that a spiritual being, exiled from heaven, finds there an appropriate home. There is, too. an indefiniteness in the description of Satan's person which incites without shocking the imagination, and aids us to combine in our conception of him the massiness of a real form with the vagueness of spiritual existence. To the production of this effect much depends on the first impression given by the poet; for this is apt to follow us through the whole work; and here we think Milton eminently successful. The first glimpse of Satan is given us in the following lines, which, whilst too indefinite to provoke the scrutiny of the reason, fill the imagination of the reader with a form which can hardly be effaced:-

- "Thus Satan, talking to his nearest mate
 With head up-lift above the wave, and eyes
 That sparkling blazed, his other parts besides
 Prone on the flood, extending long and large,
 Lay floating many a rood, * * *
- Forthwith upright he rears from off the pool His mighty stature; on each hand the flames, Driven backward, slope their pointed spires, and roll'd In billows, leave i' th' midst a horrid vale."

We have more which we should gladly say of the delineation of Satan, especially of the glimpses which are now and then given of his deep anguish and despair, and of the touches of better feelings which are skilfully thrown into the dark picture, both suited and designed to blend with our admiration, dread, and abhorence, a measure of that sympathy and interest with which every living, thinking being ought to be regarded, and without which all other feelings tend to sin and pain. But there is another topic which we cannot leave untouched. From hell we flee to paradise—a region as lovely as hell is terrible, and which to those who do not know the universality of true genius, will appear doubly wonderful when considered as the creation of the same mind which had painted the infernal world.

Paradise and its inhabitants are in sweet accordance, and together form a scene of tranquil bliss, which caims and soothes, whilst it delights the imagination. Adam and Eve, just moulded by the hand, and quickened by the breath of God, reflect in their countenances and forms, as well. as minds, the intelligence, benignity, and happiness of their author Their new existence has the freshness and peacefulness of the dewy Their souls, unsated and untainted, find an innocent joy in the youthful creation, which spreads and smiles around them. Their matual leve is deep; for it is the love of young, unworn, unexhausted hearts, which meet in each other the only human objects on whom to pour forththeir fulness of affection; and still it is serene, for it is the love or happy beings who know not suffering even by name - whose innocence excludes not only the tumults, but the thought of jealousy and shame—who "imparadised in one another's arms," scarce dream of futurity, so blessed is their present being. We will not say that we envy our first parents, for we feel that there may be higher happiness than theirs—a happiness won through struggle with inward and outward foes -the happiness and power of moral victory-the happiness of disinterested sacrifices and wide-spread love—the happiness of boundless hope, and of "thoughts which wander through eternity." Still there are times when the spirit, oppressed with pain, worn with toil, tired of tumult, sick at the sight of guilt, wounded in its love, bafiled in its hope, and trembling in its faith, almost longs for the "wings of a dove, that it might fly away," and take refuge amidst the "shady bowers," the "vernal airs," the "roses without thorns," the quiet, the beauty, the leveliness of Eden. It is the contrast of this deep peace of paradise with the sterms of life which gives to the fourth and fifth books of this poem a charm so irresistible that not a few would sooner relinquish the two first beeks, with all their sublimity, than part with these. It has sometimes been said that the English language has no good pastoral poetry. We would ask in what age or country has the pastoral reed breathed such sweet strains as are borne to as on "the odoriferous wings of gentle gales" from Milton's Paradise?

We should not fulfil our duty were we not to say one word on what has been justly celebrated the harmony of Milton's versification. His numbers have the prime charm of expressiveness. They vary with, and answer to, the depth of tenderness, or sublimity of his conceptions, and hold intimate alliance with the soul. Like Michael Angelo, in whose hands the marble was said to be flexible, he bends our language, which foreigners reproach with hardness, into whatever forms the subject demands. All the treasures of sweet and solemn sounds are at his command. Words, harsh and discordant in the writings of less gifted men, flow through his poetry in a full stream of harmony. This power over language is not to be ascribed to Milton's musical ear. It belongs to the soul. It is a gift or exercise of genius, which has power to impress itself on whatever it touches, and finds or frames in sounds, motions, and material forms, correspondences and harmonies with its own fervid thoughts and feelings.

We close our remarks on Milton's poetry with observing, that it is characterized by seriousness. Great and various as are its merits, it does not discover all the variety of genius which we find in Shakspeare, whose imagination reveiled equally in regions of mirth, beauty and terro—now invoking spectres, now sporting with fairies, and now "ascending the highest heaven of invention." Milton was cast on times too solemn and eventful, was called to take part in transactions too perilous, and had too perpetual need of the presence of high thoughts and motives to indulge himself in light and gay creations, even had his genius been more flexible and sportive. But Milton's poetry, though habitually serious, is always healthful and bright, and vigorous. It has no gloom. He took no pleasure in drawing dark pictures of life; for he knew by experience that there is a power in the soul to transmute calamity into an occasion and nutriment of moral power and triumphant virtue. We find nowhere in his writings that whining sensibility and exaggeration of morbid feeling which makes so much of modern poetry effeminating. If he is not gay, he is not spirit-broken. His "L'Allegro" proves that he understood thoroughly the bright and joyous aspects of nature; and in his "Peuscroso," where he was tempted to accumulate images of gloom, we learn that the saddest views which he took of creation are such as inspire only pensive musings or lofty contemplation.

PARADISE LOST.

BOOK I.

ARGUMEMT.

THE FIRST BOOK proposes, first in brief, the whole subject, man's disobedience, and the loss thereupon of Paradise, wherein he was placed: then touches the prime cause of his fall, the serpent, or rather Satan in the serpent; who, revolting from God, and drawing to his side many regions of angels, was, by the command of God, driven out of heaven, with all his crew, into the great deep. Which action passed over, the Poem hastens into the midst of things, presenting Satan with his angels now falling into Hell, described here, not in the centre (for Heaven and Earth may be supposed as yet not made, certainly not yet accursed), but in a place of utter darkness, fitliest called Chaos: Here Satan, with his angels, lying on the burning lake, thunderstruck and astonished, after a certain space recovers, as from confusion, calls up him who next in order and dignity lay by him; they confer of their miserable fall; Satan awakens all his legions, who lay till then in the same manner confounded. They rise, their numbers, array of battle; their chief leaders named according to the idols known afterwards in Canaan and the countries adjoining. To these Satan directs his speech, comforts them with hope yet of regaining Heaven, but tells them lastly of a new world and a new kind of creature to be created according to an ancient prophecy, or report in Heaven; for that angels were long before this visible creation, was the opinion of many ancient Fathers. To find out the truth of this prophecy, and what to determine thereon, he refers to a full council. What his associates thence attempt. Pandemonium, the palace of Satan, rises, suddenly built out of the deep; the infernal peers there sit in council.

Or man's first disobedience, and the fruit Of that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste Brought death into the world, and all our woe, With loss of Eden, till one greater Man Restore us, and regain the blissful seat, Sing, heavenly Muse, that on the secret top Of Oreb, or of Sinai, didst inspire That shepherd, who first taught the chosen seed, In the beginning how the heavens and earth Rose out of chaos: or, if Sion hill Delight thee more, and Siloa's brook that flow'd Fast by the oracle of God, I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song, That with no middle flight intends to soar Above the Aonion mount, while it pursues Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme. And chiefly Thou, O Spirit, that dost prefer Before all temples the upright heart and pure, Instruct me, for Thou know'st, Thou from the first Wast present, and with mighty wings outspread, Dove-like, satst brooding on the vast abyss, And made it pregnant: what in me is dark Illumine; what is low raise and support; That to the height of this great argument I may assert eternal Providence, And justify the ways of God to men.

Say first, for Heaven hides nothing from thy view Nor the deep tract of Hell; say first, what cause Moved our grand parents, in that happy state, Favoured of Heaven so highly, to fall off From their Creator, and transgress his will For one restraint, lords of the world besides? Who first seduced them to that foul revolt? Th' infernal Serpent; he it was, whose guile, Stirr'd up with envy and revenge, deceived The mother of mankind, what time his pride Had cast him out from Heaven, with all his host Of rebel angels, by whose aid aspiring To set himself in glory above his peers, He trusted to have equalled the Most High, If he opposed; and, with ambitious aim Against the throne and monarchy of God Raised impious war in Heaven, and battle proud With vain attempt. Him the Almighty Power Hurled headlong flaming from the ethereal sky, With hideous ruin and combustion, down To bottomless perdition, there to dwell In adamantine chains and penal fire, Who durst defy the Omnipotent to arms

Nine times the space that measures day and night To mortal men, he with his horrid crew Lay vanguished, rolling in the fiery gulf, Confounded, though immortal: but his doom Reserved him to more wrath; for now the thought Both of lost happiness and lasting pain Torments him: round he throws his baleful eyes, That witnessed huge affliction and dismay Mixed with obdurate pride and steadfast hate: At once, as far as angels' ken, he views The dismal situation waste and wild; A dungeon horrible on all sides round As one great furnace flamed, yet from those flames' No light, but rather darkness visible Served only to discover sights of woe, Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace And rest can never dwell, hope never comes That comes to all; but torture without end Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed With ever-burning sulphur unconsumed: Such place eternal Justice had prepared For those rebellious, here their prison ordain'd In utter darkness, and their portion set As far removed from God and light of Heaven, As from the centre thrice to the utmost pole. Oh, how unlike the place from whence they fell! There the companions of his fall, o'erwhelm'd With floods and whirlwinds of tempestuous fire, He soon discerns, and weltering by his side One next himself in power, and next in crime, Long after known in Palestine, and named Beëlzebub. To whom the Arch-Enemy, And thence in Heaven called Satan, with bold words Breaking the horrid silence thus began.

"If thou beest he; but oh, how fallen! how changed From him, who in the happy realms of light. Clothed with transcendent brightness didst outshine. Myriads though bright! If he whom mutual league, United thoughts and counsels, equal hope And hazard in the glorious enterprise, Joined with me once, now misery hath joined In equal ruin: into what pit thou seest From what height fallen, so much the stronger proved He with his thunder: and till then who knew The force of those dire arms? yet not for those, Nor what the potent victor in his rage Can else inflict, do I repent or change, Though changed in outward lustre, that fix'd mind, And high disdain from sense of injured merit, That with the mightiest raised me to contend, And to the fierce contention brought along Innumerable force of spirits armed, That durst dislike his reign, and me preferring, His utmost power with adverse power opposed In dubious battle on the plains of Heaven, And shook his throne. What though the field be lost? All is not lost; the unconquerable will, And study of revenge, immortal hate, And courage never to submit or yield, And what is else not to be overcome; That glory never shall his wrath or might Extort from me. To bow and sue for grace With suppliant knee, and deify his power, Who from the terror of this arm so late Doubted his empire; that were low indeed, That were an ignominy and shame beneath This downfall; since by fate the strength of gods And this empyreal substance, cannot fail; Since, through experience of this great event, In arms not worse, in foresight much advanced, We may with more successful hope resolve To wage by force or guile eternal war, Irreconcilable to our grand foe, Who now triumphs, and in the excess of joy Sole reigning holds the tyranny of Heaven." So spake the apostate angel, though in pain, Vaunting aloud, but racked with deep despair:

And him thus answered soon his bold compeer. "O prince, O chief of many-thronéd powers, That led the embattled seraphim to war

Under thy conduct, and in dreadful deeds Fearless, endanger'd heaven's perpetual King, And put to proof his high supremacy, Whether upheld by strength, or chance, or fate; Too well I see and rue the dire event, That with sad overthrow and foul defeat Hath lost us Heaven, and all this mighty host In horrible destruction laid thus low, As far as gods and heavenly essences Can perish: for the mind and spirit remains Invincible, and vigour soon returns, Though all our glory extinct, and happy state Here swallow'd up in endless misery. But what if he our Conqueror (whom I now Of force believe almighty, since no less Than such could have o'erpower'd such force as ours) Have left us this our spirit and strength entire, Strongly to suffer and support our pains, That we may so suffice his vengeful ire, Or do him mightier service as his thralls By right of war, whate'er his business be, Here in the heart of Hell to work in fire, Or do his errands in the gloomy deep; What can it then avail, though yet we feel Strength undiminished, or eternal being To undergo eternal punishment?" Whereto with speedy words the arch-fiend replied.

"Fall'n cherub! to be weak is miserable
Doing or suffering: but of this be sure,
To do aught good never will be our task,
But ever to do ill our sole delight,
As being the contrary to his high will
Whom we resist. If then his providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil;
Which oft-times may succeed, so as perhaps
Shall grieve Him, if I fail not, and disturb
His inmost counsels from their destined aim.
But see! the angry Victor hath recalled

His ministers of vengeance and pursuit Back to the gates of heaven: the sulphurous hail Shot after us in storm, o'erblown hath laid The fiery surge, that from the precipice Of heaven received us falling; and the thunder, Wing'd with red lightning and impetuous rage, Perhaps has spent his shafts, and ceases now To bellow through the vast and boundless deep Let us not slip the occasion, whether scorn Or satiate fury yield it from our Foe. Seest thou you dreary plain, forlorn and wild, The seat of desolation, void of light, Save what the glimmering of these livid flames Casts pale and dreadful? Thither let us tend From off the tossing of these fiery waves, There rest, if any rest can harbour there, And re-assembling our afflicted powers, Consult how we may henceforth most offend Our enemy; our own loss how repair; How overcome this dire calamity; What reinforcement we may gain from hope; If not, what resolution from despair."

Thus Satan, talking to his nearest mate, With head up-lift above the wave, and eyes That sparkling blazed; his other parts besides Prone on the flood, extended long and large, Lay floating many a rood: in bulk as huge As whom the fables name of monstrous size, Titanian, or earth-born, that warred on Jove, Briareos, or Typhon, whom the den By ancient Tarsus held, or that sea-beast Leviathan, which God of all his works Created hugest that swim the ocean stream: Him, haply slumbering on the Norway foam, The pilot of some small night-foundered skiff Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell, With fixed anchor in his scaly rind Moors by his side under the lea, while night Invests the sea, and wished morn delays: So stretch'd out huge in length the arch-fiend lay

Chained on the burning lake, nor ever thence Had risen or heaved his head, but that the will And high permission of all-ruling Heaven Left him at large to his own dark designs, That with reiterated crimes he might Heap on himself damnation, while he sought Evil to others; and enraged might see How all his malice served but to bring forth Infinite goodness, grace and mercy shown On man by him seduced; but on himself Treble confusion, wrath and vengeance poured. Forthwith upright he rears, from off the pool, His mighty stature; on each hand the flames, Driven backward, slope their pointing spires, and rolled In billows, leave i' the midst a horrid vale. Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air That felt unusual weight, till on dry land ·He lights, if it were land that ever burned With solid, as the lake with liquid fire; And such appear'd in hue, as when the force Of subterranean wind transports a hill Torn from Pelorus, or the shattered side Of thundering Ætna, whose combustible And fuel'd entrails thence conceiving fire, Sublimed with mineral fury, aid the winds, And leave a singéd bottom, all involved With stench and smoke: such resting found the sole Of unblest feet. Him followed his next mate, Both glorying to have 'scaped the Stygian flood As gods, and by their own recovered strength. Not by the sufferance of supernal Power. "Is this the region, this the soil, the clime," Said then the lost archangel, "this the seat That we must change for Heaven, this mournful gloom For that celestial light? Be it so, since he, Who now is Sovran, can dispose and bid What shall be right: farthest from him is best, Whom reason hath equalled, force hath made supreme Above his equals. Farewell happy fields

Where joy for ever dwells! Hail horrors! hail Infernal world, and thou, profoundest Hell, Receive thy new possessor! one who brings A mind not to be changed by place or time: The mind is its own place, and in itself Can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven What matter where, if I be still the same, And what I should be, all but less than he Whom thunder hath made greater? Here at least We shall be free; the Almighty hath not built Here for his envy, will not drive us hence: Here we may reign secure, and, in my choice, To reign is worth ambition though in Hell: Better to reign in Hell than serve in Heaven. But wherefore let we then our faithful friends. The associates and copartners of our loss, Lie thus astonished on the oblivious pool, And call them not to share with us their part In this unhappy mansion, or once more, With rallied arms, to try what may be yet Regained in Heaven, or what more lost in Hell?"

So Satan spake, and him Beëlzebub
Thus answer'd. "Leader of those armies bright,
Which but the Omnipotent none could have foiled,
If once they hear that voice, their liveliest pledge
Of hope in fears and dangers, heard so oft
In worse extremes, and on the perilous edge
Of battle when it raged, in all assaults
Their surest signal, they will soon resume
New courage and revive, though now they lie
Grovelling and prostrate on yon lake of fire,
As we erewhile, astounded and amazed:
No wonder, fallen such a pernicious height."

He scarce had ceased when the superior fiend Was moving toward the shore; his ponderous shield, Ethereal temper, massy, large, and round, Behind him cast; the broad circumference Hung on his shoulders like the moon, whose orb Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views At evening from the top of Fesolé,

Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands, Rivers, or mountains in her spotty globe. His spear, to equal which the tallest pine Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast On some great ammiral, were but a wand, He walk'd with, to support uneasy steps Over the burning marl, not like those steps On heaven's azure, and the torrid clime Smote on him sore besides, vaulted with fire, Nathless he so endured, till on the beach Of that inflaméd sea he stood, and call'd His legions, angel forms, who lay entranced Thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks In Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades High over-arched imbower; or scattered sedge Afloat, when with fierce winds Orion armed Hath vexed the Red Sea coast, whose waves o'erthrew Busiris and his Memphian chivalry, While with perfidious hatred they pursued The sojourners of Goshen, who beheld From the safe shore their floating carcasses And broken chariot wheels: so thick bestrewn, Abject and lost, lay these, covering the flood, Under amazement of their hideous change. He called so loud, that all the hollow deep Of Hell resounded. "Princes, potentates, Warriors, the flower of Heaven, once yours, now lost, If such astonishment as this can seize Eternal spirits; or have ye chosen this place After the toil of battle to repose Your wearied virtue, for the ease you find To slumber here, as in the vales of Heaven? Or in this abject posture have ye sworn To adore the Conqueror? who now beholds Cherub and seraph rolling in the flood With scatter'd arms and ensigns; till anon His swift pursuers from Heaven gates discern The advantage, and descending tread us down Thus drooping, or with linked thunderbolts Transfix us to the bottom of this gulf.

Awake, arise, or be for ever fallen!" They heard, and were abash'd, and up they sprung Upon the wing, as when men, wont to watch On duty, sleeping found by whom they dread, Rouse and bestir themselves ere well awake. Nor did they not perceive the evil plight In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel; Yet to their general's voice they soon obeyed, Innumerable. As when the potent rod Of Amram's son, in Egypt's evil day, Waved round the coast, up called a pitchy cloud Of locusts, warping on the eastern wind, That o'er the realm of impious Pharaoh hung Like night, and darkened all the land of Nile: So numberless were those bad angels seen Hovering on wing under the cope of Hell 'Twixt upper, nether, and surrounding fires; Till, at a signal given, the uplifted spear Of their great sultan waving to direct Their course, in even balance down they light On the firm brimstone, and fill all the plain; A multitude, like which the populous North Poured never from her frozen loins, to pass Rhene or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons Came like a deluge on the south, and spread Beneath Gibraltar to the Lybian sands. Forthwith from every squadron and each band The heads and leaders thither haste where stood Their great commander; godlike shapes and forms Excelling human, princely dignities, And powers that erst in Heaven sat on thrones. Though of their names in heavenly records now Be no memorial, blotted out and rased By their rebellion from the book of life. Nor had they yet among the sons of Eve Got them new names; till, wandering o'er the earth. Through God's high sufferance, for the trial of man. By falsities and lies the greater part Of mankind they corrupted to forsake

God their Creator, and the invisible

Glory of Him that made them to transform
Oft to the image of a brute, adorned
With gay religions full of pomp and gold,
And devils to adore for deities,
Then were they known to men by various names,
And various idols through the heathen world.

Say, Muse, their names then known, who first, who last,

Roused from the slumber, on that fiery couch, At their great emperor's call, as next in worth Came singly where he stood on the bare strand, While the promiscuous crowd stood vet aloof. The chief were those who from the pit of Hell, Roaming to seek their prey on earth, durst fix Their seats long after next the seat of God, Their altars by his altar, gods adored Among the nations round, and durst abide Jehovah thundering out of Sion, through Between the cherubin; yea, often placed Within his sanctuary itself their shrines. Abominations; and with cursed things His holy rites and solemn feasts profaned, And with their darkness durst affront his light. First Moloch, horrid king besmeared with blood Of human sacrifice, and parents' tears, Though for the noise of drums and timbrels loud Their children's cries unheard, that passed through fire To his grim idol. Him the Ammonite Worshipped in Rabba and her watery plain, In Argob and in Basan, to the stream Of utmost Arnon. Nor content with such Audacious neighbourhood, the wisest heart Of Solomon he led by fraud to build His temple right against the temple of God On that opprobrious hill, and made his grove The pleasant vale of Hinnom, Tophet thence And black Gehenna called, the type of Hell. Next Chemos, the obscene dread of Moab's sons From Aroar to Nebo, and the wild Of southmost Abarim; in Hesebon

And Horonaim, Seon's realm, beyond The flowery dale of Sibma clad with vines, And Eleälé to the asphaltic pool. Peor his other name, when he enticed Israel in Sittim on their march from Nile To do him wanton rites, which cost them woe. Yet thence his lustful orgies he enlarged Even to that hill of scandal, by the grove Of Moloch homicide, lust hard by hate; Till good Josiah drove them thence to Hell. With these came they, who from the bordering flood Of old Euphrates to the brook that parts Egypt from Syrian ground, had general names Of Baälim and Ashtaroth, those male, These feminine. For spirits when they please Can either sex assume, or both; so soft And uncompounded is their essence pure, Not tied or manacled with joint or limb, Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones, Like cumbrous flesh; but in what shape they choose, Dilated or condensed, bright or obscure, Can execute their airy purposes, And works of love or enmity fulfil. For those the race of Israel oft forsook Their living Strength, and unfrequented left His righteous altar, bowing lowly down To bestial gods; for which their heads as low Bowed down in battle, sunk before the spear Of despicable foes. With these in troop Came Astoreth, whom the Phænicians called Astarté, Queen of Heaven, with crescent horns; To whose bright image nightly by the moon Sidonian virgins paid their vows and songs, In Sion also not unsung, where stood Her temple on the offensive mountain, built By that uxorious king, whose heart, though large, Beguiled by fair idolatresses, fell To idols foul. Thammuz came next behind, Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured The Syrian damsels to lament his fate

In amorous ditties all a summer's day, While smooth Adonis from his native rock Ran purple to the sea, supposed with blood Of Thammuz yearly wounded: the love-tale Infected Sion's daughters with like heat, Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch Ezekiel saw, when by the vision led His eye surveyed the dark idolatries Of alienated Judah. Next came one Who mourned in earnest, when the captive ark Maimed his brute image head and hands lopp'd off In his own temple, on the grunsel edge, Where he fell flat, and shamed his worshippers; Dagon his name, sea-monster, upward man And downward fish: yet had his temple high Reared in Azotus, dreaded through the coast Of Palestine, in Gath and Ascalon, And Accaron and Gaza's frontier bounds. Him followed Rimmon, whose delightful seat Was fair Damascus, on the fertile banks Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams. He also 'gainst the house of God was bold: A leper once he lost, and gained a king; Ahaz his sottish conqueror, whom he drew God's altar to disparage and displace, For one of Syrian mode, whereon to burn His odious offerings, and adore the gods Whom he had vanquished. After these appeared A crew who, under names of old renown, Osiris, Isis, Orus, and their train, With monstrous shapes and sorceries abused Fanatic Egypt and her priests, to seek Their wandering gods disguised in brutish forms Rather than human. Nor did Israel 'scape The infection, when their borrowed gold composed The calf in Oreb; and the rebel king Doubled that sin in Bethel and in Dan. Likening his Maker to the grazed ox; Jehovah, who in one night, when he pass'd From Egypt marching, equalled with one stroke

Both her first-born and all her bleating gods. Belial came last, than whom a spirit more lewd Fell not from Heaven, or more gross to love Vice for itself: to him no temple stood Or altar smoked: yet who more oft than he In temples and at altars, when the priest Turns atheist, as did Eli's sons, who filled With lust and violence the house of God? In courts and palaces he also reigns, And in luxurious cities, where the noise Of riot ascends above their loftiest towers, And injury and outrage: and when night Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine. Witness the streets of Sodom, and that night In Gibeah, when the hospital door Exposed a matron, to avoid worse rape. These were the prime in order and in might; The rest were long to tell, though far renowned, The Ionian gods, of Javan's issue; held Gods, yet confessed later than Heaven and Earth, Their boasted parents; Titan, heaven's first-born. With his enormous brood, and birthright seized By younger Saturn; he from mightier Jove, His own and Rhea's son, like measure found; So Jove usurping reign'd; these first in Crete And Ida known, thence on the snowy top Of cold Olympus ruled the middle air, Their highest Heaven; or on the Delphian cliff, Or in Dodona, and through all the bounds Of Doric land; or who with Saturn old Fled over Adria to the Hesperian fields, And o'er the Celtic roamed the utmost isles.

All these and more came flocking; but with looks Downcast and damp, yet such wherein appeared Obscure some glimpse of joy, to have found their chief Not in despair, to have found themselves not lost In loss itself: which on his countenance cast Like doubtful hue; but he his wonted pride Soon recollecting, with high words, that bore

Semblance of worth not substance, gently raised Their fainting courage, and dispelled their fears. Then straight commands that at the warlike sound Of trumpets loud and clarions be upreared His mighty standard; that proud honour claimed Azazel as his right, a cherub tall, Who forthwith from the glittering staff unfurl'd The imperial ensign; which, full high advanced. Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind. With gems and golden lustre rich emblazed. Seraphic arms and trophies; all the while Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds: At which the universal host up sent A shout, that tore Hell's concave, and beyond Frighted the reign of Chaos and old Night. All in a moment through the gloom were seen Ten thousand banners rise into the air With orient colours waving; with them rose A forest huge of spears, and thronging helms Appeared, and serried shields in thick array Of depth immeasurable; anon they move In perfect phalanx to the Dorian mood Of flutes and soft recorders; such as raised To height of noblest temper heroes old Arming to battle, and instead of rage Deliberate valour breathed, firm and unmoved With dread of death to flight or foul retreat; Nor wanting power to mitigate and 'suage With solemn touches troubled thoughts, and chase Auguish and doubt, and fear, and sorrow, and pair From mortal or immortal minds. Thus they, Breathing united force, with fixed thought, Mov'd on in silence to soft pipes, that charmed Their painful steps o'er the burnt soil; and now Advanced in view they stand, a horrid front Of dreadful length and dazzling arms, in guise Of warriors old with ordered spear and shield, Awaiting what command their mighty chief Had to impose. He through the armed files Darts his experienced eye, and soon traverse

The whole battalion views, their order due, Their visages and stature as of gods; Their number last he sums. And now his heart Distends with pride, and hardening in his strength Glories; for never since created man, Met such embodied force, as, named with these, Could merit more than that small infantry Warred on by cranes; though all the giant brood Of Phlegra with the heroic race were joined That fought at Thebes and Ilium, on each side Mixed with auxiliar gods; and what resounds In fable or romance of Uther's son Begirt with British and Armoric knights, And all who since, baptized or infidel, Jousted in Aspramont or Montalban, Damasco, or Morocco, or Trebisond, Or whom Biserta sent from Afric shore, When Charlemain with all his peerage fell By Fontarabia. Thus far these beyond Compare of mortal prowess, yet observed Their dread commander; he, above the rest In shape and gesture proudly eminent Stood like a tower; his form had yet not lost All its original brightness, nor appeared Less than archangel ruined, and the excess Of glory obscured; as when the sun new risen Looks through the horizontal misty air, Shorn of his beams, or from behind the moon, In dim eclipse disastrous twilight sheds On half the nations, and with fear of change Perplexes monarchs. Darkened so, yet shone Above them all the archangel; but his face Deep scars of thunder had entrenched, and car Sat on his faded cheek, but under brows Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride Waiting revenge; cruel his eyes, but cast Signs of remorse and passion to behold The fellows of his crime, the followers rather (Far other once beheld in bliss) condemned For ever now to have their lot in pain,

Millions of spirits for his fault amerced Of Heaven, and from eternal splendours flung For his revolt, yet faithful how they stood, Their glory wither'd: as when Heaven's fire Hath scathed the forest oaks, or mountain pines, With singéd top their stately growth, though bare Stands on the blasted heath. He now prepared To speak; whereat their doubled ranks they bend From wing to wing, and half enclose him round With all his peers: attention held them mute. Thrice he essayed, and thrice, in spite of scorn, Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth: at last Words interwove with sighs found out their way.

"O myriads of immortal spirits! O powers Matchless but with the Almighty; and that strife Was not inglorious, though the event was dire, As this place testifies, and this dire change, Hateful to utter: but what power of mind Foreseeing or presaging, from the depth Of knowledge past or present, could have feared. How such united force of gods, how such As stood like these, could ever know repulse? For who can yet believe, though after loss, That all these puissant legions, whose exile Hath emptied Heaven, shall fail to reascend Self-raised, and repossess their native seat? For me, be witness all the host of Heaven, If counsels different, or dangers shunned By me, have lost our hopes. But He who reigns Monarch in Heaven, till then as one secure Sat on his throne, upheld by old repute, Consent or custom, and his regal state Put forth at full, but still his strength concealed, Which tempted our attempt, and wrought our fall. Henceforth his might we know, and know our own So as not either to provoke, or dread New war, provoked; our better part remains To work in close design, by fraud or guile, What force affected not: that he no less At length from us may find, who overcomes

By force, hath overcome but half his foe. Space may produce new worlds; whereof to rise There went a fame in Heaven that he ere long Intended to create, and therein plant A generation, whom his choice regard Should favor equal to the sons of Heaven: Thither, if but to pry, shall be perhaps Our first eruption: thither or elsewhere; For this infernal pit shall never hold Celestial spirits in bondage, nor the abyss Long under darkness cover. But these thoughts Full counsel must mature; peace is despaired. For who can think submission? War, then, war, Open or understood, must be resolved." • He spake; and to confirm his words, outflew Millions of flaming swords, drawn from the thighs Of mighty cherubin; the sudden blaze Far round illumined Hell; highly they raged Against the highest, and fierce with grasped arms Clashed on their sounding shields the din of war, Hurling defiance toward the vault of Heaven. There stood a hill not far, whose grisly top Belched fire and rolling smoke; the rest entire Shone with a glossy scurf, undoubted sign That in his womb was hid metallic ore, The work of sulphur. Thither, winged with speed. A numerous brigade hastened: as when bands Of pioneers with spade and pickaxe armed Forerun the royal camp, to trench a field, Or cast a rampart. Mammon led them on, Mammon, the least erected spirit that fell From Heaven, or even in Heaven his looks and thoughts Were always downward bent, admiring more The riches of Heaven's pavement, trodden gold, Than aught, divine or holy, else enjoyed In vision beatific: by him first Men also, and by his suggestion taught, Ransacked the centre, and with impious hands Rifled the bowels of their mother earth For treasures better hid. Soon had his crew

Opened into the hill a spacious wound, And digged out ribs of gold. Let none idmire That riches grow in Hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. And here let those, Who boast in mortal things, and wondering tell Of Babel and the works of Memphian kings, Learn how their greatest monuments of fame And strength and art are easily outdone By spirits reprobate, and in an hour What in an age they with incessant toil And hands innumerable scarce perform. Nigh on the plain in many cells prepared, That underneath had veins of liquid fire Sluiced from the lake, a second multitude With wondrous art founded the massy ore, Severing each kind, and scummed the bullion dross: A third as soon had formed within the ground A various mould, and from the boiling cells By strange conveyance filled each hollow nook, As in an organ from one blast of wind To many a row of pipes the sound-board breathes. Anon out of the earth a fabric huge Rose like an exhalation, with the sound Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet, Built like a temple, where pilasters round Were set, and Doric pillars overlaid With golden architrave; nor did there want Cornice or frieze, with bossy sculptures graven; The roof was fretted gold. Not Babylon, Nor great Alcairo such magnificence Equalled in all their glories, to inshrine Belus or Serapis their gods, or seat Their kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove In wealth and luxury. The ascending pile Stood fixed her stately height, and straight the doors Opening their brazen folds discover wide Within, her ample spaces, o'er the smooth And level pavement: from the archéd roof, Pendent by subtle magic nruny a row Of starry lamps and blazing cressets fed

With naphtha and asphaltus yielded light As from a sky. The hasty multitude Admiring entered; and the work some praise, And some the architect: his hand was known In heaven by many a towered structure high, Where sceptred angels held their residence, And sat as princes, whom the Supreme King Exalted to such power, and gave to rule, Each in his hierarchy, the orders bright. Nor was his name unheard or unadored In ancient Greece; and in Ausonian land Men called him Mulciber; and how he fell From Heaven, they fabled, thrown by angry Jove Sheer o'er the crystal battlements; from morn To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve, A summer's day; and with the setting sun Dropped from the zenith like a falling star, On Lemnos the Ægean isle; thus they relate, Erring; for he with this rebellious rout Fell long before; nor aught availed him now To have built in Heaven high towers; nor did he 'scape By all his engines, but was headlong sent With his industrious crew to build in Hell.

Meanwhile the wingéd heralds by command Of sovereign power, with awful ceremony And trumpet's sound throughout the host proclaim A solemn council forthwith to be held At Pandemonium, the high capital Of Satan and his peers: their summons called From every band and squared regiment By place or choice the worthiest; they anon With hundreds and with thousands trooping came Attended: all excess was thronged; the gates And porches wide, but chief the spacious hall (Though like a covered field, where champions bold Wont ride in armed, and at the Soldan's chair Defied the best of Panim chivalry To mortal combat, or career with lance), Thick swarm'd, both on the ground and in the air Brushed with the hiss of rustling wings. As bees

In spring time, when the sun with Taurus rides, Pour forth their populous youth about the hive In clusters; they among fresh dews and flowers Fly to and fro, or on the smoothed plank, The suburb of their straw-built citadel, New rubbed with balm, expatiate and confer Their state affairs. So thick the airy crowd Swarm'd and were straitened; till, the signal given, Behold a wonder! they but now who seemed In bigness to surpass earth's giant sons Now less than smallest dwarfs, in narrow room Throng numberless, like that pygmean race Beyond the Indian mount, or fairy elves, Whose midnight revels by a forest side Or fountain some belated peasant sees, Or dreams he sees, while overhead the moon Sits arbitress, and nearer to the earth Wheels her pale course; they, on their mirth and dance Intent, with jocund music charm his ear; At once with joy and fear his heart rebounds. Thus incorporeal spirits to smallest forms Reduced their shapes immense, and were at large, Though without number still amidst the hall Of that infernal court. But far within, And in their own dimensions like themselves, The great seraphic lords and cherubim In close recess and secret conclave sat; A thousand demi gods on golden seats Frequent and full. After short silence then, And summons read, the great consult began.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

The consultation begun, Satan debates whether another battle be to be hazarded for the recovery of Heaven: some advise it, others dissuade: a third proposal is preferred, mentioned before by Satan, to search the truth of that prophecy or tradition in Heaven concerning another world, and another kind of creature equal or not much inferior to themselves, about this time to be created: their doubt who should be sent on this difficult search. Satan their chief undertakes alone the voyage, is honoured and applauded. The council thus ended, the rest betake them several ways, and to several employments, as their inclinations lead them, to entertain the time till Satan return. He passes on his journey to Hell-gates: finds them shut, and who sat there to guard them, by whom at length they are opened, and discover to him the great gulf between Hell and Heaven; with what difficulty he passes through, directed by Chaos, the power of that place, to the sight of this new world which he sought.

High on a throne of a royal state, which far Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind, Or where the gorgeous East, with richest hand, Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold, Satan exalted sat, by merit raised To that bad eminence: and from despair Thus high uplifted beyond hope, aspires Beyond thus high, insatiate to pursue Vain war with heaven, and, by success untaught His proud imaginations thus display'd:

"Powers and dominions, deities of heaven
For since no deep within her gulf can hold
Immortal vigour, though oppressed and fallen,
I give not heaven for lost. From this descent
Celestial virtues rising, will appear
More glorious and more dread than from no fall,
And trust themselves to fear no second fate.

Me, though just right, and the fix'd laws of Heaven, Did first create your leader, next, free choice, With what besides, in counsel or in fight, Hath been achieved of merit, yet this loss, Thus far at least recover'd, hath much more Establish'd in a safe unenvied throne Yielded with full consent. The happier state In Heaven, which follows dignity, might draw Envy from each inferior; but who here Will envy whom the highest place exposes Foremost to stand against the Thunderer's aim Your bulwark, and condemns to greatest share Of endless pain? Where there is then no good For which to strive, no strife can grow up there From faction; for none sure will claim in Hell Precedence; none, whose portion is so small Of present pain, that with ambitious mind Will covet more. With this advantage then To union, and firm faith, and firm accord, More than can be in heaven, we now return To claim our just inheritance of old, Surer to prosper than prosperity Could have assured us; and, by what best way, Whether of open war, or covert guile, We now debate: who can advise, may speak."

He ceased; and next him Moloch, sceptred king, Stood up, the strongest and the fiercest spirit, That fought in Heaven, now fiercer by despair: His trust was with the Eternal to be deem'd Equal in strength, and rather than be less Cared not to be at all; with that care lost Went all his fear: of God, or Hell, or worse, He reck'd not, and these words thereafter spake.

"My sentence is for open war: of wiles,
More inexpert, I boast not: them let those
Contrive who need, or when they need, not now.
For, while they sit contriving, shall the rest,
Millions that stand in arms, and longing wait
The signal to ascend, sit lingering here
Heaven's fugitives, and for their dwelling-place

Accept this dark opprobrious den of shame, The prison of his tyranny, who reigns By our delay? No! let us rather choose, Arm'd with Hell's flames and fury, all at once, O'er Heaven's high towers to force resistless way Turning our tortures into horrid arms Against the torturer; when, to meet the noise Of his almighty engine he shall hear Infernal thunder, and for lightning see Black fire and horror shot with equal rage Among his angels; and his throne itself, Mix'd with Tartarean sulphur, and strange fire, His own invented torments. But perhaps, The way seems difficult and steep to scale With upright wing against a higher foe. Let such bethink them, if the sleepy drench Of that forgetful lake benumn not still, That in our proper motion we ascend Up to our native seat: descent and fall To us is adverse. Who but felt of late, When the fierce foe hung on our broken rear Insulting, and pursued us through the deep, With what compulsion and laborious flight We sunk thus low? The ascent is easy then; The event is fear'd: should we again provoke Our stronger, some worse way his wrath may find To our destruction; if there be in hell Fear to be worse destroyed: what can be worse Than to dwell here, driven out from bliss, condemn'd In this abhorréd deep to utter woe; Where pain of unextinguishable fire Must exercise us without hope of end, The vassals of his anger, when the scourge Inexorable, and the torturing hour, Calls us to penance? more destroy'd than thus, We should be quite abolish'd and expire. What fear we, then? what doubt we to incense His utmost ire? which, to the height enraged, Will either quite consume us, and reduce To nothing this essential (happier far

Than miserable to have eternal being):
Or, if our substance be indeed divine,
And cannot cease to be, we are at worst
On this side nothing; and by proof we feel
Our power sufficient to disturb his heaven,
And with perpetual inroads to alarm,
Though inaccessible, his fatal throne:
Which, if not victory, is yet revenge"

He ended, frowning, and his look denounced Desperate revenge, and battle dangerous To less than gods. On the other side uprose Belial, in act more graceful and humane; A fairer person lost not Heaven; he seem'd For dignity composed, and high exploit: But all was false and hollow; though his tongue Dropp'd manna, and could make the worst appear The better reason, to perplex and dash Maturest counsels; for his thoughts were low; To vice industrious, but to nobler deeds Timorous and slothful; yet he pleased the ear, And with persuasive accent thus began:

"I should be much for open war, O peers, As not behind in hate; if what was urged Main reason to persuade immediate war, Did not dissuade me most, and seem to cast Ominous conjecture on the whole success: When he, who most excels in fact of arms, In what he counsels, and in what excels Mistrustful, grounds his courage on despair And utter dissolution, as the scope Of all his aim, after some dire revenge. First, what revenge? The towers of heaven are fill'd With arméd watch, that render all access Impregnable; oft on the bordering deep Encamp their legions, or, with obscure wing Scout far and wide into the realm of night, Scorning surprise. Or could we break our way By force, and at our heels all Hell should rise With blackest insurrection, to confound Heaven's purest light; yet our great enemy

All incorruptible would on his throne Sit unpolluted, and the ethereal mould, Incapable of stain would soon expel Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire Victorious. Thus repulsed, our final hope Is flat despair; we must exasperate The Almighty Victor to spend all His rage, And that must end us; that must be our cure, To be no more. Sad cure! for who would lose, Though full of pain, this intellectual being, Those thoughts that wander through eternity. To perish rather, swallow'd up and lost In the wide womb of uncreated night, Devoid of sense and motion? And who knows. Let this be good, whether our angry foe Can give it, or will ever? how he can, Is doubtful: that he never will, is sure. Will he, so wise, let loose at once his ire, Belike through impotence, or unaware, To give his enemies their wish, and end Them in his anger, whom his anger saves To punish endless? Wherefore cease we then? Say they who counsel war: we are decreed. Reserved, and destined to eternal woe; Whatever doing, what can we suffer more, What can we suffer worse? Is this then worst, Thus fitting, thus consulting, thus in arms? What when we fled amain, pursued and struck With Heaven's afflicting thunder, and besought The deep to shelter us? This Hell then seem'd A refuge from those wounds: or when we lay Chain'd on the burning lake? That sure was worse. What if the breath that kindled those grim fires. Awaked should blow them into sevenfold rage, And plunge us in the flames? or, from above, Should intermitted vengeance arm again His red right hand to plague us? what if all Her stores were open'd, and this firmament Of Hell should spout her cataracts of fire, Impendent horrors, threatening hideous fall

One day upon our heads; while we, perhaps, Designing or exhorting glorious war, Caught in a fiery tempest, shall be hurl'd Each on his rock transfix'd, the sport and prey Of racking whirlwinds: or for ever sunk Under you boiling ocean, wrapp'd in chains; There to converse with everlasting groans, Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved, Ages of hopeless end? this would be worse. War, therefore, open or concealed alike My voice dissuades; for what can force or guile With him, or who deceive his mind, whose eve Views all things at one view? He from Heaven's height All these our motions vain sees and derides; Not more almighty to resist our might Than wise to frustrate all our plots and wiles. Shall we then live thus vile, the race of Heaven Thus trampled, thus expelled to suffer here Chains and these torments? Better these than worse By my advice; since fate inevitable Subdues us, and omnipotent decree, The Victor's will. To suffer, as to do, Our strength is equal, nor the law unjust That so ordains: this was at first resolved If we were wise, against so great a foe Contending, and so doubtful what might fall. I laugh, when those who at the spear are bold And venturous, if that fail them, shrink and fear What yet they know must follow, to endure Exile, or ignominy, or bonds, or pain, The sentence of their conqueror; this is now Our doom; which if we can sustain and bear, Our supreme foe in time may much remit His anger; and perhaps thus far removed Not mind us not offending, satisfied With what is punished; whence these raging fires Will slacken, if his breath stir not their flames. Our purer essence then will overcome Their noxious vapour; or inured not feel; Or, changed at length and to the place conform'd

In temper and in nature, will receive
Familiar the fierce heat, and void of pain;
This horror will grow mild, this darkness light;
Besides what hope the never-ending flight
Of future days may bring, what chance, what change
Worth waiting, since our present lot appears
For happy though but ill, for ill not worst,
If we procure not to ourselves more woe."

Thus Belial, with words clothed in reason's garb, Counseled ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth, Not peace: And after him thus Mammon spake.

"Either to disenthrone the King of Heaven We war, if war be best, or to regain Our own right lost: him to unthrone we then May hope, when everlasting Fate shall yield To fickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife: The former vain to hope argues as vain The latter: for what place can be for us Within Heaven's bound, unless Heaven's Lord supreme We overpower? Suppose he should relent, And publish grace to all on promise made Of new subjection; with what eyes could we Stand in his presence humble, and receive Strict laws imposed, to celebrate his throne With warbled hymns, and to his Godhead sing Forced hallelujahs; while he lordly sits Our envied sovereign, and his altar breathes Ambrosial odours and ambrosial flowers, Our servile offerings? This must be our task In Heaven, this our delight; how wearisome Eternity so spent in worship paid To whom we hate! Let us not then pursue By force impossible, by leave obtained Unacceptable, though in Heaven, our state Of splendid vassalage; but rather seek Our own good from ourselves, and from our own Live to ourselves, though in this vast recess, Free, and to none accountable, preferring Hard liberty before the easy yoke Of servile pomp. Our greatness will appear

Then most conspicuous, when great things of small. Useful of hurtful, prosperous of adverse We can create; and in what place soe'er Thrive under evil, and work ease out of pain Through labour and endurance. This deep world Of darkness do we dread? How oft amidst Thick clouds and dark doth heaven's all-ruling Sire Choose to reside, his glory unobscured, And with the majesty of darkness round Covers his throne; from whence deep thunders roar Mustering their rage, and Heaven resembles Hell? As he our darkness, cannot we his light Imitate when we please? This desert soil Wants not her hidden lustre, gems and gold; Nor want we skill or art, from whence to raise Magnificence; and what can heaven show more? Our torments also may in length of time Become our elements; these piercing fires As soft as now severe, our temper changed Into their temper; which must needs remove The sensible of pain. All things invite To peaceful counsels, and the settled state Of order, how in safety best we may Compose our present evils, with regard Of what we are, and where, dismissing quite All thoughts of war. Ye have what I advise." • He scarce had finish'd, when such murmur fill'd The assembly as when hollow rocks retain The sound of blustering winds, which all night long Had roused the sea, now with hoarse cadence lull Seafaring men o'erwatch'd, whose bark by chance Or pinnace anchors in a craggy bay After the tempest; such applause was heard As Mammon ended, and his sentence pleased, Advising peace; for such another field They dreaded worse than Hell: so much the fear Of thunder and the sword of Michael Wrought still within them; and no less desire To found this nether empire, which might rise By policy, and long process of time,

In emulation opposite to Heaven. Which when Beëlzebub perceived, than whom Satan except, none higher sat, with grave Aspéct he rose, and in his rising seem'd A pillar of state; deep on his front engraven Deliberation sat, and public care; And princely counsel in his face yet shone, Majestic, though in ruin; sage he stood With Atlantean shoulders fit to bear The weight of mightiest monarchies; his look Drew audience and attention still as night Or summer's noontide air, while thus he spake: "Thrones, and imperial powers, offspring of Heaven, Ethereal virtues! or these titles now Must we renounce, and, changing style, be called Princes of hell? for so the popular vote Inclines, here to continue, and build up here A growing empire; doubtless; while we dream, And know not that the King of Heaven hath doomed This place our dungeon, not our safe retreat Beyond his potent arm, to live exempt From Heaven's high jurisdiction, in new league Banded against his throne, but to remain In strictest bondage, though thus far removed Under the inevitable curb, reserved His captive multitude; for he, be sure, In height or depth, still first and last will reign Sole king, and of his kingdom lose no part By our revolt; but over Hell extend His empire, and with iron sceptre rule Us here, as with his golden those in Heaven. What sit we then projecting peace and war? War hath determined us, and foiled with loss Irreparable; terms of peace yet none Vouchsafed or sought; for what peace will be given To us enslaved, but custody severe, And stripes, and arbitrary punishment Inflicted? and what peace can we return, But to our power hostility and hate,

Untamed reluctance, and revenge though slow.

Yet ever plotting how the Conqueror least May reap his conquest, and may least rejoice In doing what we most in suffering feel? Nor will occasion want, nor shall we need With dangerous expedition to invade Heaven, whose high walls fear no assault or siege. Or ambush from the deep. What if we find Some easier enterprise? There is a place (If ancient and prophetic fame in Heaven Err not), another world, the happy seat Of some new race, call'd Man, about this time To be created like to us, though less In power and excellence, but favour'd more Of him who rules above; so was his will Pronounced among the gods, and by an oath, That shook Heaven's whole circumference, confirm d. Thither let us bend all our thoughts, to learn What creatures there inhabit, of what mould Or substance, how endued, and what their power, And where their weakness, how attempted best, By force or subtlety. Though Heaven be shut, And Heaven's high arbitrator sit secure In his own strength, this place may lie exposed, The utmost border of his kingdom, left To their defence who hold it : here, perhaps, Some advantageous act may be achieved By sudden onset, either with Hell-fire To waste his whole creation, or possess All as our own, and drive, as we were driven, The puny habitants; or if not drive, Seduce them to our party, that their God May prove their foe, and with repenting hand Abolish his own works. This would surpass Common revenge, and interrupt his joy In our confusion, and our joy upraise In his disturbance; when his darling sons, Hurled headlong to partake with us, shall curse Their frail original, and faded bliss, Faded so soon. Advise, if this be worth Attempting, or to sit in darkness here

Hatching vain empires." Thus Beëlzebub
Pleaded his devilish counsel, first devised
By Satan, and in part proposed; for whence,
But from the author of all ill, could spring
So deep a malice to confound the race
Of mankind in one root, and earth with Hell
To mingle and involve, done all to spite
The great Creator? But their spite still serves
His glory to augment. The bold design
Pleased highly those infernal states, and joy
Sparkled in all their eyes; with full assent
They vote: whereat his speech he thus renews.

"Well have ye judged, well ended long debate, Synod of gods! and like to what ye are, Great things resolved, which from the lowest deep, Will once more lift us up, in spite of fate, Nearer our ancient seat; perhaps in view Of those bright confines, whence with neighbouring arms And opportune excursions we may chance Re-enter Heaven; or else in some mild zone Dwell, not unvisited of Heaven's fair light, Secure, and at the brightening orient beam Purge off this gloom; the soft delicious air, To heal the scar of these corrosive fires, Shall breath her balm. But first, whom shall we send In search of this new world; whom shall we find Sufficient? Who shall tempt with wandering feet The dark, unbottomed, infinite abvss, And through the palpable obscure find out His uncouth way, or spread his airy flight, Upborne with indefatigable wings, Over the vast abrupt, ere he arrive The happy isle? What strength, what art can then Suffice, or what evasion bear him safe Through the strict sentries and stations thick Of angels watching round? Here he had need All circumspection, and we now no less Choice in our suffrage; for on whom we send, The weight of all and our last hope, relies." This said, he sat; and expectation held

His look suspense, awaiting who appear'd To second or oppose, or undertake The perilous attempt: but all sat mute, Pondering the danger with deep thoughts; and each In others' countenance read his own dismay Astonish'd: none among the choice and prime Of those heaven-warring champions could be found So hardy as to proffer or accept Alone the dreadful voyage; till at last Satan, whom now transcendent glory raised Above his fellows, with monarchal pride Conscious of highest worth, unmoved thus spake.

"O progeny of Heaven! empyreal thrones! With reason hath deep silence and demur Seized us, though undismay'd: long is the way And hard, that out of Hell leads up to light; Our prison strong; this huge convex of fire, Outrageous to devour, immures us round Ninefold, and gates of burning adamant, Barred over us prohibit all egress. These pass'd, if any pass, the void profound Of unessential night receives him next Wide gaping, and with utter loss of being Threatens him plunged in that abortive gulf. If thence he 'scape into whatever world, Or unknown region, what remains him less Than unknown dangers, and as hard escape? But I should ill become this throne, O peers, And this imperial sovereignty, adorned With splendour, arm'd with power, if aught proposed And judged of public moment, in the shape Of difficulty or danger could deter Me from attempting. Wherefore do I assume These royalties, and not refuse to reign, Refusing to accept as great a share Of hazard as of honour, due alike To him who reigns, and so much to him due Of hazard more, as he above the rest High honour'd sits? Go, therefore, mighty powers, Terror of Heaven, though fallen; intend at home, While here shall be our home, what best may ease The present misery, and render Hell More tolerable; if there be cure or charm To respite, or deceive, or slack the pain Of this ill-mansion: intermit no watch Against a wakeful foe, while I abroad Through all the coasts of dark destruction seek Deliverance for us all: this enterprise None shall partake with me." Thus saying rose The monarch, and prevented all reply, Prudent, lest from his resolution raised Others among the chief might offer now (Certain to be refused) what erst they fear'd; And so refused might in opinion stand His rivals, winning cheap the high repute Which he through hazard huge must earn. But they Dreaded not more the adventure than his voice Forbidding; and at once with him they rose: Their rising all at once was as the sound Of thunder heard remote. Towards him they bend With awful reverence prone; and as a god Extol him equal to the Highest in Heaven. Nor fail'd they to express how much they praised, That for the general safety he despised His own; for neither do the spirits damned Lose all their virtue; lest bad men should boast Their specious deeds on earth, which glory excites, Or close ambition varnish'd o'er with zeal. Thus they their doubtful consultations dark Ended rejoicing in their matchless chief: As when from mountain-tops the dusky clouds Ascending, while the north wind sleeps, o'erspread Heaven's cheerful face, the lowering element Scowls o'er the darken'd landskip snow or shower; If chance the radiant sun with farewell sweet Extend his evening beam, the fields revive, The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds Attest their joy, that hill and valley rings. O shame to men! devil with devil damued Firm concord holds, men only disagree

Of creatures rational, though under hope Of heavenly grace; and, God proclaiming peace, Yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife Among themselves, and levy cruel wars, Wasting the earth, each other to destroy: As if (which might induce us to accord) Man had not hellish foes enow besides, That day and night for his destruction wait. The Stygian council thus dissolved, and forth In order came the grand infernal peers: Midst came their mighty paramount, and seem'd Alone the antagonists of Heaven, nor less Than Hell's dread emperor with pomp supreme, And god-like imitated state; him round A globe of fiery seraphim enclosed With bright emblazonry and horrent arms. Then of their session ended they bid cry With trumpets regal sound the great result: Toward the four winds four speedy cherubim Put to their mouths the sounding alchemy, By heralds' voice explained; the hollow abyss Heard far and wide, and all the host of Hell With deafening shout returned them loud acclaim. Thence more at ease their minds, and somewhat raised By false presumptuous hope, the ranged powers Disband, and wandering, each his several way Pursues, as inclination or sad choice Leads him perplex'd, where he may likeliest find Truce to his restless thoughts, and entertain The irksome hours, till his great chief return. Part on the plain, or in the air sublime,

Upon the wing, or in swift race contend,
As at the Olympian games or Pythian fields;
Part curb their fiery steeds, or shun the goal
With rapid wheels, or fronted brigades form.
As when, to warn proud citics, war appears
Waged in the troubled sky, and armies rush
To battle in the clouds, before each van
Prick forth the airy knights, and couch their spears
Till thickest legions close; with feats of arms

From either end of heaven the welkin burns. Others with vast Typhæan rage, more fell, Rend up both rocks and hills, and ride the air In whirlwind; Hell scarce holds the wild uproar. As when Alcides, from Oechalia crowned With conquest, felt the envenomed robe, and tore Through pain up by the roots Thessalian pines, And Lichas from the top of Oeta threw Into th' Euboic sea. Others more mild. Retreated in a silent valley, sing With notes angelical to many a harp Their own heroic deeds and hapless fall By doom of battle; and complain that fate Free virtue should enthral to force or chance. Their song was partial, but the harmony (What could it less when spirits immortal sing?) Suspended Hell, and took with ravishment The thronging audience. In discourse more sweet (For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense) Others apart sat on a hill retired, In thoughts more elevate, and reason'd high Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate, Fix'd fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute, And found no end, in wandering mazes lost. Of good and evil much they argued then, Of happiness and final misery, Passion and apathy, and glory and shame, Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy: Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm Pain for a while, or anguish, and excite Fallacious hope, or arm the obdured breast With stubborn patience as with triple steel. Another part, in squadrons and gross bands, On bold adventure to discover wide That dismal world, if any clime perhaps Might yield them easier habitation, bend Four ways their flying march, along the banks Of four infernal rivers, that disgorge Into the burning lake their baleful streams; Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate;

Sad Acheron, of sorrow, black and deep, Cocytus, named of lamentation loud Heard on the rueful steam; fierce Phlegethon, Whose waves of torrent fire inflame with rage. Far off from these a slow and silent stream. Lethe, the river of oblivion, rolls Her watery labyrinth, whereof who drinks, Forthwith his former state and being forgets, Forgets both joy and grief, pleasure and pain. Beyond this flood a frozen continent Lies dark and wild, beat with perpetual storms Of whirlwind and dire hail, which on firm land Thaws not, but gathers heap, and ruin seems Of ancient pile; all else deep snow and ice, A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog Betwixt Damiata and Mount Casius old. Where armies whole have sunk: the parching air Burns frore, and cold performs the effect of fire. Thither, by harpy-footed furies haled, At certain revolutions all the damned Are brought; and feel by turns the bitter change Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce: From beds of raging fire to starve in ice Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine Immoveable, infixed, and frozen round, Periods of time; thence hurried back to fire, They ferry over this Lethéan sound Both to and fro, their sorrow to augment, And wish and struggle, as they pass, to reach The tempting stream, with one small drop to lose In sweet forgetfulness all pain and woe, All in one moment, and so near the brink; But fate withstands, and to oppose the attempt Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards The ford, and of itself the water flies All taste of living wight, as once it fled The lip of Tantalus. Thus roving on In confused march forlorn, the adventurous bands With shuddering horror pale, and eyes aghast, Viewed first their lamentable lot, and found

No rest; through many a dark and dreary vale They passed, and many a region dolorous, O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp, Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death, A universe of death, which God by curse Created evil, for evil only good, Where all life dies, death lives, and nature breeds, Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things, Abominable, unutterable, and worse Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived. Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire. Meanwhile the adversary of God and man, Satan, with thoughts inflamed of highest design, Puts on swift wings, and towards the gates of Hell Explores his solitary flight: sometimes He scours the right hand coast, sometimes the left Now shaves with level wing the deep, then soars Up to the fiery concave towering high. As when far off at sea a fleet descried Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds Close sailing from Bengala, or the isles Of Ternate and Tidore, whence merchants bring Their spicy drugs; they on the trading flood Through the wide Ethiopian to the cape Ply stemming nightly towards the pole. So seemed Far off the flying fiend: at last appear Hell bounds, high reaching to the horrid roof, And thrice threefold the gates; threefolds were brass Three iron, three of adamantine rock, Impenetrable, impaled with circling fire, Yet unconsumed. Before the gates there sat

On either side a formidable shape;
The one seemed woman to the waist, and fair,
But ended foul in many a scaly fold
Voluminous and vast, a serpent armed
With mortal sting: about her middle round
A cry of hell-hounds never ceasing barked
With wide Cerberean mouths full loud, and rung
A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,
If aught disturbed their noise, into her womb,

And kennel there; yet there still barked and howled Within unseen. Far less abhorred than these Vexed Scylla, bathing in the sea that parts Calabria from the hoarse Trinacrian shore: Nor uglier follow the night-hag, when, called In secret, riding through the air she comes, Lured with the smell of infant blood, to dance With Lapland witches while the labouring moon Eclipses at their charms. The other shape, If shape it might be called that shape had none Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb, Or substance might be called that shadow seemed, For each seemed either; black it stood as night, Fierce as ten Furies, terrible as Hell, And shook a dreadful dart; what seemed his head The likeness of a kingly crown had on. Satan was now at hand; and from his seat The monster moving onward came as fast With horrid strides; Hell trembled as he strode. The undaunted fiend what this might be admired, Admired, not feared; God and his Son except, Created thing nought valued he nor shunned: And with disdainful look thus first began:

"Whence and what art thou, execrable shape, That darest, though grim and terrible, advance Thy miscreated front athwart my way To yonder gates? Through them I mean to pass, That be assured, without leave asked of thee: Retire, or taste thy folly, and learn by proof, Hell-born, not to contend with spirits of Heaven."

To whom the goblin full of wrath replied:

"Art thou that traitor angel, art thou he,
Who first broke peace in Heaven and faith, till then
Unbroken, and in proud rebellious arms
Drew after him the third part of Heaven's sons,
Conjúred against the Highest; for which both thou
And they, outcast from God, are here condemned
To waste eternal days in woe and pain?
And reckon'st thou thyself with spirits of Heaven,
Hell-doomed, and breath'st defiance here and scorn,

Where I reign king, and, to enrage thee more, Thy king and lord? Back to thy punishment, False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings, Lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue Thy lingering, or with one stroke of this dart Strange horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before."

So spake the grisly terror, and in shape, So speaking and so threatening, grew tenfold More dreadful and deform: on the other side, Incensed with indignation, Satan stood Unterrified, and like a comet burned, That fires the length of Ophiuchus huge In the arctic sky, and from his horrid hair Shakes pestilence and war. Each at the head Levelled his deadly aim; their fatal hands No second stroke intend; and such a frown Each cast at the other, as when two black clouds, With Heaven's artillery fraught, come rattling on Over the Caspian, then stand front to front, Hovering a space, till winds the signal blow To join their dark encounter in mid-air: So frowned the mighty combatants, that Hell Grew darker at their frown, so matched they stood: For never but once more was either like To meet so great a foe: and now great deeds Had been achieved, whereof all Hell had rung, Had not the snaky sorceress that sat, Fast by Hell-gate, and kept the fatal key. Risen, and with hideous outcry rushed between.

"O father, what intends thy hand," she cried,
"Against thy only son? What fury, O son,
Possesses thee to bend that mortal dart
Against thy father's head? and knowest for whom?
For him who sits above and laughs the while
At thee ordained his drudge, to execute
Whate'er his wrath, which he calls justice, bids;
His wrath, which one day will destroy ye both."

She spake, and at her words the hellish pest Forbore, then these to her Satan returned:

"So strange thy outery, and thy words so strange

Thou interposest, that my sudden hand Prevented spares to tell thee yet by deeds What it intends; till first I know of thee, What thing thou art, thus double-formed, and why In this infernal vale first met, thou call'st Me father, and that phantasm callest my son; I know thee not, nor ever saw till now Sight more detestable than him and thee."

To whom thus the portress of Hell-gate replied: "Hast thou forgot me then, and do I seem Now in thine eye so foul? once deemed so fair In Heaven, when at the assembly, and in sight Of all the seraphim with thee combined In bold conspiracy against Heaven's King, All on a sudden miserable pain Surprised thee, dim thine eyes, and dizzy swum In darkness, while thy head flames thick and fast Threw forth, till on the left side opening wide, Likest to thee in shape and countenance bright, Then shining heavenly fair, a goddess armed, Out of thy head I sprung: amazement seized All the host of Heaven; back they recoiled afraid At first, and called me Sin, and for a sign Portentous held me; but, familiar grown, I pleased, and with attractive graces won The most averse, thee chiefly, who full oft Thyself in me thy perfect image viewing Became enamoured, and such joy thou took'st With me in secret, that my womb conceived A growing burden. Meanwhile war arose, And fields were fought in Heaven; wherein remained (For what could else?) to our almighty foe Clear victory, to our part loss and rout Through all the empyréan: down they fell Driven headlong from the pitch of Heaven, down Into this deep, and in the general fall I also; at which time this powerful key Into my hand was given, with charge to keep These gates for ever shut, which none can pass Without my opening. Pensive here I sat

Alone, but long I sat not, till my womb, Pregnant by thee, and now excessive grown, Prodigious motion felt and rueful throes. At last this odious offspring whom thou seest, Thine own begotten, breaking violent way, Tore through my entrails, that with fear and pain Distorted, all my nether shape thus grew Transformed: but he my inbred enemy Forth issued, brandishing his fatal dart Made to destroy; I fled, and cried out 'Death!' Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed From all her caves, and back resounded 'Death!' I fled, but he pursued (though more, it seems, Inflamed with lust than rage), and swifter far, Me overtook, his mother, all dismayed, And in embraces forcible and foul Engendering with me, of that rape begot These yelling monsters, that with ceaseless cry Surround me, as thou sawest, hourly conceived And hourly born, with sorrow infinite To me; for when they list, into the womb That bred them they return, and howl, and gnaw My bowels, their repast; then bursting forth Afresh with conscious terrors vex me round, That rest or intermission none I find. Before mine eyes in opposition sits Grim Death, my son and foe, who sets them on. And me his parent would full soon devour For want of other prey, but that he knows His end with mine involved; and knows that I Should prove a bitter morsel, and his bane, Whenever that shall be; so fate pronounced. But thou, O father, I forewarn thee, shun His deadly arrow; neither vainly hope To be invulnerable in those bright arms, Though tempered heavenly; for that mortal dint, Save he who reigns above, none can resist." She finished, and the subtle fiend his lore Soon learned, now milder, and thus answered smooth: "Dear daughter, since thou claim'st me for thy sire,

And my fair son here show'st me, the dear pledge Of dalliance had with thee in Heaven, and joys Then sweet, now sad to mention, through dire change Befallen us unforeseen, unthought of; know I come no enemy, but to set free From out this dark and dismal house of pain Both him and thee, and all the heavenly host Of spirits, that in our just pretenses armed, Fell with us from on high: from them I go This uncouth errand sole; and, one for all, Myself expose, with lonely steps to tread The unfounded deep, and through the void immense To search with wandering quest a place foretold Should be, and, by concurring signs, ere now Created vast and round; a place of bliss In the purlieus of Heaven, and therein placed A race of upstart creatures, to supply Perhaps our vacant room, though more removed, Lest Heaven, surcharged with potent multitude, Might hap to move new broils: be this or aught Than this more secret now designed, I haste To know, and, this once known, shall soon return, And bring ye to the place where thou and Death Shall dwell at ease, and up and down unseen Wing silently the buxom air, imbalmed With odours; there ye shall be fed and filled Immeasurably; all things shall be your prey." He ceased, for both seemed highly pleased, and Death

He ceased, for both seemed highly pleased, and Death Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear His famine should be filled, and blessed his maw

Destined to that good hour: no less rejoiced His mother bad, and thus bespake her sire:

"The key of this infernal pit by due,
And by command of Heaven's all-powerful King
I keep, by him forbidden to unlock
These adamantine gates; against all force
Death ready stands to interpose his dart,
Fearless to be o'ermatched by living might.
But what owe I to his commands above
Who hates me, and hath hither thrust me down

Into this gloom of Tartarus profound, To sit in hateful office here confined, Inhabitant of Heaven, and heavenly-born, Here in perpetual agony and pain, With terrors and with clamours compassed round Of mine own brood, that on my bowels feed? Thou art my father, thou my author, thou My being gavest me; whom should I obey But thee? whom follow? thou wilt bring me soon To that new world of light and bliss, among The gods who live at ease, where I shall reign At thy right hand voluptuous, as beseems Thy daughter and thy darling, without end." Thus saying, from her side the fatal key, Sad instrument of all our woe, she took; And towards the gate rolling her bestial train, Forthwith the huge portcullis high up drew, Which, but herself, not all the Stygian powers Could once have moved; then in the key-hole turns The intricate wards, and every bolt and bar Of massy iron or solid rock with ease Unfastens: on a sudden open fly, With impetuous recoil and jarring sound The infernal doors, and on their hinges grate Harsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook Of Erebus. She opened, but to shut Excelled her power; the gates wide open stood, That with extended wings a bannered host, Under spread ensigns marching might pass through With horse and chariots ranked in loose array; So wide they stood, and like a furnace mouth Cast forth redounding smoke and ruddy flame. Before their eyes in sudden view appear The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark Illimitable ocean, without bound, Without dimension, where length, breadth, and height. And time, and place, are lost; where eldest Night

And Chaos, ancestors of nature, hold Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.

For Hot, Cold, Moist, and Dry, four champions fierce, Strive here for mastery, and to battle bring Their embryon atoms: they around the flag Of each his faction, in their several clans, Light armed or heavy, sharp, smooth, swift, or slow, Swarm populous, unnumbered as the sands Of Barca or Cyrene's torrid soil, Levied to side with warring winds, and poise Their lighter wings. To whom these most adhere, He rules a moment; Chaos umpire sits, And by decision more embroils the fray By which he reigns: next him high arbiter Chance governs all. Into this wild abyss, The womb of nature, and perhaps her grave, Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire, But all these in their pregnant causes mixed Confusedly, and which thus must ever fight, Unless the almighty Maker them ordain His dark materials to create more worlds: Into this wild abyss the wary fiend Stood on the brink of Hell, and looked a while, Pondering his voyage; for no narrow frith He had to cross. Nor was his ear less pealed With noises loud and ruinous (to compare Great things with small) than when Bollona storms, With all her battering engines bent to raze Some capital city; or less than if this frame Of Heaven were falling, and these elements In mutiny had from her axle torn The steadfast earth. At last his sail-broad vans He spreads for flight, and in the surging smoke Uplifted spurns the ground; thence many a league, As in a cloudy chair, ascending rides Audacious; but, that seat soon failing, meets A vast vacuity: all unawares, Fluttering his pennons vain, plumb down he drops Ten thousand fathom deep, and to this hour Down had been falling, had not by ill chance The strong rebuff of some tumultuous cloud, Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him

As many miles aloft: that fury stayed, Quenched in a boggy Syrtis, neither sea, Nor good dry land: nigh foundered, on he fares Treading the crude consistence, half on foot, Half flying; behoves him now both oar and sail. As when a gryphon through the wilderness With winged course, o'er hill or moory dale, Pursues the Arimaspian, who by stealth Had from his wakeful custody purloined The guarded gold: so eagerly the fiend O'er bog, or steep, through strait, rough, dense, or rare, With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his way And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies; At length a universal hubbub wild Of stunning sounds and voices all confused, Borne through the hollow dark, assaults his ear With loudest vehemence: thither he plies, Undaunted, to meet there whatever power Or spirit of the nethermost abvss Might in that noise reside, of whom to ask Which way the nearest coast of darkness lies Bordering on light; when straight behold the throne Of Chaos, and his dark pavilion spread Wide on the wasteful deep; with him enthroned Sat sable-vested Night, eldest of things, The consort of his reign, and by them stood Orcus and Ades, and the dreaded name Of Demogorgon; Rumour next, and Chance, And Tumult, and Confusion, all embroiled, And Discord with a thousand various mouths. To whom Satan turning boldly, thus: "Ye powers And spirits of this nethermost abyss, Chaos and ancient Night, I come no spy, With purpose to explore or to disturb The secrets of your realm, but, by constraint Wandering this darksome desert, as my way

Alone, and without guide, half lost, I seek What readiest path leads where your gloomy bounds Confine with Heaven: or, if some other place,

Lies through your spacious empire up to light,

From your dominion won, the ethereal king Possesses lately, thither to arrive I travel this profound; direct my course; Directed, no mean recompense it brings To your behoof, if I that region lost, All usurpation thence expelled, reduce To her original darkness and your sway (Which is my present journey), and once more Erect the standard there of ancient Night; Yours be the advantage all, mine the revenge." Thus Satan; and him thus the Anarch old, With faltering speech and visage incomposed, Answered: "I know thee, stranger, who thou art: That mighty leading angel, who of late Made head against Heaven's King, though overthrown. I saw and heard, for such a numerous host Fled not in silence through the frighted deep With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout, Confusion worse confounded; and Heaven-gates Poured out by millions her victorious bands Pursuing. I upon my frontiers here Keep residence; if all I can will serve That little which is left so to defend, Encroached on still through your intestine broils. Weakening the sceptre of old Night: first Hell. Your dungeon, stretching far and wide beneath: Now lately Heaven and Earth, another world, Hung o'er my realm, link'd in a golden chain To that side Heaven from whence your legions fell. If that way be your walk, you have not far; So much the nearer danger; go, and speed; Havoc, and spoil, and ruin, are my gain."

He ceased; and Satan stayed not to reply,
But glad that now his sea should find a shore,
With fresh alacrity and force renewed
Springs upward, like a pyramid of fire,
Into the wild expanse, and through the shock
Of fighting elements, on all sides round
Environed, wins his way, harder beset
And more endangered, than when Argo passed

Through Bosphorus, betwixt the justling rocks; Or when Ulysses on the larboard shunned Charybdis, and by the other whirlpool steered. So he with difficulty and labour hard Moved on, with difficulty and labour he; But he once passed, soon after, when man fell, Strange alteration! Sin and Death amain Following his track (such was the will of Heaven). Paved after him a broad and beaten way Over the dark abvss, whose boilinggulf Tamely endured a bridge of wondrous length, From Hell continued, reaching the utmost orb Of this frail world, by which the spirits perverse With easy intercourse pass to and fro To tempt or punish mortals, except whom God and good angels guard by special grace. But now at last the sacred influence Of light appears, and from the walls of Heaven Shoots far into the bosom of dim Night A glimmering dawn; here Nature first begins Her farthest verge, and Chaos to retire, As from her utmost works, a broken foe, With tumult less, and with less hostile din, That Satan with less toil, and now with ease Wafts on the calmer wave by dubious light, And like a weather-beaten vessel holds Gladly the port, though shrouds and tackle torn: Or in the emptier waste, resembling air, Weighs his spread wings, at leisure to behold Far off the empyreal Heaven, extended wide In circuit, undetermined square or round, With opal towers and battlements adorned Of living sapphire, once his native seat; And fast by, hanging in a golden chain, This pendent world, in bigness as a star Of smallest magnitude close by the moon. Thither, full fraught with mischievous revenge. Accursed, and in a curséd hour, he hies.

BOOK III.

THE ARGUMENT.

God, sitting on His throne, sees Satan flying towards this world, then newly created : shows him to the Son, who sat at His right hand ; foretells the success of Satan in perverting mankind; clears his own justice and wisdom from all imputation, having created man free, and able enough to have withstood his tempter; yet declares his purpose of grace towards him, in regard he fell not of his own malice, as did Satan, but by him seduced. The Son of God renders praises to his Father for the manifestation of his gracious purpose towards man; but God again declares that grace cannot be extended towards man without the satisfaction of divine justice; man hath offended the majesty of God by aspiring to godhead, and therefore with all his progeny devoted to death must die, unless some one can be found sufficient to answer for his offence, and undergo his punishment. The Son of God freely offers himself a ransom for man; The Father accepts him, ordains his incarnation, pronounces His exaltation above all names in Heaven and Earth; commands all the angels to adore him; they obey, and by hymning to their harps in full quire, celebrate the Father and the Son. Meanwhile Satan alights upon the bare convex of this world's outermost orb; where wandering he first finds a place, since called the Limbo of Vanity; what persons and things fly up thither; thence comes to the gate of Heaven, described ascending by stairs, and the waters above the firmament that flow about it: his passage thence to the orb of the sun; he finds there Uriel, the regent of that orb, but first changes himself into the shape of a meaner angel; and pretending a zealous desire to behold the new creation, and man whom God had placed here, inquires of him the place of his habitation, and is directed: alights first on mount Niphates.

Ham, holy Light! offspring of Heaven firstborn! Or of the Eternal coëternal beam,
May I express thee unblamed? since God is light,
And never but in unapproached light
Dwelt from eternity, dwelt then in thee,
Bright effluence of bright essence increate.
Or hear'st thou rather pure ethereal stream,
Whose fountain who shall tell? Before the sun,
Before the Heaven thou wert; and at the voice
Of God, as with a mantle didst invest

The rising world of waters dark and deep, Won from the void and formless infinite. Thee I revisit now with bolder wing. Escaped the Stygian pool, though long detained In that obscure sojourn, while in my flight Through utter and through middle darkness borne With other notes than to the Orphéan lyre I sung of Chaos and eternal Night; Taught by the heavenly muse to venture down The dark descent, and up to re ascend, Though hard and rare: Thee I revisit safe, And feel thy sovereign vital lamp; but thou Revisit'st not these eyes, that roll in vain To find thy piercing ray, and find no dawn; So thick a drop serene hath quenched their orbs. Or dim suffusion veiled. Yet not the more Cease I to wander, where the Muses haunt Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny hill, Smit with the love of sacred song; but chief Thee, Sion, and the flowery brooks beneath, That washed thy hallowed feet, and warbling flow. Nightly I visit: nor sometimes forget Those other two equalled with me in fate, So were I equalled with them in renown. Blind Thamyris and blind Mæonides, And Tiresias and Phineas, prophets old: Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary move Harmonious numbers; as the wakeful bird Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus with the year Seasons return, but not to me returns Day, or the sweet approach of even or morn, Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose, Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine; But cloud instead, and ever-during dark Surrounds me, from the cheerful ways of men Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair Presented with a universal blank Of nature's works to me expunged and rased, And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out.

So much the rather thou, celestial Light, Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate; there plant eyes, all mist from thence Purge and disperse, that I may see and tell Of things invisible to mortal sight.

Now had the Almighty Father from above, From the pure empyréan where he sits High throned above all height, bent down his eye. His own works and their works at once to view: About him all the sanctities of Heaven Stood thick as stars, and from his sight received Beatitude past utterance; on his right The radiant image of his glory sat, His only Son; on earth he first beheld Our two first parents, yet the only two Of mankind, in the happy garden placed, Reaping immortal fruits of joy and love, Uninterrupted joy, unrivalled love, In blissful solitude; he then surveyed Hell and the gulf between, and Satan there Coasting the wall of Heaven on this side Night, In the dun air sublime, and ready now To stoop with wearied wings and willing feet On the bare outside of this world, that seemed Firm land embosomed, without firmament, Uncertain which, in ocean or in air. Him God beholding from his prospect high, Wherein past, present, future, he beholds, Thus to his only Son forseeing spake:

"Only begotten Son, seest thou what rage Transports our adversary? whom no bounds Prescribed, no bars of Hell, nor all the chains Heaped on him there, nor yet the main abyss Wide interrupt, can hold; so bent he seems On desperate revenge, that shall redound Upon his own rebellious head. And now Through all restraint broke loose he wings his way Not far off Heaven, in the precincts of light, Directly towards the new-created world, And man there placed, with purpose to essay

If him by force he can destroy, or worse, By some false guile pervert; and shall pervert, For man will hearken to his glozing lies, And easily transgress the sole command, Sole pledge of his obedience: so will fall He and his faithless progeny: whose fault? Whose but his own? Ingrate, he had of me All he could have: I made him just and right, Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall. Such I created all the ethereal powers And spirits, both them who stood, and them who fail'd; Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell. Not free, what proof could they have given sincere Of true allegiance, constant faith, or love, Where only what they needs must do appeared, Not what they would? what praise could they receive? What pleasure I from such obedience paid, When will and reason (reason also is choice) Useless and vain, of freedom both despoiled, Made passive both, had served necessity, Not me? They therefore as to right belonged, So were created, nor can justly accuse Their Maker, or their making, or their fate, As if predestination over-ruled Their will, disposed by absolute decree Or high foreknowledge; they themselves decreed Their own revolt, not I; if I foreknew, Foreknowledge had no influence on their fault, Which had no less proved certain unforeknown. So without least impulse or shadow of fate, Or aught by me immutably foreseen, They trespass, authors to themselves in all Both what they judge, and what they choose; for so I formed them free: and free they must remain, Till they enthral themselves; I else must change Their nature, and revoke the high decree Unchangeable, eternal, which ordained Their freedom; they themselves ordained their fall. The first sort by their own suggestion fell. Self-tempted, self-depraved: man falls deceived

By the other first; man therefore shall find grace, The other none: in mercy and justice both, Through Heaven and earth, so shall my glory excel; But mercy, first and last, shall brightest shine."

Thus while God spake ambrosial fragrance filled All Heaven, and in the blessed spirits elect Sense of new joy ineffable diffused:
Beyond compare the Son of God was seen Most glorious; in him all his Father shone Substantially expressed; and in his face Divine compassion visibly appeared, Love without end, and without measure grace, Which uttering thus he to his father spake:

"O Father, gracious was that word which closed Thy sovereign sentence, that man should find grace; For which both Heaven and earth shall high extol Thy praises, with the innumerable sound Of hymns and sacred songs, wherewith thy throne Encompassed shall resound thee ever blessed. For should man finally be lost, should man, Thy creature late so loved, thy youngest son, Fall circumvented thus by fraud, though joined With his own folly? that be from thee far, That far be from thee, Father, who art judge Of all things made, and judgest only right. Or shall the adversary thus obtain His end, and frustrate thine? shall he fulfil His malice, and thy goodness bring to nought, Or proud return, though to his heavier doom. Yet with revenge accomplished, and to Hell Draw after him the whole race of mankind, By him corrupted? or wilt thou thyself Abolish thy creation, and unmake For him, what for thy glory thou hast made? So should thy goodness and thy greatness both Be questioned and blasphemed without defence."

To whom the great Creator thus replied:
"O Son, in whom my soul hath chief delight,
Son of my bosom, Son who art alone
My word, my wisdom, and effectual might,

All hast thou spoken as my thoughts are, all As my eternal purpose hath decreed: Man shall not quite be lost, but saved who will, Yet not of will in him, but grace in me Freely vouchsafed; once more I will renew His lapséd powers, though forfeit, and enthralled By sin to foul exerbitant desires; Unheld by me, yet once more he shall stand On even ground against his mortal foe, By me upheld, that he may know how frail His fallen condition is, and to me owe All his deliverance, and to none but me. Some I have chosen of peculiar grace Elect above the rest; so is my will: The rest shall hear me call, and oft be warned Their sinful state, and to appear betimes The incensed Deity, while offered grace Invites; for I will clear their senses dark, What may suffice, and soften stony hearts To pray, repent, and bring obedience due. To prayer, repentance, and obedience due, Though but endeavoured with sincere intent. Mine ear shall not be slow, mine eye not shut. And I will place within them as a guide My umpire Conscience, whom if they will hear, Light after light well used they shall attain, And to the end persisting, safe arrive. This my long sufferance and my day of grace, They who neglect and scorn shall never taste; But hard be hardened, blind be blinded more. That they may stumble on, and deeper fall: And none but such from mercy I exclude. But yet all is not done: man disobeying, Disloyal breaks his fealty, and sins Against the high supremacy of Heaven, Affecting godhead, and so losing all, To expiate his treason hath nought left, But to destruction sacred and devote. He with his whole posterity must die. Die he or justice must; unless for him

Some other able, and as willing, pay
The rigid satisfaction—death for death.
Say, heavenly powers, where shall we find such love?
Which of ye will be mortal to redeem
Man's mortal crime, and just the unjust to save?
Dwells in all Heaven charity so dear!"

IIe asked; but all the heavenly quire stood mute,
And silence was in IIeaven: on man's behalf
Patron or intercessor none appeared,
Much less that durst upon his own head draw
The deadly forfeiture, and ransom set.
And now without redemption all mankind
Must have been lost, adjudged to death and Hell
By doom severe, had not the Son of God,
In whom the fulness dwells of love divine,
His dearest mediation thus renewed:

"Father, Thy word is past, man shall find grace; And shall grace not find means, that finds her way. The speediest of thy wingéd messengers, To visit all thy creatures, and to all Comes unprevented, unimplored, unsought? Happy for man, so coming; he her aid Can never seek, once dead in sins and lost; Atonement for himself or offering meet, Indebted and undone, hath none to bring: Behold me then; me for him, life for life, I offer; on me let thine anger fall; Account me man; I for his sake will leave Thy bosom, and this glory next to thee Freely put off, and for him lastly die Well pleased; on me let Death wreak all his rage: Under his gloomy power I shall not long Lie vanquished; thou hast given me to possess Life in myself for ever; by thee I live, Though now to Death I yield, and am his due All that of me can die; yet, that debt paid, Thou wilt not leave me in the loathsome grave His prey, nor suffer my unspotted soul For ever with corruption there to dwell; But I shall rise victorious, and subdue

My vanquisher, spoiled of his vaunted spoil;
Death his death's wound shall then receive, and stoop Inglorious, of his mortal sting disarmed.

I through the ample air in triumph high Shall lead Hell captive, maugre Hell, and show The powers of darkness bound. Thou at the sight Pleased, out of Heaven shall look down and smile, While by thee raised I ruin all my foes, Death last, and with his carcass glut the grave: Then with the multitude of my redeemed Shall enter Heaven, long absent, and return, Father, to see thy face, wherein no cloud Of anger shall remain, but peace assured And reconcilement; wrath shall be no more Thenceforth, but in thy presence joy entire."

His words here ended, but his meek aspect Silent yet spake, and breathed immortal love To mortal men, above which only shone Filial obedience; as a sacrifice Glad to be offered, he attends the will Of his great Father. Admiration seized All Heaven, what this might mean, and whither tend, Wondering; but soon the Almighty thus replied:

"O thou, in Heaven and earth the only peace Found out for mankind under wrath, O thou, My soul complacence! well thou know'st how dear To me are all my works, nor man the least, Though last created; that for him I spare Thee from my bosom and right hand, to save, By losing thee awhile, the whole race lost. Thou therefore, whom thou only canst redeem, Their nature also to thy nature join; And be thyself man among men on earth. Made flesh, when time shall be, of virgin seed, By wondrous birth: be thou in Adam's room The head of all mankind, though Adam's son. As in him perish all men, so in thee, As from a second root, shall be restored As many as are restored, without thee none. His crime makes guilty all his sons; thy merit.

Imputed shall absolve them who renounce Their own both righteous and unrighteous deeds, And live in thee transplanted, and from thee Receive new life. So man, as is most just, Shall satisfy for man, be judged and die, And dying rise, and rising with him, raise His brethren, ransomed with his own dear life. So heavenly love shall outdo hellish hate, Giving to death, and dving to redeem, So dearly to redeem what hellish hate So easily destroyed, and still destroys In those who, when they may, accept not grace. Nor shalt thou, by descending to assume Man's nature, lessen or degrade thine own. Because thou hast, though throned in highest bliss Equal to God, and equally enjoying God-like fruition, quitted all to save A world from utter loss, and hast been found By merit more than birthright Son of God, Found worthiest to be so by being good, Far more than great or high; because in thee Love hath abounded more than glory abounds, Therefore thy humiliation shall exalt With thee thy manhood also to this throne; Here shalt thou sit incarnate, here shalt reign Both God and man, Son both of God and man, Anointed universal King; all power I give thee; reign for ever, and assume Thy merits; under thee as head supreme Thrones, princedoms, powers, dominions I reduce: All knees to thee shall bow, of them that bide In heaven or earth, or under earth in Hell. When thou, attended gloriously from Heaven, Shalt in the sky appear, and from thee send The summoning archangels to proclaim Thy dread tribunal; forthwith from all winds The living, and forthwith the cited dead Of all past ages, to the general doom Shall hasten, such a peal shall rouse their sleep. Then, all thy saints assembled, thou shalt judge

Bad men and angels; they arraigned shall sink
Beneath thy sentence; Hell, her numbers full,
Thenceforth shall be forever shut. Meanwhile
The world shall burn, and from her ashes spring
New Heaven and earth, wherein the just shall dwell,
And after all their tribulations long
See golden days, fruitful of golden deeds,
With joy and love triumphing, and fair truth.
Then thou thy regal sceptre shalt lay by,
For regal sceptre then no more shall need;
God shall be all in all. But, all ye gods,
Adore him who to compass all this dies;
Adore the Son, and honour him as me."

No sooner had the Almighty ceased, but all The multitude of angels, with a shout Loud as from numbers without number, sweet As from blessed voices, uttering joy, Heaven rung With jubilee, and loud Hosannas filled The eternal regions: lowly reverent Towards either throne they bow, and to the ground With solemn adoration down they cast Their crowns inwove with amarant and gold; Immortal amarant, a flower which once In Paradise, fast by the tree of life, Began to bloom; but soon for man's offence To Heaven removed, where first it grew, there grows, And flowers aloft shading the fount of life, And where the river of bliss through midst of Heaven Rolls o'er Elysian flowers her amber stream; With these, that never fade, the spirits elect Bind their resplendent locks enwreathed with beams: Now in loose garlands thick thrown off, the bright Pavement, that like a sea of jasper shone, Empurpled with celestial roses, smiled. Then, crowned again, their golden harps they took, Harps ever tuned, that glittering by their side Like quivers hung, and with preämble sweet Of charming symphony they introduce Their sacred song, and waken raptures high; No voice exempt, no voice but well could join

Melodious part, such concord is in Heaven. "Thee, Father," first they sung, "Omnipotent, Immutable, Immortal, Infinite, Eternal King; thee, Author of all being, Fountain of light, thyself invisible Amidst the glorious brightness where thou sitt'st Throned inaccessible, but when thou shad'st The full blaze of thy beams, and through a cloud Drawn round about thee like a radiant shrine. Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear, Yet dazzle Heaven, that brightest seraphim Approach not, but with both wings veil their eyes. Thee," next they sang, "of all creation first, Begotten Son, Divine Similitude, In whose conspicuous count'nance, without cloud Made visible, the Almighty Father shines, Whom else no creature can behold; on thee Impressed the effulgence of his glory abides, Transfused on thee his ample Spirit rests. He Heaven of Heavens, and all the powers therein By thee created, and by thee threw down The aspiring dominations: thou that day Thy Father's dreadful thunder didst not spare, Nor stop thy flaming chariot wheels, that shook Heaven's everlasting frame, while o'er the necks Thou drov'st of warring angels disarrayed Back from pursuit thy powers with loud acclaim Thee only extolled, Son of thy Father's might, To execute fierce vengeance on his foes, Not so on man: him, through their malice fallen, Father of mercy and grace, thou didst not doom So strictly, but much more to pity inclined: No sooner did thy dear and only Son Perceive thee purposed not to doom frail man So strictly, but much more to pity incline, He, to appease thy wrath, and end the strife Of mercy and justice in thy face discerned, Regardless of the bliss wherein he sat Second to thee, offered himself to die For man's offence. O unexampled love,

Love nowhere to be found less than Divine! Hail, Son of God, Saviour of men! thy name Shall be the copious matter of my song Henceforth, and never shall my heart thy praise Forget, nor from thy Father's praise disjoin."

Thus they in Heaven, above the starry sphere, Their happy hours in joy and hymning spent. Meanwhile upon the firm opacous globe Of this round world, whose first convex divides The luminous inferior orbs inclosed From Chaos, and the inroad of Darkness old, Satan alighted walks: a globe far off It seemed, now seems a boundless continent, Dark, waste, and wild, under the frown of night Starless exposed, and ever-threatening storms Of Chaos blustering round, inclement sky; Save on that side which from the wall of Heaven. Though distant far, some small reflection gains Of glimmering air less vexed with tempest loud: Here walked the fiend at large in spacious field. As when a vulture on Imaus bred, Whose snowy ridge the roving Tartar bounds. Dislodging from a region scarce of prev To gorge the flesh of lambs or yearling kids On hills where flocks are fed, flies toward the springs Of Ganges or Hydaspes, Indian streams; But in his way lights on the barren plains Of Sericana, where Chineses drive With sails and wind their cany wagons light; So on this windy sea of land, the fiend Walked up and down alone, bent on his prey; Alone, for other creature in this place Living or lifeless to be found was none; None yet, but store hereafter from the earth Up hither like aërial vapours flew Of all things transitory and vain, when sin With vanity Lad filled the works of men; Both all things vain, and all who in vain things Built their fond hopes of glory or lasting fame. Or happiness in this or the other life:

All who have their reward on earth, the fruits Of painful superstition and blind zeal, Nought seeking but the praise of men, here find Fit retribution, empty as their deeds; All th' unaccomplished works of Nature's hand, Abortive, monstrous, or unkindly mixed, Dissolved on earth, fleet hither, and in vain. Till final dissolution, wander here, Not in the neighbouring moon, as some have dreamed; Those argent fields more likely habitants, Translated saints, or middle spirits, hold, Betwixt the angelical and human kind. Hither of ill-joined sons and daughters born First from the ancient world those giants came With many a vain exploit, though then renowned, The builders next of Babel on the plain Of Sennaar, and still with vain design New Babels, had they wherewithal, would build: Others came single; he who to be deemed A god, leaped fondly into Ætna flames, Empedocles; and he who to enjoy Plato's Elysium, leaped into the sea, Cleombrotus; and many more too long, Embryos and idiots, eremites and friars, White, black, and gray, with all their trumpery. Here pilgrims roam, that strayed so far to see In Golgotha him dead, who lives in Heaven; And they who to be sure of Paradise Dying put on the weeds of Dominic, Or in Franciscan think to pass disguised; They pass the planets seven, and pass the fixed, And that crystalline sphere whose balance weighs The trepidation talked, and that first moved; And now Saint Peter at Heaven's wicket seems To wait them with his keys, and now at foot Of Heaven's ascent they lift their feet, when lo! A violent cross-wind from either coast Blows them transverse ten thousand leagues awry Into the devious air; then might ye see Cowls, hoods, and habits with their wearers tost

And fluttered into rags; then relics, beads, Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls, The sport of winds: all these upwhirled aloft, Fly o'er the backside of the world far off Into a limbo large and broad, since called The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown Long after, now unpeopled, and untrod. All this dark globe the fiend found as he passed, And long he wandered, till at last a gleam Of dawning light turned thitherward in haste His travelled steps; far distant he descries, Ascending by degrees magnificent Up to the wall of Heaven, a structure high; At top whereof, but far more rich, appeared The work as of a kingly palace gate, With frontispiece of diamond and gold Embellished; thick with sparkling orient gems The portal shone, inimitable on earth By model, or by shading pencil drawn. The stairs were such as whereon Jacob saw Angels ascending and descending, bands Of guardians bright, when he from Esau fled To Padan-Aram, in the field of Luz, Dreaming by night under the open sky, And waking cried, 'This is the gate of Heaven.' Each stair mysteriously was meant, nor stood There always, but drawn up to Heaven sometimes Viewless; and underneath a bright sea flowed Of jasper, or of liquid pearl, whereon Who after came from earth, sailing arrived, Wafted by angels, or flew o'er the lake Rapt in a chariot drawn by fiery steeds. The stairs were then let down, whether to dare The fiend by easy ascent, or aggravate His sad exclusion from the doors of bliss: Direct against which opened from beneath, Just o'er the blissful seat of Paradise, A passage down to the earth, a passage wide. Wider by far than that of after times Over Mount Sion, and, though that were large,

Over the promised land to God so dear, By which, to visit oft those happy tribes, On high behests his angels to and fro Passed frequent, and his eye with choice regard From Paneas, the fount of Jordan's flood, To Beërsaba, where the Holy Land Borders on Egypt and the Arabian shore; So wide the opening seemed, where bounds were set To darkness, such as bound the ocean wave. Satan from hence, now on the lower stair, That scaled by steps of gold to Heaven-gate, Looks down with wonder at the sudden view Of all this world at once. As when a scout Through dark and desert ways with peril gone All night, at last by break of cheerful dawn Obtains the brow of some high-climbing hill, Which to his eye discovers unaware The goodly prospect of some foreign land First seen, or some renowned metropolis, With glistering spires and pinnacles adorned, Which now the rising sun glides with his beams: Such wonder seized, though after Heaven seen, The spirit malign, but much more envy seized, At sight of all this world beheld so fair. Round he surveys (and well might, where he stood So high above the circling eanopy Of night's extended shade), from eastern point Of Libra to the fleecy star that bears Andromeda far off Atlantic seas, Beyond the horizon; then from pole to pole He views in breadth, and without longer pause Down right into the world's first region throws His flight precipitant, and winds with ease Through the pure marble air his oblique way Amongst innumerable stars, that shone Stars distant, but nigh hand seemed other worlds; Or other worlds they seemed, or happy isles, Like those Hesperian gardens famed of old, Fortunate fields, and groves, and flowery vales; Thrice happy isles, but who dwelt happy there

He staid not to inquire: above them all The golden sun, in splendour likest Heaven, Allured his eye: thither his course he bends Through the calm firmament (but up or down. By centre, or eccentric, hard to tell, Or longitude), where the great luminary Aloof the vulgar constellations thick, That from his lordly eye keep distance due, Dispenses light from far; they as they move Their starry dance in numbers that compute Days, months, and years, towards his all-cheering lamp Turn swift their various motions, or are turned By his magnetic beam, that gently warms The universe, and to each inward part With gentle penetration, though unseen, Shoots invisible virtue even to the deep: So wondrously was set his station bright. There lands the fiend, a spot like which, perhaps, Astronomer in the sun's lucent orb Through his glazed optic tube yet never saw. The place he found beyond expression bright, Compared with aught on earth, metal or stone; Not all parts like, but all alike informed With radiant light, as glowing iron with fire; If metal, part seemed gold, part silver clear: If stone, carbuncle most, or chrysolite, Ruby or topaz, to the twelve that shone In Aaron's breastplate, and a stone besides Imagined rather oft than elsewhere seen, That stone, or like to that, which here below Philosophers in vain so long have sought; In vain, though by their powerful art they bind Volatile Hermes, and call up unbound In various shapes old Proteus from the sea, Drained through a limber to his native form. What wonder then if fields and regions here Breathe forth elixir pure, and rivers run Portable gold, when with one virtuous touch The arch-chemic sun, so far from us remote, Produces, w th terrestrial humour mixed.

Here in the dark so many precious things Of colour glorious and effect so rare? Here matter new to gaze the devil met Undazzled; far and wide his eye commands; For sight no obstacle found here, nor shade, But all sunshine, as when his beams at noon Culminate from the equator, as they now Shot upward still direct, whence no way round Shadow from body opaque can fall; and the air, Nowhere so clear, sharpened his visual ray To objects distant far, whereby he soon Saw within ken a glorious angel stand, The same whom John saw also in the sun: His back was turned, but not his brightness hid; Of beaming sunny rays a golden tiar Circled his head, nor less his locks behind Illustrious on his shoulders, fledge with wings, Lay waving round; on some great charge employed He seemed, or fixed in cogitation deep. Glad was the spirit impure, as now in hope To find who might direct his wandering flight To Paradise, the happy seat of man, His journey's end, and our beginning woe. But first he casts to change his proper shape, Which else might work him danger or delay: And now a stripling cherub he appears, Not of the prime, yet such as in his face Youth smiled celestial, and to every limb Suitable grace diffused, so well he feigned: Under a coronet his flowing hair In curls on either cheek played; wing he wore Of many a coloured plume, sprinkled with gold; His habit fit for speed succinct, and held Before his decent steps a silver wand. He drew not nigh unheard; the angel bright, Ere he drew high, his radiant visage turned, Admonished by his ear, and straight was known The archangel Uriel, one of the seven Who in God's presence, nearest to his throne, Stand ready at command, and are his eyes

That run through all the Heavens, or down to the earth Bear his swift errands, over moist and dry, O'er sea and land: him Satan thus accosts:

"Uriel, for thou of those seven spirits that stand In sight of God's high throne, gloriously bright, The first art wont his great authentic will Interpreter through highest Heaven to bring, Where all his sons thy embassy attend; And here art likeliest by supreme decree Like honour to obtain, and, as his eye To visit oft this new creation round; Unspeakable desire to see, and know All these his wondrous works, but chiefly man, His chief delight and favour, him for whom All these his works so wondrous he ordained, Hath brought me from the quires of cherubim Alone thus wandering. Brightest seraph, tell In which of all these shining orbs hath man His fixéd seat, or fixéd seat hath none, But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell; That I may find him, and with secret gaze Or open admiration him behold, On whom the great Creator hath bestowed Worlds, and on whom hath all these graces poured: That both in him and all things, as is meet, The universal Maker we may praise, Who justly hath driven out his rebel foes To deepest hell, and to repair that loss Created this new happy race of men To serve him better: wise are all his ways."

So spake the false dissembler unperceived;
For neither man nor angel can discern
Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks
Invisible, except to God alone,
By his permissive will, through Heaven and earth:
And oft, though wisdom wake, suspicion sleeps
At wisdom's gate, and to simplicity
Resigns her charge, while goodness thinks no ill
Where no ill seems: which now for once beguiled
Uriel, though regent of the sun, and held

The sharpest-sighted spirit of all in Heaven; Who to the fraudulent impostor foul In his uprightness answer thus returned:

"Fair angel, thy desire, which tends to know The works of God, thereby to glorify The great Work-Master, leads to no excess That reaches blame, but rather merits praise The more it seems excess, that led thee hither From thy empyreal mansion thus alone, To witness with thine eyes what some perhaps, Contented with report, hear only in Heaven: For wonderful indeed are all his works, Pleasant to know, and worthiest to be all Had in remembrance always with delight; But what created mind can comprehend Their number, or the wisdom infinite That brought them forth, but hid their causes deep? I saw when at his word the formless mass, This world's material mould, came to a heap: Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar Stood ruled, stood vast infinitude confined; Till at his second bidding darkness fled, Light shone, and order from disorder sprung: Swift to their several quarters hasted then The cumbrous elements, earth, flood, air, fire; And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven Flew upward, spirited with various forms, That rolled orbicular, and turned to stars Numberless, as thou seest, and how they move; Each had his place appointed, each his course; The rest in circuit walls this universe. Look downward on that globe, whose hither side With light from hence, though but reflected, shines; That place is earth, the seat of man; that light His day, which else, as the other hemisphere, Night would invade; but there the neighbouring moon (So call that opposite fair star) her aid Timely interposes, and her monthly round Still ending, still renewing, through mid Heaven, With borrowed light her countenance triform

Hence fills and empties to enlighten the earth,
And in her pale dominion checks the night.
That spot to which I point is Paradise,
Adam's abode, those lofty shades his bower.
Thy way thou canst not miss, me mine requires."
Thus said, he turned; and Satan, bowing low,
As to superior spirits is wont in Heaven,
Where honour due and reverence none neglects,
Took leave, and toward the coast of earth beneath,
Down from the ecliptic, sped with hoped success,
Throws his steep flight in many an airy wheel,
Nor stayed, till on Niphates' top he lights.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

SATAN, now in prospect of Eden, and nigh the place where he must now attempt the bold enterprise which he undertook alone against God and man, falls into many doubts with himself, and many passions, fear, envy, and despair; but at length confirms himself in evil, journeys on to Paradise, whose outward prospects and situation is described, overleaps the bounds, sits in the shape of a cormorant on the tree of life, as the highest in the garden, to look about him. The garden described : Satan's first sight of Adam and Eve; his wonder at their excellent form and happy state, but with resolution to work their fall; overhears their discourse, thence gathers that the tree of knowledge was forbidden them to eat of, under penalty of death; and thereon intends to found his temptation, by seducing them to transgress; then leaves them awhile, to know further of their state by some other means. Meanwhile, Uriel, descending on a sunbeam, warns Gabriel, who had in charge the gate of Paradise, that some evil spirit had escaped the deep, and passed at noon by his sphere in the shape of a good angel down to Paradise, discovered after by his furious gestures in the mount Gabriel promises to find him ere morning. Night coming on, Adam and Eve discourse of going to their rest: their bower described; their evening worship. drawing forth his bands of night-watch to walk the rounds of Paradise, appoints two strong angels to Adam's bower, lest the evil spirit should be there doing some harm to Adam or Eve sleeping; there they find him at the ear of Eve, tempting her in a dream, and bring him, though unwilling, to Gabriel; by whom questioned, he scornfully answers, prepares resistance, but, hindered by a sign from Heaven, flies out of Paradise.

OH for that warning voice, which he who saw
The Apocalypse, heard cry in Heaven aloud,
Then when the dragon, put to second rout,
Came furious down to be revenged on men,
"Woe to the inhabitants on earth!" that now,
While time was, our first parents had been warned
The coming of their secret foe, and 'scaped,
Haply so 'scaped his mortal snare: for now
Satan, now first inflamed with rage, came down,

The tempter ere the accuser of mankind, To wreak on innocent frail man his loss Of that first battle, and his flight to Hell: Yet not rejoicing in his speed, though bold Far off and fearless, nor with cause to boast, Begins his dire attempt; which, nigh the birth, Now rolling boils in his tumultuous breast, And like a devilish engine back recoils Upon himself; horror and doubt distract His troubled thoughts, and from the bottom stir The Hell within him; for within him Hell He brings, and round about him, nor from Hell One step no more than from himself can fly By change of place; now conscience wakes despair That slumbered, wakes the bitter memory Of what he was, what is, and what must be Worse; of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue. Sometimes towards Eden, which now in his view Lay pleasant, his grieved look he fixes sad; Sometimes towards Heaven, and the full blazing sun, Which now sat high in his meridian tower: Then much revolving, thus in sighs began:

"O thou, that, with surpassing glory crowned. Look'st from thy sole dominion, like the god Of this new world; at whose sight all the stars Hide their diminished heads; to thee I call, But with no friendly voice, and add thy name. O sun! to tell thee how I hate thy beams, That bring to my remembrance from what state I fell, how glorious once above thy sphere; Till pride and worse ambition threw me down, Warring in Heaven against Heaven's matchless King: Ah, wherefore? He deserved no such return From me, whom he created what I was In that bright eminence, and with his good Upbraided none; nor was his service hard. What could be less than to afford him praise, The easiest recompense, and pay him thanks? How due! yet all his good proved ill in me, And wrought but malice; lifted up so high

I sdeined subjection, and thought one step higher Would set me highest, and in a moment quit The debt immense of endless gratitude, So burdensome still paying, still to owe, Forgetful what from him I still received; And understood not that a grateful mind By owing owes not, but still pays, at once Indebted and discharged; what burden then? Oh, had his powerful destiny ordained Me some inferior angel, I had stood Then happy; no unbounded hope had raised Ambition. Yet why not? some other power As great might have aspired, and me, though mean, Drawn to his part; but other powers as great Fell not, but stand unshaken, from within Or from without, to all temptations armed. Hadst thou the same free will and power to stand? Thou hadst: whom hast thou then or what to accuse. But Heaven's free love dealt equally to all? Be then his love accursed, since love or hate, To me alike, it deals eternal woe. Nay, cursed be thou; since against his thy will Chose freely what it now so justly rues. Me miserable! which way shall I fly Infinite wrath and infinite despair? Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell; And in the lowest deep a lower deep Still threatening to devour me opens wide, To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven. Oh, then at last relent: is there no place Left for repentance, none for pardon left? None left but by submission; and that word Disdain forbids me, and my dread of shame Among the spirits beneath, whom I seduced With other promises and other vaunts Than to submit, boasting I could subdue The Omnipotent. Ay me! they little know How dearly I abide that boast so vain, Under what torments inwardly I groan, While they adore me on the throne of Hell.

With diadem and sceptre high advanced, The lower still I fall, only supreme In misery; such joy ambition finds. But say I could repent, and could obtain By act of grace my former state; how soon Would height recall high thoughts, how soon unsay What feigned submission swore! ease would recant Vows made in pain, as violent and void. For never can true reconcilement grow Where wounds of deadly hate have pierced so deep Which would but lead me to a worse relapse And heavier fall: so should I purchase dear Short intermission, bought with double smart. This knows my punisher; therefore as far From granting he, as I from begging peace: All hope excluded thus, behold instead Of us outcast, exiled, his new delight, Mankind created, and for him this world. So farewell hope, and with hope, farewell fear, Farewell remorse: all good to me is lost; Evil, be thou my good; by thee at least Divided empire with Heaven's King I hold, By thee, and more than half perhaps will reign; As man ere long and this new world shall know." Thus while he spake, each passion dimmed his face, Thrice changed with pale ire, envy and despair; Which marred his borrowed visage, and betraved Him counterfeit, if any eye beheld. For heavenly minds from such distempers foul Are ever clear. Whereof he soon aware,

Him counterfeit, if any eye beheld.

For heavenly minds from such distempers foul
Are ever clear. Whereof he soon aware,
Each perturbation smoothed with outward calm,
Artificer of fraud; and was the first
That practised falsehood under saintly show,
Deep malice to conceal, couched with revenge;
Yet not enough had practised to deceive
Uriel once warned; whose eye pursued him down
The way he went, and on the Assyrian mount
Saw him disfigured, more than could befall
Spirit of happy sort: his gestures fierce
He marked and mad demeanour, then alone,

As he supposed, all unobserved, unseen. So on he fares, and to the border comes Of Eden, where delicious Paradise, Now nearer, crowns with her enclosure green, As with a rural mound, the champaign head Of a steep wilderness, whose hairy sides With thicket overgrown, grotesque and wild, Access denied; and overhead up grew Insuperable height of loftiest shade, Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm, A sylvan scene, and as the ranks ascend Shade above shade, a woody theatre Of stateliest view. Yet higher than their tops The verdurous wall of Paradise up-sprung: Which to our general sire gave prospect large Into his nether empire neighbouring round. And higher than that wall a circling row Of goodliest trees loaden with fairest fruit, Blossoms and fruits at once, of golden hue, Appeared, with gay enamelled colours mixed: On which the sun more glad impressed his beams Than in fair evening cloud, or humid bow, When God hath showered the earth; so lovely seemed That landscape; and of pure, now purer air Meets his approach, and to the heart inspires Vernal delight and joy, able to drive All sadness but despair: now gentle gales, Fanning their odoriferous wings, dispense Native perfumes, and whisper whence they stole Those balmy spoils. As when to them who sail Beyond the Cape of Hope, and now are past Mozambic, off at sea north-east winds blow Sabean odours from the spicy shore Of Araby the Blest; with such delay Well pleased they slack their course, and many a league Cheered with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles: So entertained those odorous sweets the fiend Who came their bane, though with them better pleased Than Asmodeus with the fishy fume, That drove him, though enamoured, from the spouse

Of Tobit's sen, and with a vengeance sent From Media post to Egypt, there fast bound.

Now to the ascent of that steep savage hill Satan had journeyed on, pensive and slow; But further way found none, so thick entwined, As one continued brake, the undergrowth Of shrubs and tangling bushes had perplexed All path of man or beast that passed that way: One gate there only was, and that looked east On the other side: which, when the arch-felon saw. Due entrance he disdained, and in contempt, At one slight bound high overleaped all bound Of hill or highest wall, and sheer within Lights on his feet. As when a prowling wolf, Whom hunger drives to seek new haunt for prev. Watching where shepherds pen their flocks at eve In hurdled cotes amid the field secure, Leaps o'er the fence with ease into the fold: Or as a thief bent to unhoard the cash Of some rich burgher, whose substantial door, Cross-barred and bolted fast, fear no assault, In at the window climbs, or o'er the tiles: So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold; So since into his church lewd hirelings climb. Thence up he flew, and on the tree of life, The middle tree and highest there that grew, Sat like a cormorant: yet not true life Thereby regained, but sat devising death To them who lived; nor on the virtue thought Of that life-giving plant, but only used For prospect, what, well used, had been the pledge Of immortality. So little knows Any, but God alone, to value right The good before him, but perverts best things To worst abuse, or to their meanest use. Beneath him with new wonder now he views To all delight of human sense exposed In narrow room Nature's whole wealth, yea, more, A Heaven on earth: for blissful Paradise Of God the garden was, by him in the east

Of Eden planted; Eden stretched her line From Auran eastward to the royal towers Of great Seleucia, built by Grecian kings, Or where the sons of Eden long before Dwelt in Telassar: in this pleasant soil His far more pleasant garden God ordained; Out of the fertile ground he caused to grow All trees of noblest kind for sight, smell, taste; And all amid them stood the tree of life, High eminent, blooming ambrosial fruit Of vegetable gold; and next to life, Our death, the tree of knowledge, grew fast by, Knowledge of good, bought dear by knowing ill. Southward through Eden went a river large, Nor changed his course, but through the shaggy hill Passed underneath engulfed; for God had thrown That mountain as his garden mould high raised Upon the rapid current, which through veins Of porous earth with kindly thirst up-drawn, Rose a fresh fountain, and with many a rill Watered the garden; thence united fell Down the steep glade, and met the nether flood, Which from his darksome passage now appears, And now divided into four main streams, Runs diverse, wandering many a famous realm And country, whereof here needs no account; But rather to tell how, if art could tell, How from that sapphire fount the crispéd brooks, Rolling on orient pearl and sands of gold, With mazy error under pendent shades Ran nectar, visiting each plant, and fed Flowers worthy of Paradise, which not nice art In beds and curious knots, but Nature boon Poured forth profuse on hill, and dale, and plain, Both where the morning sun first warmly smote The open field, and where the unpierced shade Imbrowned the noontide bowers: thus was this place A happy rural seat of various view; Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and palm, Others whose fruit burnished with golden rind,

Hung amiable (Hesperian fables true, If true, here only), and of delicious taste. Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks Grazing the tender herb, were interposed, Or palmy hillock; or the flowery lap Of some irriguous valley spread her store, Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose: Another side, umbrageous grots and caves Of cool recess, o'er which the mantling vine Lays forth her purple grape, and gently creeps Luxuriant: meanwhile murmuring waters fall Down the slope hills, dispersed, or in a lake, That to the fringéd bank with myrtle crowned Her crystal mirror holds, unite their streams. The birds their quire apply; airs, vernal airs, Breathing the smell of field and grove, attune The trembling leaves, while universal Pan, Knit with the Graces and the Hours in dance, Led on the eternal Spring. Not that fair field Of Enna, where Prosérpine gathering flowers, Herself a fairer flower, by gloomy Dis Was gathered, which cost Ceres all that pain Te seek her through the world; nor that sweet grove Of Daphne by Orontes, and the inspired Castalian spring, might with the Paradise Of Eden strive; nor that Nyseian isle Girt with the river Triton, where old Cham, Whom Gentiles Ammon call, and Lybian Jove. Hid Amalthea and her florid son, Young Bacchus, from his stepdame Rhea's eye; Nor where Abassin kings their issue guard, Mount Amara, though this by some supposed True Paradise, under the Ethiop line, By Nilus' head, enclosed with shining rock, A whole day's journey high, but wide remote From this Assyrian garden, where the fiend Saw undelighted all delight, all kind Of living creatures, new to sight, and strange. Two of far nobler shade, erect and tall, ~ 15 Godlike erect, with native honour clad,

In naked majesty, seemed lords of all, And worthy seemed; for in their looks divine The image of their glorious Maker shone; Truth, wisdom, sanctitude severe and pure (Severe, but in true filial freedom placed), Whence true authority in men; though both Not equal, as their sex not equal seemed; For contemplation he and valour formed; For softness she, and sweet attractive grace; He for God only, she for God in him: His fair large front, and eye sublime, declared Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clustering, but not beneath his shoulders broad: She, as a veil, down to the slender waist Her unadornéd golden tresses wore Dishevelled, but in wanton ringlets waved, As the vine curls her tendrils, which implied Subjection, but inquired with gently sway, And by her yielded, by him best received, Yielded with coy submission, modest pride, And sweet, reluctant, amorous delay. Nor those mysterious parts were then concealed; Then was not guilty shame: dishonest shame Of nature's works, honour dishonourable, Sin-bred, how have ye troubled all mankind With shows instead, mere shows of seeming pure, And banished from man's life his happiest life, Simplicity and spotless innocence! So passed they naked on, nor shunned The sight of God or angel, for they thought no ill: So hand in hand they passed, the loveliest pair That ever since in love's embraces met; Adam, the goodliest man of men since born, His sons; the fairest of her daughters Eve. Under a tuft of shade that on a green Stood whispering soft, by a fresh fountain side They sat them down; and, after no more toil Of their sweet gardening labour than sufficed To recommend cool zephyr, and made ease

More easy, wholesome thirst and appetite More grateful, to their supper fruits they fell; Nectarine fruits, which the compliant boughs Yielded them; sidelong as they sat recline On the soft downy bank damasked with flowers: The savory pulp they chew, and in the rind Still as they thirsted, scoop the brimming stream: Nor gentle purpose, nor endearing smiles Wanted, nor youthful dalliance as beseems Fair couple, linked in happy nuptial league, Alone as they. About them frisking played All beasts of the earth, since wild, and of all chase In wood or wilderness, forest or den; Sporting the lion ramped, and in his paw Dandled the kid; bears, tigers, ounces, pards, Gambolled before them; the unwieldy elephant, To make them mirth, used all his might, and wreathed His lithe proboscis; close the serpent sly Insinuating, wove with Gordian twine His braided train, and of his fatal guile Gave proof unheeded; others on the grass Couched, and now filled with pasture gazing sat, Or bedward ruminating; for the sun, Declined, was hastening now with prone career To the ocean isles, and in the ascending scale Of Heaven, the stars that usher evening rose: When Satan, still in gaze, as first he stood, Scarce thus at length failed speech recovered sad:

"O Hell! what do mine eyes with grief behold!
Into our room of bliss thus high advanced
Creatures of other mould, earth-born, perhaps,
Not spirits, yet to heavenly spirits bright
Little inferior; whom my thoughts pursue
With wonder, and could love, so lively shines
In them divine resemblance, and such grace
The hand that formed them on their shape hath poured.
Ah! gentle pair, ye little think how nigh
Your change approaches, when all these delights
Will vanish, and deliver ye to woe,
More woe, the more your taste is now of joy;

Happy, but for so happy ill secured Long to continue, and this high seat, your heaven, Ill fenced for Heaven to keep out such a foe As now is entered; yet no purposed foe To you, whom I could pity thus forlorn, Though I unpitied: league with you I seek, And mutual amity so straight, so close, That I with you must dwell, or you with me Henceforth: my dwelling haply may not please, Like this fair Paradise, your sense; yet such Accept your Maker's work; he gave it me, Which I as freely give: Hell shall unfold To entertain you two, her widest gates, And send forth all her kings; there will be room Not like these narrow limits, to receive Your numerous offspring; if no better place, Thank him who puts me loth to this revenge On you who wrong me not for him who wronged. And should I at your harmless innocence Melt, as I do, yet public reason just, Honour and empire, with revenge enlarged, By conquering this new world, compels me now To do what else, though damned, I should abhor."

So spake the fiend, and with necessity, The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds. Then from his lofty stand on that high tree Down he alights among the sportful herd Of those four-footed kinds, himself now one, Now other, as their shape served best his end Nearer to view his prey, and unespied To mark what of their state he more might learn By word or action marked: about them round A lion now he stalks with fiery glare; Then as a tiger, who by chance hath spied In some purlieu two gentle fawns at play, Straight couches close, then rising, changes oft His couchant watch, as one who chose his ground, Whence rushing he might surest seize them both, Griped in each paw; when Adam, first of men, To first of women, Eve, thus moving speech,

Turned him, all ear to hear new utterance flow: "Sole partner, and sole part of all these joys, Dearer thyself than all; needs must the Power That made us, and for us this ample world, Be infinitely good, and of his good As liberal, and free as infinite: That raised us from the dust, and placed us here In all this happiness, who at his hand Have nothing merited, nor can perform Aught whereof he hath need, he who requires From us no other service than to keep This one, this easy charge, of all the trees In Paradise that bear delicious fruit So various, not to taste that only tree Of knowledge, planted by the tree of life; So near grows death to life, what'er death is, Some dreadful thing, no doubt; for well thou knowest God hath pronounced it death to taste that tree, The only sign of our obedience left Among so many signs of power and rule Conferr'd upon us, and dominion given Over all other creatures that possess Then let us not think hard Earth, air, and sea. One easy prohibition, who enjoy Free leave so large to all things else, and choice Unlimited of manifold delights: But let us ever praise him, and extol His bounty, following our delightful task, To prune these growing plants, and tend these flowers, Which were it toilsome, yet with thee were sweet."

To whom thus Eve replied: "O thou, for whom And from whom I was formed, flesh of thy flesh, And without whom am to no end, my guide And head, what thou hast said is just and right. For we to him indeed all praises owe, And daily thanks; I chiefly, who enjoy So far the happier lot, enjoying the Pre-eminent by so much odds, while thou Like consort to thyself canst no where find. That day I oft remember, when from sleep

I first awaked, and found myself reposed Under a shade on flowers, much wondering where And what I was, whence thither brought, and how. Not distant far from thence a murmuring sound Of waters issued from a cave, and spread Into a liquid plain, then stood unmoved Pure as the expanse of Heaven; I thither went With unexperienced thought, and laid me down On the green bank, to look into the clear Smooth lake, that to me seemed another sky. As I bent down to look, just opposite A shape within the watery gleam appeared, Bending to look on me; I started back, It started back; but pleased I soon returned, Pleased it returned as soon with answering looks Of sympathy and love; there I had fixed Mine eyes till now, and pined with vain desire, Had not a voice thus warned me: 'What thou seest, What there thou seest, fair creature, is thyself; With thee it came and goes; but follow me, And I will bring thee where no shadow stays Thy coming, and thy soft embraces, he Whose image thou art; him thou shalt enjoy Inseparably thine, to him shalt bear Multitudes like thyself, and thence be called Mother of human race.' What could I do. But follow straight, invisibly thus led? Till I espied thee, fair indeed, and tall, Under a plantain; yet methought less fair, Less winning soft, less amiably mild, Than that smooth watery image; back I turned; Thou following criedst aloud, 'Return, fair Eve, Whom fliest thou? whom thou fliest, of him thou art, His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart, Substantial life, to have thee by my side Henceforth an individual solace dear; Part of my soul, I seek thee, and thee claim My other half.' With that thy gentle hand Seized mine; I yielded, and from that time see

How beauty is excelled by manly grace, And wisdom, which alone is truly fair."

So spake our general mother, and with eyes
Of conjugal attraction unreproved,
And meek surrender, half-embracing leaned
On our first father; half her swelling breast
Naked met his under the flowing gold
Of her loose tresses hid: he in delight
Both of her beauty aud submissive charms,
Smiled with superior love, as Jupiter
On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds
That shed May flowers; and pressed her matron lip
With kisses pure: aside the devil turned
For envy, yet with jealous leer malign
Eyed them askance, and to himself thus 'plained:

"Sight hateful, sight tormenting! thus these two, Imparadised in one another's arms, The happier Eden, shall enjoy their fill Of bliss on bliss; while I to Hell am thrust. Where neither joy nor love, but fierce desire, Among our other torments not the least, Still unfulfilled with pain of longing pines. Yet let me not forget what I have gained From their own mouths; all is not theirs, it seems; One fatal tree there stands, of knowledge called, Forbidden them to taste: knowledge forbiden? Suspicious, reasonless. Why should their Lord Envy them that? Can it be sin to know? Can it be death? And do they only stand By ignorance? Is that their happy state, The proof of their obedience and their faith? O, fair foundation laid whereon to build Their ruin! Hence I will excite their minds With more desire to know, and to reject Envious commands, invented with design To keep them low, whom knowledge might exalt Equal with gods: aspiring to be such, They tast and die: what likelier can ensue? But first with narrow search I must walk round This garden, and no corner leave unspied;

A chance but chance may lead where I may meet Some wandering spirit of Heaven by fountain side, Or in thick shade retired, from him to draw What further would be learned. Live while ye may, Yet happy pair; enjoy, till I return, Short pleasures, for long woes are to succeed."

So saying, his proud step he scornful turned, But with sly circumspection, and began Through wood, through waste, o'er hill, o'er dale, his roam. Meanwhile in utmost longitude, where Heaven With earth and ocean meets, the setting sun Slowly descended, and with right aspect Against the eastern gate of Paradise Levelled his evening rays: it was a rock Of alabaster, piled up to the clouds, Conspicuous far, winding with one ascent Accessible from earth, one entrance high; The rest was craggy cliff, that overhung Still as it rose, impossible to climb. Betwixt these rocky pillars Gabriel sat, Chief of the angelic guards, awaiting night; About him exercised heroic games The unarmed youth of Heaven, but, nigh at hand, Celestial armoury, shields, helms, and spears, Hung high with diamond flaming, and with gold. Thither came Uriel, gliding through the even On a sunbeam, swift as a shooting star In autumn thwarts the night, when vapours fired Impress the air, and shows the mariner From what point of his compass to beware Impetuous winds: he thus began in haste:

Gabriel, to thee thy course by lot hath given Charge and strict watch, that to this happy place No evil thing approach or enter in.

This day at height of noon came to my sphere A spirt, zealous, as he seemed, to know More of the Almighty's works, and chiefly man, God's latest image: I described his way

Bent all on speed, and marked his airy gait; But in the mount that lies from Eden north, Where he first lighted, soon discerned his looks Alien from Heaven, with passions foul obscured: Mine eye pursued him still, but under shade Lost sight of him: one of the banished crew, I fear, hath ventured from the deep, to raise New troubles; him thy care must be to find."

To whom the wingéd warrior thus returned:
"Uriel, no wonder if thy perfect sight,
Amid the sun's bright circle where thou sitt'st,
See far and wide: in at this gate none pass
The vigilance here placed, but such as come
Well known from Heaven; and since meridian hour
No creature thence: if spirit of other sort,
So minded, have o'erleaped these earthy bounds
On purpose, hard thou knowest it to exclude
Spiritual substance with corporeal bar.
But if within the circuit of these walks,
In whatsoever shape he lurk, of whom
Thou tell'st, by morrow dawning I shall know."

So promised he; and Uriel to his charge Returned on that bright beam, whose point now raised Bore him slope downward to the sun, now fallen Beneath the Azores; whether the prime orb, Incredible how swift, had thither rolled Diurnal, or this less volubil earth, By shorter flight to the east, had left him there Arraying with reflected purple and gold The clouds that on his western throne attend.

Now came still evening on, and twilight gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad;
Silence accompanied; for beast and bird,
They to their grassy couch, these to their nests
Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale;
She all night long her amorous descant sung;
Silence was pleased: now glowed the firmament
With living sapphires: Hesperus, that led
The starry host, rode brightest, till the moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length,
Apparent queen, unveiled her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.

When Adam thus to Eve: "Fair consort, the hour Of night, and all things now retired to rest, Mind us of light repose; since God hath set Labour and rest, as day and night, to men Successive; and the timely dew of sleep, Now falling with soft slumbrous weight, inclines Our eyelids: other creatures all day long Rove idle unemployed, and less need rest; Man hath his daily work of body or mind Appointed, which declares his dignity, And the regard of Heaven on all his ways: While other animals inactive range, And of their doings God takes no account. To-morrow, ere fresh morning streak the east With first approach of light, we must be risen, And at our pleasant labour, to reform You flowery arbours, youder alleys green, Our walk at noon, with branches overgrown, That mock our scant manuring, and require More hands than ours to lop their wanton growth: Those blossoms also, and those drooping gums, That lie bestrown, unsightly and unsmooth, Ask riddance, if we mean to tread with ease; Meanwhile, as nature wills, night bids us rest." To whom thus Eve, with perfect beauty adorned: " My author and disposer, what thou bidd'st Unargued I obey; so God ordains; God is thy law, thou mine: to know no more Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise. With thee conversing I forget all time; All seasons and their change, all please alike. Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet, With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun, When first on this delightful land he spreads His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower, Glistering with dew; fragrant the fertile earth After soft showers; and sweet the coming on Of grateful evening mild; then silent night With this her solemn bird, and this fair moon,

And these the gems of Heaven, her starry train:

But neither breath of morn, when she ascends
With charm of earliest birds; nor rising sun
On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit, flower,
Glistering with dew; nor fragrance after showers;
Nor grateful evening mild; nor silent night
With this her solemn bird; nor walk by moon,
Or glittering starlight, without thee is sweet.
But wherefore all night long shine these? For whom
This glorious sight, when sleep hath shut all eyes?"

To whom our general ancestor replied: "Daughter of God and man, accomplished Eve, These have their course to finish round the earth, By morrow evening, and from land to land In order, though to nations yet unborn, Ministering light prepared, they set and rise; Lest total darkness should by night regain Her old possession, and extinguish life In nature and all things, which these soft fires Not only enlighten, but with kindly heat Of various influence foment and warm. Temper or nourish, or in part shed down Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow On earth, made hereby apter to receive Perfection from the sun's more potent ray. These, then, though unbeheld in deep of night, Shine not in vain; nor think, though men were none, That Heaven would want spectators, God want praise: Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth Unseen, both when we wake and when we sleep: All these with ceaseless praise his works behold Both day and night. How often from the steep Of echoing hill or thicket have we heard Celestial voices to the midnight air, Sole, or responsive each to other's note, Singing their great Creator! Oft in bands While they keep watch, or nightly rounding walk, With heavenly touch of instrumental sounds In full harmonic number joined, their songs Divide the night, and lift our thoughts to Heaven."

Thus talking, hand in hand alone they passed

On to their blissful bower; it was a place Chosen by the sovereign Planter, when he framed All things to man's delightful use; the roof Of thickest covert was inwoven shade Laurel and myrtle, and what higher grew Of firm and fragrant leaf; on either side Acanthus, and each odorous bushy shrub, Fenced up the verdant wall; each beauteous flower; Iris all hues, roses, and jessamine, Reared high their flourished heads between, and wrought Mosaic; underfoot the voilet, Crocus, and hyacinth with rich inlay Broidered the ground, more coloured than with stone Of costliest emblem: other creature here, Beast, bird, insect, or worm, durst enter none: Such was their awe of man. In shadier bower, More sacred and sequestered, though but feigned, Pan or Sylvanus never slept, nor nymph Nor faunus haunted. Here in close recess, With flowers, garlands, and sweet-smelling herbs, Espouséd Eve decked first her nuptial bed, And heavenly quires the hymenæan sung, What day the genial angel to our sire Brought her in naked beauty more adorned, More levely than Pandora, whom the gods Endowed with all their gifts, and oh! too like In sad event, when to the unwiser son Of Japhet brought by Hermes, she ensnared Mankind with her fair looks, to be avenged On him who had stole Jove's authentic fire. Thus at their shady lodge arrived, both stood,

Thus at their shady lodge arrived, both stood,
Both turned, and under open sky adored
The God that made both sky, air, earth, and heaven,
Which they beheld; the moon's resplendent globe,
And starry pole: "Thou also madest the night,
Maker Omnipotent, and thou the day,
Which we in our appointed work employed
Have finished, happy in our mutual help
And mutual love, the crown of all our bliss,
Ordained by thee, and this delicious place,

For us too large, where thy abundance wants Partakers, and uncropt falls to the ground. But thou hast promised from us two a race To fill the earth, who shall with us extol Thy goodness infinite, both when we wake, And when we seek, as now, thy gift of sleep."

This said unanimous, and other rites Observing none, but adoration pure, Which God likes best, into their inmost bower, Handed they went; and, eased the putting off These troublesome disguises which we wear, Straight side by side were laid; nor turned, I ween, Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites Mysterious of connubial love refused; Whatever hypocrites austerely talk Of purity, and place, and innocence, Defaming as impure what God declares Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all. Our Maker bids increase; who bids abstain But our destoyer, foe to God and man? Hail, wedded love! mysterious law, true source Of human offspring, sole propriety In Paradise of all things common else. By thee adulterous lust was driven from men Among the bestial herds to range; by thee, Founded in reason, loyal, just and pure, Relations dear, and all the charities Of father, son, and brother first were known. Far be it that I should write thee sin or blame, Or think thee unbefitting holiest place; Perpetual fountain of domestic sweets, Whose bed is undefiled and chaste pronounced, Present, past, as saints and patriarchs used. Here love his golden shafts employs, here lights His constant lamp, and waves his purple wings, Reigns here and revels; not in the bought smile Of harlots, loveless, joyless, unendeared, Casual fruition; nor in court amours, Mixed dance, or wanton mask, midnight ball. Or serenade, which the starved lover sings

To his proud fair, best quitted with disdain.
These, lulled by nightingales, embracing slept,
And on their naked limbs the flowery roof
Showered roses, which the morn repaired. Sleep on,
Blest pair; and oh! yet happiest, if ye seek
No happier state, and know to know no more.

Now had night measured with her shadowy cone Halfway up-hill this vast sublunar vault, And from their ivory port the cherubim, Forth issuing at the accustomed hour, stood armed To their night watches in warlike parade, When Gabriel to his next in power thus spake:

"Uzziel, half these draw off, and coast the south With strictest watch; these other wheel the north; Our circuit meets full west." As flame they part, Half wheeling to the shield, half to the spear. From these, two strong and subtle spirits he called, That near him stood, and gave them thus in charge:

"Ithuriel and Zephon, with winged speed
Search through this garden; leave unsearched no nook;
But chiefly where those two fair creatures lodge,
Now laid, perhaps, asleep, secure of harm.
This evening from the sun's decline arrived
Who tells of some infernal spirit seen
Hitherward bent (who could have thought?) escaped
The bars of Hell, on errand bad no doubt:
Such where ye find, seize fast, and hither bring."
So saying, on he led his radiant files,

So saying, on he led his radiant files,
Dazzling the moon: these to the bower direct
In search of whom they sought; him there they found
Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve,
Assaying by his devilish art to reach
The organs of her fancy, and with them forge
Illusions as he list, phantasms and dreams,
Or if, inspiring venom, he might taint
The animal spirits that from pure blood arise
Like gentle breaths from rivers pure, thence raise
At least distempered, discontented thoughts,
Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires,
Blown up with high conceits engendering pride.

Him thus intent, Ithuriel with his spear Touched lightly; for no falsehood can endure Touch of celestial temper, but returns Of force to its own likeness: up he starts, Discovered and surprised. As when a spark Lights on a heap of nitrous powder, laid Fit for the tun some magazine to store Against a rumored war, the smutty grain, With sudden blaze diffused, inflames the air: So started up in his own shape the fiend. Back stepped those two fair angels, half amazed So sudden to behold the grisly king; Yet thus, unmoved with fear, accost him soon:

"Which of those rebel spirits adjudged to Hell Comest thou, escaped thy prison? and, transformed, Why satt'st thou like an enemy in wait,

Here watching at the head of these that sleep?" "Know ye not then," said Satan, filled with scorn, "Know ye not me? Ye knew me once no mate For you, there sitting where ye durst not soar: Not to know me argues yourselves unknown, The lowest of your throng; or if ye know,

Why ask ye, and superfluous begin Your message, like to end as much in vain?"

To whom thus Zephon, answering scorn with scorn: "Think not, revolted spirit, thy shape the same, Or undiminished brightness to be known, As when thou stood'st in Heaven, upright and pure; That glory then, when thou no more wast good, Departed from thee; and thou resemblest now Thy sin and place of doom obscure and foul. But come, for thou, be sure, shalt give account To him who sent us, whose charge is to keep This place inviolable, and these from harm."

So spake the cherub; and his grave rebuke, Severe in youthful beauty, added grace Invincible: abashed the devil stood. And felt how awful goodness is, and saw Virtue in her shape how lovely; saw, and pined His loss; but chiefly to find here observed

His lustre visibly impaired; yet seemed Undaunted. "If I must contend," said he, "Best with the best, the sender, not the sent, Or all at once; more glory will be won, Or less be lost." "Thy fear," said Zephon bold, "Will save us trial what the least can do Single against thee wicked, and thence weak,"

The fiend replied not, overcome with rage;
But, like a proud steed reined, went haughty on,
Champing his iron curb: to strive or fly
He held it vain: awe from above had quelled
His heart, not else dismayed. Now drew they nigh
The western point, where those half-rounding guards
Just met, and, closing, stood in squadron joined,
Awaiting next command. To whom their chief,
Gabriël, from the front thus called aloud:

"O friends! I hear the tread of nimble feet Hasting this way, and now by glimpse discern Ithuriel and Zephon through the shade, And with them comes a third of regal port, But faded splendor wan; who, by his gait And fierce demeanour, seems the prince of Hell, Not likely to part hence without contést; Stand firm, for in his look defiance lours."

He scarce had ended, when these two approached, And brief related whom they brought, where found, How busied, in what form and posture couched.

To whom with stern regard thus Gabriel spake:
"Why hast thou, Satan, broke the bounds prescribed
To thy transgressions, and disturbed the charge
Of others, who approve not to transgress
By thy example, but have power and right
To question thy bold entrance on this place;
Employed, it seems, to violate sleep, and those Whose dwelling God hath planted here in bliss?"

To whom thus Satan with contemptuous brow: "Gabriel, thou hadst in Heaven the esteem of wise, And such I held thee; but this question asked Puts me in doubt. Lives there who loves his pain? Who would not, finding way, break loose from Hell,

Though thither doomed? Thou wouldst thyself, no doubt, And boldly venture to whatever place
Farthest from pain, where thou mightst hope to change
Torment with ease, and soonest recompense
Dole with delight, which in this place I sought;
To thee no reason, who know'st only good,
But evil hast not tried; and wilt object
His will who bound us? Let him surer bar
His iron gates, if he intends our stay
In that dark durance: thus much what was asked.
The rest is true, they found me where they say;
But that implies not violence or harm."

Thus he in scorn. The warlike angel moved. Disdainfully half smiling, thus replied: "O loss of one in Heaven, to judge of wise, Since Satan fell, whom folly overthrew, And now returns him from his prison 'scaped, Gravely in doubt whether to hold them wise Or not, who ask what boldness brought him hither Unlicensed from his bounds in Hell prescribed; So wise he judges it to fly from pain However, and to 'scape his punishment. So judge thou still, presumptuous, till the wrath, Which thou incurr'st by flying, meet thy flight Sevenfold, and scourge that wisdom back to Hell, Which taught thee vet no better, that no pain Can equal anger infinite provoked. But wherefore thou alone? Wherefore with thee Came not all Hell broke loose? Is pain to them Less pain, less to be fled; or thou than they Less hardy to endure? Courageous chief! The first in flight from pain, hadst thou alleged To thy deserted host this cause of flight, Thou surely hadst not come sole fugitive."

To which the fiend thus answered, frowning stern: "Not that I less endure or shrink from pain, Insulting angel; well thou know'st I stood Thy fiercest, when in battle to thy aid The blasting volleyed thunder made all speed, And seconded thy else not dreaded spear.

But still thy words at random, as before, Argue thy inexperience what behoves From hard assays and ill successes past, A faithful leader, not to hazard all Through ways of danger by himself untried: I, therefore, I alone first undertook To wing the desolate abyss, and spy This new created world, whereof in Hell Fame is not silent, here in hope to find Better abode, and my afflicted powers To settle here on earth, or in mid air; Though for possession put to try once more What thou and thy gay legions dare against; Whose easier business were to serve their Lord High up in Heaven, with songs to hymn his throne, And practised distances to cringe, not fight."

To whom the warrior angel soon replied: "To say and straight unsay, pretending first Wise to fly pain, professing next the spy, Argues no leader, but a liar traced, Satan, and couldst thou faithful add? O name, O sacred name of faithfulness profaned! Faithful to whom? to thy rebellious crew? Army of fiends, fit body to fit head. Was this your discipline and faith engaged, Your military obedience, to dissolve Allegiance to the acknowledged power supreme? And thou, sly hypocrite, who now wouldst seem Patron of liberty, who more than thou Once fawned, and cringed, and servilely adored Heaven's awful monarch? wherefore, but in hope To dispossess him, and thyself to reign? But mark what I arreed thee now: Avaunt! Fly thither whence thou fled'st: if from this hour Within these hallowed limits thou appear, Back to the infernal pit I drag thee chained, And seal thee so, as henceforth not to scorn The facile gates of Hell, too slightly barred." So threatened he; but Satan to no threats

Gave heed, but waxing more in rage replied:

"Then when I am thy captive talk of chains, Proud limitary cherub! But ere then Far heavier load thyself expect to feel From my prevailing arm, though Heaven's King Ride on thy wings, and thou, with thy compeers, Used to the yoke, draw'st his triumphant wheels In progress through the road of Heaven star-paved."

While thus he spake, the angelic squadron bright Turned fiery red, sharpening in moonéd horns Their phalanx, and began to hem him round With ported spears, as thick as when a field Of Ceres, ripe for harvest, waving bends Her bearded grove of ears, which way the wind Sways them; the careful ploughman doubting stands, Lest on the threshing floor his hopeful sheaves Prove chaff. On the other side, Satan, alarmed, Collecting all his might, dilated stood, Like Teneriff or Atlas, unremoved: His stature reached the sky, and on his crest Sat horror plumed; nor wanted in his grasp What seemed both spears and shield. Now dreadful deeds

Might have ensued; not only Paradise, In this commotion, but the starry cope Of Heaven, perhaps, or all the elements At least had gone to wrack, disturbed and torn With violence of this conflict, had not soon The Eternal, to prevent such horrid fray, Hung forth in Heaven his golden scales, yet seen Betwixt Astrea and the Scorpion sign, Wherein all things created first he weighed, The pendulous round earth with balanced air In counterpoise; now ponders all events, Battles and realms: in these he put two weights, The sequel each of parting and of fight; The latter quick up flew, and kicked the beam, Which Gabriel spying, thus bespake the fiend: "Satan, I know thy strength, and thou know'st mine, Neither our own, but given; what folly, then,

To boast what arms can do, since thine no more

Than Heaven permits, nor mine, though doubled now To trample thee as mire! For proof look up, And read thy lot in you celestial sign, Where thou art weighed, and shown how light, how weak, If thou resist. The fiend looked up, and knew His mounted scale aloft: nor more; but fled Murmuring, and with him fled the shades of night.

BOOK V.

THE ARGUMENT.

Morning approached, Eve relates to Adam her troublesome dream; he likes it not, yet comforts her: they come forth to their day labors: their morning hymn at the door of their bower. God, to render man inexcusable, sends Raphael to admonish him of his obedience, of his free estate, of his enemy near at hand, who he is, and why his enemy, and whatever else may avail Adam to know. Raphael comes down to Paradise; his appearance described; his coming discerned by Adam afar off, sitting at the door of his bower; he goes out to meet him, brings him to his lodge, entertains him with the choicest fruits of Paradise got together by Eve; their discourse at table: Raphael performs his message, minds Adam of his state and of his enemy; relates, at Adam's request, who that enemy is, and how he came to be so, beginning from his first revolt in Heaven, and the occasion thereof; how he drew his legions after him to the parts of the north, and there incited them to rebel with him, persuading all but only Abdiel, a seraph, who in argument dissuades and opposes him, then forsakes him.

Now morn her rosy steps in the eastern clime Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl, When Adam waked, so customed; for his sleep Was airy light, from pure digestion bred, And temperate vapours bland, which the only sound Of leaves and fuming rills, Aurora's fan, Lightly dispersed, and the shrill matin song Of birds on every bough; so much the more His wonder was to find unwakened Eve With tresses discomposed, and glowing cheek, As through unquiet rest: he on his side Leaning, half raised, with looks of cordial love Hung over her enamoured, and beheld Beauty, which, whether waking or asleep, Shot forth peculiar graces; then with voice Mild, as when Zephyrus on Flora breathes. Her hand soft touching, whispered thus: "Awake,

My fairest, my espoused, my latest found, Heaven's last best gift, my ever-new delight, Awake; the morning shines, and the fresh field Calls us; we lose the prime to mark how spring Our tended plants, how blows the citron grove, What drops the myrrh, and what the balmy reed, How nature paints her colours, how the bee Sits on the bloom extracting liquid sweet."

Such whispering waked her, but with startled eye On Adam, whom embracing, thus she spake:

"O sole in whom my thoughts find all repose, My glory, my perfection! glad I see Thy face, and morn returned; for I this night (Such night till this I never passed) have dreamed, If dreamed, not as I oft am wont, of thee, Works of day past, or morrow's next design, But of offence and trouble, which my mind Knew never till this irksome night: methought Close at mine ear one called me forth to walk, With gentle voice; I thought it thine; it said, 'Why sleep'st thou, Eve? Now is the pleasant time, The cool, the silent, save where silence yields To the night-warbling bird, that now awake Tunes sweetest his love-laboured song; now reigns Full orbed the moon, and with more pleasing light Shadowy sets off the face of things; in vain, If none regard; Heaven wakes with all his eyes, Whom to behold but thee, nature's desire? In whose sight all things joy, with ravishment Attracted by the beauty still to gaze.' I rose as at thy call, but found thee not; To find thee I directed then my walk; And on, methought, alone I passed through ways That brought me on a sudden to the tree Of interdicted knowledge: fair it seemed, Much fairer to my fancy than by day: And as I wondering looked, beside it stood One shaped and winged like one of those from Heaven By us oft seen; his dewy locks distilled Ambrosia; on that tree he also gazed;

And 'O fair plant,' said he, 'with fruit surcharged, Deigns none to ease thy load, and taste thy sweet, Nor God, nor man? Is knowledge so despised? Or envy, or what reserve forbids to taste? Forbid who will, none shall from me withhold Longer thy offered good: why else set here?" This said, he paused not, but with venturous arm He plucked, he tasted; me damp horror chilled At such bold words youched with a deed so bold; But he thus, overjoyed: "O fruit divine, Sweet of thyself, but much more sweet thus cropped; Forbidden here, it seems, as only fit For gods, yet able to make gods of men: And why not gods of men, since good, the more Communicated, more abundant grows, The author not impaired, but honored more? Here, happy creature, fair angelic Eve, Partake thou also; happy though thou art, Happier thou mayst be, worthier canst not be: Taste this, and be henceforth among the gods Thyself a goddess, not to earth confined, But sometimes in the air, as we; sometimes Ascend to Heaven, by merit thine, and see What life the gods live there, and such live thou. So saying, he drew nigh, and to me held, Even to my mouth of that same fruit held part Which he had plucked; the pleasant savory smell So quickened appetite, that I, methought, Could not but taste. Forthwith up to the clouds With him I flew, and underneath beheld The earth outstretched immense, a prospect wide And various: wondering at my flight and change To this high exaltation, suddenly My guide was gone, and I, methought, sunk down, And fell asleep; but oh, how glad I waked To find this but a dream!" Thus Eve her night Related, and thus Adam answered sad: "Best image of myself, and dearer half, The trouble of thy thoughts this night in sleep Affects me equally; nor can I like

This uncouth dream, of evil sprung, I fear; Yet evil whence? in thee can harbour none, Created pure. But know, that in the soul Are many lesser faculties, that serve Reason as chief; among these, fancy next Her office holds; of all external things, Which the five watchful senses represent, She forms imaginations, airy shapes, Which reason, joining or disjoining, frames All what we affirm or what deny, and call Our knowledge or opinion; then retires Into her private cell when nature rests. Oft in her absence mimic fancy wakes To imitate her; but, misjoining shapes, Wild work produces oft, and most in dreams, Ill matching words and deeds long past or late. Some such resemblances methinks I find Of our last evening's talk, in this thy dream, But with addition strange; yet be not sad: Evil into the mind of God or man May come and go, so unapproved, and leave No spot or blame behind: which gives me hope That what in sleep thou didst abhor to dream, Waking thou never wilt consent to do. Be not disheartened, then, nor cloud those looks, That wont to be more cheerful and serene, Than when fair morning first smiles on the world: And let us to our fresh employments rise Among the groves, the fountains, and the flowers That open now their choicest bosomed smells, Reserved from night, and kept for thee in store." So cheered he his fair spouse, and she was cheered,

But silently a gentle tear let fall
From either eye, and whiped them with her hair;
Two other precious drops that ready stood,
Each in their crystal sluice, he, ere they fell,
Kissed, as the gracious signs of sweet remorse
And pious awe, that feared to have offended.

So all was cleared, and to the field they haste. But first, from under shady arborous roof,

Soon as they forth were come to open sight Of day-spring, and the sun, who scarce up risen, With wheels yet hovering o'er the ocean brim. Shot parallel to the earth his dewy ray, Discovering in wide landscape all the east Of Paradise and Eden's happy plains, Lowly they bowed adoring, and began Their orisons, each morning duly paid In various style; for neither various style Nor holy rapture wanted they to praise Their maker, in fit strains pronounced or sung Unmeditated; such prompt eloquence Flowed from their lips, in prose or numerous verse, More tuneable than needed lute or harp To add more sweetness; and they thus began:

"These are thy glorious works, Parent of good, Almighty! Thine this universal frame, Thus wondrous fair; thyself how wondrous then, Unspeakable! who sitt'st above these heavens. To us invisible, or dimly seen In these thy lowest works; yet these declare The goodness beyond thought, and power divine. Speak, ye who best can tell, ye sons of light, Angels; for ye behold him and with songs And choral symphonies, day without night, Circle his throne rejoicing; ye in Heaven, On earth join all ye creatures to extol Him first, him last, him midst and without end. Fairest of stars, last in the train of night, If better thou belong not to the dawn, Sure pledge of day, that crown'st the smiling morn With thy bright circlet, praise him in thy sphere, While day arises, that sweet hour of prime. Thou sun, of this great world both eye and soul, Acknowledge him thy greater, sound his praise In thy eternal course, both when thou climb'st, And when high noon hast gained, and when thou fall'st, Moon, that now meet'st the orient sun, now fli'st, With the fixed stars, fixed in their orb that flies. And ye five other wandering fires that move

In mystic dance not without song, resound His praise, who out of darkness called up light. Air, and ye elements, the eldest birth Of nature's womb, that in quaternion run Perpetual circle, multiform; and mix And nourish all things; let your ceaseless change Vary to our great Maker still new praise. Ye mists and exhalations that now rise From hill or steaming lake, dusky or gray, Till the sun paint your fleecy skirts with gold, In honour to the world's great Author rise, Whether to deck with clouds the uncoloured sky, Or wet the thirsty earth with falling showers, Rising or falling still advance his praise. His praise, ye wind, that from four quarters blow, Breathe soft or loud; and wave your tops, ye pines, With every plant, in sign of worship wave. Fountains, and ye that warble as ye flow Melodious murmurs, warbling tune his praise. Join voices, all ye living souls; ye birds, That singing up to Heaven-gate ascend, Bear on your wings and in your notes his praise. Ye that in waters glide, and ye that walk The earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep; Witness if I be silent, morn or even, To hill or valley, fountain or fresh shade. Made vocal by my song, and taught his praise. Hail, universal Lord! be bounteous still To give us only good; and if the night Have gathered aught of evil or concealed, Disperse it, as now light dispels the dark." So praved they innocent, and to their thoughts Firm peace recovered soon, and wonted calm. On to their morning's rural work they haste Among sweet dews and flowers; where any row Of fruit-trees, over-woody, reached too far Their pampered boughs, and needed hands to cheek

Fruitless embraces: or they led the vine

To wed her elm; she, spoused, about him twines Her marriageable arms, and with her brings

Her dower, the adopted clusters, to adorn
His barren leaves. Them thus employed beheld
With pity Heaven's High King, and to him called
Raphael, the sociable spirit, that deigned
To travel with Tobias, and secured
His marriage with the seven-times-wedded maid.

"Raphael," said he, "thou hear'st what stir on earth Satan, from hell 'scaped through the darksome gulf. Hath raised in Paradise, and how disturbed This night the human pair; how he designs In them at once to ruin all mankind. Go, therefore, half this day, as friend with friend Converse with Adam, in what bower or shade Thou find'st him from the heat of noon retired, To respite his day labour with repast, Or with repose; and such discourse bring on, As may advise him of his happy state, Happiness in his power left free to will, Left to his own free will, his will though free, Yet mutable; whence warn him to beware He swerve not, too secure: tell him withal His danger, and from whom; what enemy, Late fallen himself from Heaven, is plotting now The fall of others from like state of bliss: By violence? no, for that shall be withstood; But by deceit and lies; this let him know, Lest, wilfully transgressing, he pretend Surprisal, unadmonished, unforewarned."

So spake the Eternal Father, and fulfilled All justice: nor delayed the wingéd saint After his charge received; but from among Thousand celestial ardours, where he stood Veiled with his gorgeous wings, up springing light Flew through the midst of Heaven; the angelic quires, On each hand parting, to his speed gave way Through all the empyreal road; till at the gate Of Heaven arrived, the gate self-opened wide On golden hinges turning, as by work Divine the sovran Architect had framed. From hence no cloud, or, to obstruct his sight,

Star interposed, however small he sees, Not unconform to other shining globes, Earth and the garden of God, with cedars crowned Above all hills. As when by night the glass Of Galileo, less assured, observes Imagined lands and regions in the moon: Or pilot, from amidst the Cyclades Delos or Samos first appearing, kens A cloudy spot. Down thither prone in flight He speeds, and through the vast ethereal sky Sails between worlds and worlds, with steady wing, Now on the polar winds, then with quick fan Winnows the buxom air; till within soar Of towering eagles, to all the fowls he seems A phenix, gazed by all, as that sole bird, When, to enshrine his relics in the sun's Bright temple, to Egyptian Thebes he flies. At once on the eastern cliff of Paradise He lights, and to his proper shape returns A seraph winged: six wings he wore, to shade His lineaments divine; the pair that elad Each shoulder broad, came mantling o'er his breast With regal ornament; the middle pair Girt like a starry zone his waist and round Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold, And colours dipped in Heaven; the third his feet Shadowed from either heel with feathered mail, Sky-tinctured grain. Like Maia's son he stood, And shook his plumes, that heavenly fragrance filled The circuit wide. Straight knew him all the bands Of angels under watch; and to his state, And to his message high, in honour rise; For on some message high they guessed him bound. Their glittering tents he passed, and now is come Into the blissful field, through groves of myrrh, And flowering odours, cassia, nard, and balm; A wilderness of sweets; for Nature here Wantoned as in her prime, and played at will Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweet, Wild above rule or art; enormous bliss.

Him through the spicy forest onward come,
Adam discerned, as in the door he sat.
Of his cool bower, while now the mounted sun
Shot down direct his fervid rays to warm
Earth's inmost womb, more warmth than Adam needs.
And Eve within, due at her hour prepared
For dinner savoury fruits, of taste to please
True appetite, and not disrelish thirst
Of nectarous draughts between, from milky stream,
Berry or grape: to whom thus Adam called:

"Haste hither, Eve, and worth thy sight behold
Eastward among those trees, what glorious shape
Comes this way moving; seems another morn
Risen on mid-noon; some great behest from Heaven
To us, perhaps, he brings, and will vouchsafe
This day to be our guest. But go with speed,
And what thy stores contain bring forth, and pour
Abundance, fit to honour and receive
Our heavenly stranger: well we may afford
Our givers their own gifts, and large bestow
From large bestowed, where nature multiplies
Her fertile growth, and by disburdening grows
More fruitful, which instructs us not to spare."

To whom thus Eve: "Adam, earth's hallowed mould, Of God inspired, small store will serve, where store, All seasons, ripe for use hangs on the stalk; Save what by frugal storing firmness gains
To nourish, and superfluous moist consumes:
But I will haste, and from each bough and brake,
Each plant and juciest gourd, will pluck such choice
To entertain our angel-guest, as he
Beholding shall confess, that here on earth
God hath dispensed his bounties as in Heaven."

So saying, with despatchful looks, in haste She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent What choice to choose for delicacy best, What order, so contriv'd as not to mix Tastes, not well joined, inelegant, but bring Taste after taste upheld with kindliest change; Bestirs her then, and from each tender stalk

Whatever earth, all-bearing mother, yields
In India, East or West, or middle shore
In Pontus, or the Punic coast, or where
Alcinous reign'd, fruit of all kinds, in coat
Rough, or smooth rind, or bearded husk, or shell,
She gathers, tribute large, and on the board
Heaps with unsparing hand; for drink, the grape
She crushes, inoffensive must, and meaths
From many a berry, and from sweet kernels pressed
She tempers dulcet creams; nor these to hold
Wants her fit vessels pure; then strews the ground
With rose and odours from the shrub unfumed.

Meanwhile our primitive great sire, to meet His godlike guest, walks forth, without more train Accompanied than with his own complete Perfections; in himself was all his state, More solemn than the tedious pomp that waits On princes when their rich retinue long Of horses led, and grooms besmeared with gold, Dazzles the crowd, and sets them all agape. Nearer his presence Adam, though not awed, Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek, As to a superior nature, bowing low, Thus said: "Native of Heaven, for other place None can, than Heaven, such glorious shape contain; Since, by descending from the thrones above, Those happy places thou hast deigned awhile To want, and honour these, vouchsafe with us Two only, who yet by sovran gift possess This spacious ground, in yonder shady bower To rest, and what the garden choicest bears To sit and taste, till this meridian heat Be over, and the sun more cool decline."

Whom thus the angelic virtue answered mild: "Adam, I therefore came, nor art thou such Created, or such place hast here to dwell, As may not oft invite, though spirits of Heaven, To visit thee; lead on, then, where thy bower O'ershades; for these mid-hours, till evening rise, I have at will." So to the sylvan lodge

They came, that like Pomona's arbour smiled With flowerets decked and fragrant smells; but Eve, Undecked saved with herself, more lovely fair Than wood-nymph, or the fairest goddess feigned Of three that in mount Ida naked strove, Stood to entertain her guests from Heaven; no veil She needed, virtue-proof; no thought infirm Altered her cheek. On whom the angel "Hail!" Bestowed, the holy salutation used

Long after to blest Mary, second Eve:

"Hail, mother of mankind! whose fruitful womb Shall fill the world more numerous with thy sons, Than with these various fruits the trees of God Have heaped this table." Raised of grassy turf Their table was, and mossy seats had round, And on her ample square, from side to side, All autumn piled, though spring and autumn here Danced hand in hand. A while, discourse they hold, No fear lest dinner cool; when thus began Our author: "Heavenly stranger, please to taste These bounties, which our Nourisher, from whom All perfect good, unmeasured out, descends, To us for food and for delight hath caused The earth to yield: unsavoury food, perhaps, To spiritual natures; only this I know, That one celestial Father gives to all."

To whom the angel: "Therefore, what he gives (Whose praise he ever sung) to man, in part Spiritual, may of purest spirits be found No ingrateful food: and food alike those pure Intelligential substances require, As doth your rational; and both contain Within them every lower faculty Of sense, whereby they hear, see, smell, touch, taste, Tasting concoct, digest, assimilate, And corporeal to incorporeal turn.

For know, whatever was created, needs To be sustained and fed; of elements The grosser feeds the purer, earth the sea, Earth and the sea feed air, the air those fires

Ethereal, and, as lowest, first the moon; Whence in her visage round those spots, unpurged Vapours not yet into her substance turned. Nor doth the moon no nourishment exhale From her moist continent to higher orbs. The sun that light imparts to all, receives From all his alimental recompense In humid exhalations, and at even Sups with the ocean. Though in heaven the trees Of life ambrosial fruitage bear, and vines Yield nectar; though from off the boughs each morn We brush mellifluous dews, and find the ground Covered with pearly grain: yet God hath here Varied his bounty so with new delights, As may compare with Heaven; and to taste, Think not I shall be nice." So down they sat, And to their viands fell; nor seemingly The angel, nor in mist, the common gloss Of theologians; but with keen despatch Of real hunger, and concoctive heat To transubstantiate: what redounds, transpires Through spirits with ease; nor wonder, if by fire Of sooty coal the empiric alchemist Can turn, or holds it possible to turn, Metals or drossiest ore to perfect gold, As from the mine. Meanwhile at table, Eve Ministered naked, and their flowing cups With pleasant liquors crowned: O innocence Deserving Paradise! If ever, then, Then had the sons of God excuse to have been Enamoured at that sight; but in those hearts Love unlibidinous reigned, nor jealousy Was understood, the injured lover's hell. Thus when with meats and drinks they had sufficed, Not burdened nature, sudden mind arose

In Adam not to let the occasion pass, Given him by this great conference, to know Of things above his world, and of their being Who dwell in Heaven, whose excellence he saw Transcend his own so far, whose radiant forms, Divine effulgence, whose high power, so far Exceeded human; and his wary speech Thus to the empyreal minister he framed:

"Inhabitant with God, now know I will
Thy favour, in this honour done to man,
Under whose lowly roof thou hast vouchsafed
To enter, and these earthly fruits to taste,
Food not of angels, yet accepted so,
As that more willingly thou couldst not seem

At Heaven's high feasts to have fed: yet what compare?"

To whom the wingéd hierarch replied: " O Adam, one Almighty is, from whom All things proceed, and up to him return, If not depraved from good, created all Such to perfection, one first matter all, Endued with various forms, various degrees Of substance, and in things that live, of life; But more refined, more spirituous, and pure, As nearer to him placed or nearer tending, Each in their several active spheres assigned, Till body up to spirit work, in bounds Proportioned to each kind. So from the root Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves More airy, last the bright consummate flower Spirits odórous breathes: flowers and their fruit, Man's nourishment, by gradual scale sublimed, To vital spirits aspire, to animal, To intellectual; give both life and sense, Fancy and understanding; whence the soul Reason receives, and reason is her being, Discursive, or intuitive; discourse Is oftest yours, the latter most is ours, Differing but in degree, of kind the same. Wonder not, then, what God for you saw good, If I refuse not, but convert, as you. To proper substance: time may come, when men With angels may participate, and find No inconvenient diet, nor too light fare; And from these corporal nutriments, perhaps, Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit, Improved by tract of time, and winged ascend Ethereal, as we; or may, at choice, Here or in heavenly Paradises dwell; If ye be found obedient, and retain Unalterably firm his love entire, Whose progeny you are. Meanwhile, enjoy Your fill what happiness this happy state Can comprehend, incapable of more."

To whom the patriarch of mankind replied:

"O favourable spirit, propitious guest,
Well hast thou taught the way that might direct
Our knowledge, and the scale of nature set
From centre to circumstance, whereon,
In contemplation of created things,
By steps we may ascend to God. But say,
What meant that caution joined, 'if ye be found
Obedient?' Can we want obedience then
To him, or possibly his love desert;
Who formed us from the dust, and placed us here,
Full to the utmost measure of what bliss
Human desires can seek or apprehend?"

To whom the angel: "Son of Heaven and earth, Attend: that thou art happy, owe to God; That thou continuest such, owe to thyself, That is, to thy obedience; therein stand. This was that caution given thee; be advised. God made thee perfect, not immutable; And good he made thee, but to persevere He left it in thy power; ordained thy will, By nature free, not over-ruled by fate Inextricable, or strict necessity: Our voluntary service he requires, Not our necessitated; such with him Finds no acceptance, nor can find; for how Can hearts, not free, be tried whether they serve Willing or no, who will but what they must By destiny, and can no other choose? Myself, and all the angelic host, that stand In sight of God enthroned, our happy state Hold, as you yours, while our obedience holds;

On other surety none: freely we serve, Because we freely love, as in our will To love or not; in this we stand or fall: And some are fallen, to disobedience fallen, And so from Heaven to deepest Hell; O fall From what high state of bliss, into what woe!"

To whom our great progenitor: "Thy words Attentive, and with more delighted ear, Divine instructor, I have heard, than when Cherubic songs by night from neighbouring hills Aërial music send: nor knew I not To be both will and deed created free; Yet that we never shall forget to love Our Maker, and obey him, whose command Single is yet so just, my constant thoughts Assured me, and still assure; though what thou tell'st Hath passed in Heaven, some doubt within me move, But more desire to hear, if thou consent, The full relation, which must needs be strange, Worthy of sacred silence to be heard; And we have yet large day, for scarce the sun Hath finished half his journey, and scarce begins His other half in the great zone of Heaven."

Thus Adam made request; and Raphaël, After short pause assenting, thus began:

"High matter thou enjoin'st me, O prime of men, Sad task and hard; for how shall I relate To human sense the invisible exploits Of warring spirits? how, without remorse, The ruin of so many glorious once And perfect while they stood? how last unfold The secrets of another world, perhaps Not lawful to reveal? yet for thy good This is dispensed; and what surmounts the reach Of human sense, I shall delineate so, By likening spiritual to corporal forms, As may express them best; though what if earth Be but the shadow of Heaven, and things therein Each to other like, more than on earth is thought?

"As yet this world was not, and Chaos wild

Reigned where these Heavens now roll, where earth now Upon her centre poised; when on a day rests (For time, though in eternity, applied To motion, measures all things durable By present, past, and future), on such day As Heaven's great year brings forth the empyreal host Of angels, by imperial summons called, Innumerable before the Almighty's throne Forthwith from all the ends of Heaven appeared Under their hierarchs in orders bright; Ten thousand thousand ensigns high advanced, Standards and gonfalons twixt van and rear Stream in the air, and for distinction serve Of hierarchies, of orders, and degrees; Or in their glittering tissues bear emblazed Holy memorials, acts of zeal and love Recorded eminent. Thus when in orbs Of circuit inexpressible they stood, Orb within orb, the Father infinite, By whom in bliss embosomed sat the Son, Amidst as from a flaming mount, whose top Brightness had made invisible, thus spake: "'Hear all ye angels, progeny of light, Thrones, dominations, princedoms, virtues, powers, Here my decree, which unrevoked shall stand. This day I have begot whom I declare My only Son, and on this holy hill Him have annointed, whom ye now behold At my right hand; your head I him appoint; And by myself have sworn to him shall bow All knees in Heaven, and shall confess him Lord: Under his great vicegerent reign abide United as one individual soul, For ever happy: him who disobeys, Me disobeys, break union, and that day, Cast out from God and blesséd vision, falls Into utter darkness, deep engulfed, his place Ordained without redemption, without end.' "So spake the Omnipotent, and with his words

All seemed well pleased: all seemed, but were not all.

That day, as other solemn days, they spent In song and dance about the sacred hill; Mystical dance, which yonder starry sphere Of planets and of fixed in all her wheels Resembles nearest, mazes intricate, Eccentric intervolved, yet regular Then most, when most irregular they seem: And in their motions harmony divine So smoothes her charming tones, that God's own ear Listens delighted. Evening now approached (For we have also our evening and our morn, We ours for change delectable, not need); Forthwith from dance to sweet repast they turn Desirous; all in circles as they stood, Tables are set, and on a sudden piled . With angels' food, and rubied nectar flows. In pearl, in diamond, and massy gold, Fruit of delicious vines, the growth of Heaven. On flowers reposed, and with fresh flowerets crowned. They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet Quaff immortality and joy, secure Of surfeit where full measure only bounds Excess, before the all-bounteous King, who showered With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy. Now when ambrosial night, with clouds exhaled From that high mount of God, whence light and shade Spring both, the face of brightest Heaven had changed To grateful twilight (for night comes not there In darker veil), and roseate dews disposed All but the unsleeping eyes of God to rest; Wide over all the plain, and wider far Than all this glorious earth in plain outspread (Such are the courts of God), the angelic throng Dispersed in bands and files, their camp extend By living streams among the trees of life, Pavilions numberless, and sudden reared, Celestial tabernacles, where they slept, Fanned with cool winds; save those who in their course Melodious hymns about the sovereign throne Alternate all night long: but not so waked

Satan; so call him now, his former name
Is heard no more in Heaven; he of the first,
If not the first archangel, great in power,
In favor and pre-eminence, yet fraught
With envy against the Son of God, that day
Honoured by his great Father, and proclaimed
Messiah King anointed, could not bear
Through pride that sight, and thought himself impaired.
Deep malice thence conceiving and disdain,
Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence, he resolved
With all his legions to dislodge, and leave
Unworshipped, unobeyed, the throne supreme,
Contemptuous; and his next subordinate
Awakening, thus to him in secret spake:

"'Sleep'st thou, companion dear? What sleep can close Thy eye-lids, and rememberest what decree Of yesterday, so late hath passed the lips Of Heaven's Almighty? Thou to me thy thoughts Wast wont, I mine to thee was wont to impart; Both waking we were one; how then can now Thy sleep dissent? New laws thou seest imposed; New laws from him who reigns, new minds may raise In us who serve, new counsels, to debate What doubtful may ensue: more in this place To utter is not safe. Assemble thou Of all those myriads which we lead the chief; Tell them that by command, ere yet dim night Her shadowy cloud withdraws, I am to haste, And all who under me their banners wave, Homeward with flying march where we possess The quarters of the north; there to prepare Fit entertainment to receive our King, The great Messiah, and his new commands, Who speedily through all the hierarchies Intends to pass triumphant, and give laws.'

"So spake the false archangel, and infused Bad influence into the unwary breast Of his associates: he together calls, Or several one by one, the regent powers,

Under him regent; tells, as he was taught, That the most High commanding, now ere night, Now ere dim night had disencumbered Heaven, The great hierarchal standard was to move: Tells the suggested cause, and casts between Ambiguous words and jealousies, to sound Or taint integrity: but all obeyed The wonted signal, and superior voice Of their great potentate; for great indeed His name, and high was his degree in Heaven; His countenance, as the morning-star that guides The starry flock, allured them, and with lies Drew after him the third part of Heaven's host. Meanwhile the eternal eye, whose sight discerns Abstrusest thoughts, from forth his holy mount, And from within the golden lamps that burn Nightly before him, saw without their light Rebellion rising; saw in whom, how spread Among the sons of morn, what multitudes Were banded to oppose his high decree; And, smiling, to his only Son thus said: "'Son, thou in whom my glory I behold

In full resplendence, heir of all my might,
Nearly it now concerns us to be sure
Of our omnipotence, and with what arms
We mean to hold what anciently we claim
Of deity or empire; such a foe
Is rising, who intends to erect his throne
Equal to ours, throughout the spacious north;
Nor so content, hath in his thought to try
In battle, what our power is, or our right.
Let us advise, and to this hazard draw
With speed what force is left, and all employ
In our defence, lest unawares we lose
This our high place, our sanctuary, our hill.'

"To whom the Son, with calm aspect and clear, Lightning divine, ineffable, serene, Made answer: 'Mighty Father, thou thy foes Justly hast in derision, and secure Laugh'st at their vain designs and tumults vain, Matter to me of glory, whom their hate Illustrates, when they see all regal power Given me to quell their pride, and in event Knew whether I be dexterous to subdue Thy rebels, or be found the worst in Heaven.

"So spake the Son; but Satan with his powers Far was advanced on wingéd speed, an host Innumerable as the stars of night, Or stars of morning, dew-drops, which the sun Impearls on every leaf and every flower. Regions they passed, the mighty regencies Of seraphim, and potentates, and thrones, In their triple degrees; regions to which All thy dominion, Adam, is no more Than what this garden is to all the earth, And all the sea, from one entire globose Stretched into longitude; which having passed, At length into the limits of the north They came, and Satan to his royal seat, High on a hill, far blazing, as a mount Raised on a mount, with pyramids and towers, From diamond quarries hewn, and rocks of gold; The place of great Lucifer (so call That structure in the dialect of men Interpreted), which not long after, he Affecting all equality with God, In imitation of that mount whereon Messiah was declared in sight of Heaven, The Mountain of the Congregation called; For thither he assembled all his train, Pretending so commanded to consult About the great reception of their King Thither to come, and with calumnious art Of counterfeited truth thus held their ears:

"'Thrones, dominatious, princedoms, virtues, powers, If these magnific titles yet remain

Not merely titular, since by decree

Another now hath to himself engrossed

All power, and us eclipsed, under the name

Of King anointed, for whom all this haste

Of midnight march, and hurried meeting here This only to consult; how we may best, With what may be devised of honours new, Receive him coming to receive from us Knee-tribute yet unpaid, prostration vile, Too much to one, but double how endured, To one and to his image now proclaimed? But what if better counsels might erect Our minds, and teach us to cast off this yoke? Will ve submit your necks, and choose to bend The supple knee? Ye will not if I trust To know ye right, or if ye know yourselves, Natives and sons of Heaven, possessed before By none, and if not equal all, yet free, Equally free; for orders and degrees Jar not with liberty, but well consist. Who can in reason then, or right, assume Monarchy over such as live by right His equals, if in power and splendour less, In freedom equal? or can introduce Law and edict on us, who, without law, Err not? much less for this to be our Lord, And look for adoration, to the abuse Of those imperial titles, which assert Our being ordained to govern, not to serve.'

"Thus far his bold discourse without control Had audience, when among the scraphim Abdiel, than whom none with more zeal adored The Deity, and divine commands obeyed, Stood up, and in a flame of zeal severe, The current of his fury thus opposed:

"'Oh, argument blasphémous, false and proud a Words which no ear ever to hear in Heaven Expected, least of all from thee, ingrate, In place thyself so high above thy peers. Canst thou with impious obloquy condemn The just decree of God, pronounced and sworn, That to his only Son, by right endued With regal sceptre, every soul in Heaven Shall bend the knee, and in that honour due

Confess him rightful King? unjust, thou sayst, Flatly unjust, to bind with laws the free, And equal over equals to let reign, One over all with unsucceeded power. Shalt thou give law to God? shalt thou dispute With him the points of liberty, who made Thee what thou art, and formed the powers of Heaven Such as he pleased, and circumscribed their being? Yet, by experience taught, we know how good, And of our good and of our dignity How provident he is, how far from thought To make us less, bent rather to exalt Our happy state under one head more near United. But to grant it thee unjust, That equal over equals monarch reign: Thyself, thou great and glorious, dost thou count, Or all angelic nature joined in one, Equal to him begotten Son? by whom, As by his word, the mighty father made All things, even thee; and all the spirits of Heaven By him created in their bright degrees, Crowned them with glory, and to their glory named Thrones, dominations, princedoms, virtues, powers, Essential powers; nor by his reign obscured, But more illustrious made; since he the head, One of our number thus reduced becomes; His laws our laws; all honour to him done Returns our own. Cease then this impious rage, And tempt not these, but hasten to appeare The incensed Father, and the incensed Son, While pardon may be found in time besought. " So spake the fervent angel; but his zeal

None seconded, as out of season judged, Or singular and rash; whereat rejoiced The apostate, and more haughty thus replied:

"That we were formed then, sayest thou? and the work Of secondary hands, by task transferred From Father to his Son? strange point and new! Doctrine which we would know whence learned: who saw When this creation was? rememberest thou

Thy making, while the Maker gave thee being? We know no time when we were not as now; Know none before us, self-begot, self-raised By our own quickening power, when fatal course Had circled his full orb, the birth mature Of this our native Heaven, ethereal sons. Our puissance is our own; our own right hand Shall teach us highest deeds, by proof to try Who is our equal: then thou shalt behold Whether by supplication we intend - Address, and to begirt the almighty throne Beseeching or besieging. This report, These tidings carry to the anointed King; And fly, ere evil intercept thy flight.'

"He said, and as the sound of waters deep, Hoarse murmur echoed to his words applause Through the infinite host; nor less for that The flaming scraph fearless, though alone, Encompassed round with foes, thus answered bold:

"' O alienate from God, O spirit accursed, Forsaken of all good! I see thy fall Determined, and thy hapless crew involved In this perfidious fraud, contagion spread Both of thy crime and punishment: henceforth No more be troubled how to quit the yoke Of God's Messiah; those indulgent laws Will not be now vouchsafed; other decrees Against thee are gone forth without recall; That golden sceptre, which thou didst reject, Is now an iron rod to bruise and break Thy disobedience. Well thou didst advise; Yet not for thy advice or threats I fly These wicked tents devoted, lest the wrath Impendent, raging into sudden flame, Distinguish not; for soon expect to feel His thunder on thy head, devouring fire. Then who created thee lamenting learn, When who can uncreate thee thou shalt know. "So spake the seraph Abdiel, faithful found

Among the faithless, faithful only he;

Among innumerable false, unmoved,
Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,
His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal;
Nor number, nor example, with him wrought
To swerve from truth, or change his constant mind,
Though single. From amidst them forth he passed,
Long way through hostile scorn, which he sustained
Superior, nor of violence feared aught;
And with retorted scorn his back he turned
On those proud towers to swift destruction doomed.

BOOK VI.

THE ARGUMENT.

BAPHAEL continues to relate how Michael and Gabriel were sent forth to battle against Satan and his angels. The first fight described: Satan and his powers retire under night: he calls a council, invents devilish engines, which, in the second day's fight, put Michael and his angels to some disorder; but they at length, pulling up mountains, overwhelmed both the force and machines of Satan: yet the tunult not so ending, God on the third day sends Messiah his Son, for whom he had reserved the glory of that victory; he, in the power of his Father, coming to the place, and causing all his legions to stand still on either side, with his charict and thunder driving into the midst of his enemies, pursues them, unable to resist, towards the wall of Heaven; which opening, they leap down with horror and confusion into the place of punishment prepared for them in the deep: Messiah returns with triumph to his Father.

"All night the dreadless angel, unpursued,
Through Heaven's wide champain held his way; till morn,
Waked by the circling hours, with rosy hand
Unbarred the gates of light. There is a cave
Within the mount of God, fast by his throne,
Where light and darkness in perpetual round
Lodge and dislodge by turns, which makes through Heaven

Grateful vicissitudes like day and night;
Light issues forth, and at the other door
Obsequious darkness enters, till her hour
To veil the heaven, though darkness there might well
Seem twilight here; and now went forth the morn,
Such as in highest Heaven, arrayed in gold
Empyreal; from before her vanished night,
Shot through with orient beams; when all the plain,
Covered with thick embattled squadrons bright,
Chariots and flaming arms, and fiery steeds,
Reflecting blaze on blaze, first met his view:

War he perceived war in procinct, and found Already known what he for news had thought To have reported: gladly then he mixed Among those friendly powers, whom him received With joy and acclamations loud, that one, That of so many myriads fallen, yet one Returned not lost. On to the sacred hill They led him high applauded, and present Before the seat supreme; from whence a voice, From midst a golden cloud thus mild was heard: "'Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought The better fight, who single hast maintained Against revolted multitudes the cause Of truth, in word mightier than they in arms; And for the testimony of truth hast borne Universal reproach, far worse to bear Than violence; for this was all thy care, To stand approved in sight of God, though worlds Judged thee perverse: the easier conquest now Remains thee, aided by this host of friends, Back on thy foes more glorious to return Than scorned thou didst depart; and to subdue By force, who reason for their law refuse; Right reason for their law, and for their King Messiah, who by right of merit reigns. Go, Michael, of celestial armies prince, And thou in military prowess next, Gabriel, lead forth to battle these my sons Invincible, lead forth my arméd saints By thousands and by millions ranged for fight, Equal in number to that godless crew Rebellious; them with fire and hostile arms Fearless assault, and to the brow of Heaven Pursuing, drive them out from God and bliss Into their place of punishment, the gulf Of Tartarus, which ready opens wide

"So spake the sovran voice, and clouds began To darken all the hill, and smoke to roll In dusky wreaths, reluctant flames, the sign

His fiery chaos to receive their fall.'

Of wrath awaked; nor with less dread the loud Ethereal trumpet from on high 'gan blow: At which command the powers militant, That stood for Heaven, in mighty quadrate joined Of union irresistible, moved on In silence their bright legions, to the sound Of instrumental harmony, that breathed Heroic ardour to adventurous deeds Under their godlike leaders, in the cause Of God and his Messiah. On they move Indissolubly firm; nor obvious hill, Nor straitening vale, nor wood, nor stream, divides Their perfect ranks; for high above the ground Their march was, and the passive air upbore Their nimble tread: as when the total kind Of birds, in orderly array on wing, Came summoned over Eden to receive Their names of thee; so over many a tract Of Heaven they marched, and many a province wide Tenfold the length of this terrene: at last, Far in the horizon to the north appeared From skirt to skirt a fiery region, stretched In battailous aspéct and nearer view Bristled with upright beams innumerable Of rigid spears, and hemlets thronged, and shields Various, with boastful argument portrayed, The banded powers of Satan hasting on With furious expedition; for they weened That self-same day by fight, or by surprise, To win the mount of God, and on his throne To set the envier of his state, the proud Aspirer; but their thoughts proved fond and vain In the midway: though strange to us it seemed At first, that angel should with angel war, And in fierce hosting meet, who wont to meet So oft in festivals of joy and love Unanimous, as sons of one great Sire, Hymning the eternal Father. But the shout Of battle now began, and rushing sound Of onset, ended soon each milder thought.

High in the midst, exalted as a god,
The apostate in his sun-bright chariot sat,
Idol of majesty divine, enclosed
With flaming cherubin and golden shields;
Then lighted from his gorgeous throne; for now,
'Twixt host and host, but narrow space was left,
A dreadful interval, and front to front
Presented stood in terrible array
Of hideous length: before the cloudy van,
On the rough edge of battle ere it joined,
Satan, with vast and haughty strides advanced,
Came towering, armed in adamant and gold;
Abdiel that sight endured not, where he stood
Among the mightiest, bent on highest deeds,
And thus his own undaunted heart explores:

Should yet remain, where faith and realty
Remain not! wherefore should not strength and might
There fail where virtue fails, or weakest prove
Where boldest, though to sight unconquerable?
His puissance, trusting in the Almighty's aid,
I mean to try, whose reason I have tried
Unsound and false; nor is it aught but just,
That he who in debate of truth hath won,
Should win in arms, in both disputes alike
Victor; though brutish that contest and foul,
When reason hath to deal with force, yet so
Most reason is that reason overcome.'

"So pondering, and from his arméd peers Forth stepping opposite, half-way he met His daring foe, at this prevention more Incensed, and thus securely him defied:

"' Proud! art thou met? thy hope was to have reached The height of thy aspiring uncpposed, The throne of God unguarded, and his side Abandoned at the terror of thy power Or potent tongue: fool! not to think how vain Against the Omnipotent to rise in arms; Who out of smallest things could without end Have raised incessant armies to defeat

Thy folly; or, with solitary hand, Reaching beyond all limit, at one blow Unaided could have finished thee, and whelmed Thy legions under darkness: but thou seest All are not of thy train; there be who faith Prefer, and piety to God, though then To thee not visible, when I alone Seemed in thy world erroneous to dissent From all: my sect thou seest; now learn too late How few sometimes may know, when thousands err. "Whom the grand foe, with scornful eye askance, Thus answered: 'Ill for thee, but in wished hour Of my revenge, first sought for, thou return'st From flight, seditious angel! to receive Thy merited reward, the first assay Of this right hand provoked, since first that tongue, Inspired with contradiction, durst oppose A third part of the gods, in synod met Their deities to assert; who, while they feel Vigour divine within them, can allow Omnipotence to none. But well thou com'st Before thy fellows, ambitious to win From me some plume, that thy success may show Destruction to the rest: this pause between (Unanswered lest thou boast) to let thee know, At first I thought that liberty and Heaven To heavenly souls had been all one; but now I see that most through sloth had rather serve. Ministering spirits, trained up in feast and song; Such hast thou armed, the minstrely of Heaven, Servility with freedom to contend, As both their deeds compared this day shall prove.

"To whom in brief thus Abdiel stern replied: 'Apostate! still thou err'st, nor end wilt find Of erring, from the path of truth remote: Unjustly thou depray'st it with the name Of servitude, to serve whom God ordains, Or nature; God and nature bid the same, When he who rules is worthiest, and excels Them whom he governs. This is servitude,

To serve the unwise, or him who hath rebelled Against his worthier, as thine now serve thee, Thyself not free, but to thyself enthralled; Yet lewdly dar'st our ministering upbraid. Reign thou in Hell thy kingdom; let me serve In Heaven God ever blest, and his divine Behests obey, worthiest to be obeyed; Yet chains in Hell, not realms, expect: meanwhile From me returned, as erst thou saidst, from flight, This greeting on thy impious crest receive.'

"So saying, a noble stroke he lifted high, Which hung not, but so swift with tempest fell On the proud crest of Satan, that no sight, Nor motion of swift thought, less could his shield, Such ruin intercept: ten paces huge He back recoiled; the tenth on bended knee His massy spear upstayed; as if on earth Winds under ground, or waters forcing way Sidelong, had pushed a mountain from his seat, Half sunk with all his pines. Amazement seized The rebel thrones, but greater rage to see Thus foiled their mightiest; ours joy filled, and shout, Presage of victory, and fierce desire Of battle: whereat Michael bid sound The Archangel trumpet: through the vast of Heaven It sounded, and the faithful armies rung Hosanna to the Highest; nor stood at gaze The adverse legions; nor less hideous joined The horrid shock. Now storming fury rose, And clamour such as heard in Heaven till now Was never; arms on armour clashing brayed Horrible discord, and the madding wheels Of brazen chariots raged; dire was the noise Of conflict; overhead the dismal hiss Of fiery darts in flaming volleys flew, And flying vaulted either host with fire. So under fiery cope together rushed Both battles main, with ruinous assault And inextinguishable rage. All Heaven

Resounded, and had earth been then, all earth

Had to her centre shook. What wonder, when Millions of fierce encountering angels fought On either side, the least of whom could wield These elements, and arm him with the force Of all their regions? How much more of power, Army against army numberless to raise Dreadful combustion warring, and disturb, Though not destroy, their happy native seat; Had not the eternal King omnipotent, From his strong hold of Heaven, high over-ruled And limited their might; though numbered such As each divided legion might have seemed A numerous host; in strength each arméd hand A legion; led in fight, yet leader seemed Each warrior, single as in chief, expert When to advance, or stand, or turn the sway Of battle, open when, and when to close The ridges of grim war: no thought of flight; None of retreat; no unbecoming deed That argued fear; each on himself relied, As only in his arm the moment lay Of victory. Deeds of eternal fame Were done, but infinite; for wide was spread That war and various; sometimes on firm ground A standing fight, then soaring on main wing Tormented all the air; all air seemed then Conflicting fire. Long time in even scale The battle hung; till Satan, who that day Prodigious power had shown, and met in arms No equal, ranging through the dire attack Of fighting seraphim confused, at length Saw where the sword of Michael smote, and felled Squadrons at once; with huge two-handed swav Brandished aloft, the horrid edge came down Wide wasting: such destruction to withstand He hasted, and opposed the rocky orb Of tenfold adamant, his ample shield, A vast circumference. At his approach The great archangel from his warlike toil Surceased, and glad, as hoping here to end

Intestine war in Heaven, the arch foe subdued, Or captive dragged in chains, with hostile frown And visage all inflamed, first thus began:

"Author of evil, unknown till thy revolt, Unnamed in Heaven, now plenteous, as thou seest These acts of hateful strife, hateful to all, Though heaviest by just measure on thyself And thy adherents: how hast thou disturbed Heaven's blessed peace, and into nature brought Misery, uncreated till the crime Of thy rebellion! how hast thou instilled Thy malice into thousands, once upright And faithful, now proved false! But hink not here To trouble holy rest; Heaven casts thee out From all her confines. Heaven, the seat of bliss, Brooks not the works of violence and war. Hence then, and evil go with thee along, Thy offspring, to the place of evil, Hell, Thou and thy wicked crew; there mingle broils, Ere this avenging sword begin thy doom, Or some more sudden vengeance, winged from God. Precipitate thee with augmented pain.

"So spake the prince of angels: to whom thus The adversary: 'Nor think thou with wind Of airy threats to awe, whom yet with deeds Thou canst not. Hast thou turned the last of these To flight, or if to fall, but that they rise Unvanquished, easier to transact with me That thou shouldst hope, imperious, and with threats To chase me hence? Err not that so shall end The strife which thou call'st evil, but we style The strife of glory; which we mean to win, Or turn this Heaven itself into the Hell Thou fablest; here, however, to dwell free, If not to reign: meanwhile thy utmost force, And join him named Almighty to thy aid; I fly not, but have sought thee, far and nigh.'

"They ended parle, and both addressed for fight Unspeakable: for who, though with the tongue Of angels, can relate, or to what things Liken on earth conspicuous, that may lift Human imagination to such height Of godlike power? for likest gods they seemed, Stood they or moved, in statue, motion, arms, Fit to decide the empire of great Heaven. Now waved their fiery swords, and in the air Made horrid circles: two broad suns their shields Blazed opposite, while expectation stood In horror: from each hand with speed retired. Where erst was thickest fight, the angelic throng, And left large field, unsafe within the wind Of such commotion; such as (to set forth Great things by small) if, nature's concord broke, Among the constellations war were sprung, Two planets, rushing from aspéct malign Of fiercest opposition, in mid sky Should combat, and their jarring spheres confound. Together both, with next to Almighty arm, Unlifted imminent; one stroke they aimed That might determine, and not need repeat, As not of power at once; nor odds appeared In might or swift prevention: but the sword Of Michael, from the armoury of God Was given him tempered so, that neither keen Nor solid might resist that edge: it met The sword of Satan with steep force to smite Descending, and in half cut sheer; nor stayed, But with swift wheel reverse, deep entering, shared All his right side: then Satan first knew pain, And writhed him to and fro convolved; so sore The griding sword with discontinuous wound Passed through him: but the ethereal substance closed, Not long divisible, and from the gash A stream of nectarous humour issuing flowed Sanguine, such as celestial spirits may bleed, And all his armour stained, erewhile s > bright. Forthwith on all sides to his aid was run By angels many and strong, who interposed Defence, while others bore him on their shields Back to his chariot, where it stood retired

From off the fields of war; there they him laid, Gnashing for anguish and despite and shame, To find himself not matchless, and his pride Humbled by such rebuke, so far beneath His confidence to equal God in power. Yet soon he healed; for spirits that live throughout Vital in every part, not as frail man In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins, Cannot but by annihilating die; Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound Receive, no more than can the fluid air. All heart they live, all head, all eve, all ear, All intellect, all sense; and, as they please, They limb themselves, and colour, shape or size Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare. " Meanwhile in other parts, like deeds deserved Memorial, where the might of Gabriel fought, And with fierce ensigns pierced the deep array Of Moloch, furious king, who him defied, And at his chariot wheels to drag him bound Threatened, nor from the Holy One of Heaven Refrained his tongue blasphémous, but anon, Down cloven to the waist, with shattered arms And uncouth pain fled bellowing. On each wing Uriel and Raphaël his vaunting foe, Though huge, and in a rock of diamond armed, Vanguished Adramelech, and Asmadai, Two potent thrones, that to be less than gods Disdained, but meaner thoughts learned in their flight, Mangled with ghastly wounds through plate and mail. Nor stood unmindful Abdiel to annov The atheist crew, but with redoubled blow Ariel and Arioch, and the violence Of Ramiel, scorched and blasted, overthrew. I might relate to thousands, and their names Eternize here on earth; but those elect Angels, contented with their fame in Heaven, Seek not the praise of men: the other sort, In might though wondrous and in acts of war, Nor of renown less eager, yet by doom

Cancelled from Heaven and sacred memory, Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell. For strength from truth divided, and from just, Illaudable, nought merits but dispraise And ignominy, yet to glory aspires Vain-glorious, and through infamy seeks fame: Therefore eternal silence be their doom.

" And now, their mightiest quelled, the battle swerved, With many an inroad gored; deformed rout Entered, and foul disorder; all the ground With shivered armour strown, and on a heap Chariot and charioteer lay overturned, And fiery foaming steeds; what stood, recoiled O'er-wearied, through the faint Satanic host Defensive scarce, or with pale fear surprised, Then first with fear surprised and sense of pain, Fled ignominious, to such evil brought By sin of disobedience, till that hour Not liable to fear, or flight, or pain. Far otherwise the inviolable saints. In cubic phalanx firm advanced entire. Invulnerable, impenetrably armed; Such high advantages their innocence Gave them above their foes, not to have sinned, Not to have disobeyed; in sight they stood Unwearied, unobnoxious to be pained By wound, though from their place by violence moved

"Now night her course began, and, over Heaven Inducing darkness, grateful truce imposed, And silence on the odious din of war; Under her cloudy covert both retired, Victor and vanquished: on the foughten field Michaël and his angels prevalent Encamping, placed in guard their watches round, Cherubic waving fires: on the other part Satan with his rebellious disappeared, Far in the dark dislodged; and, void of rest, His potentates to council called by night; And in the midst thus undismayed began:

"'O now in danger tried, now known in arms

Not to be overpowered, companions dear, Found worthy not of liberty alone, Too mean pretence, but what we more affect, Honour, dominion, glory, and renown; Who have sustained one day in doubtful fight (And if one day, why not eternal days?) What Heaven's Lord had powerfullest to send Against us from about his throne, and judged Sufficient to subdue us to his will, But proves not so: then fallible, it seems, Of future we may deem him, though till now Omniscient thought. True is, less firmly armed, Some disadvantage we endured, and pain, Till now not known, but, known, as soon contemned Since now we find this our empyreal form Incapable of mortal injury, Imperishable, and though pierced with wound, Soon closing, and by native vigour healed. Of evil then so small as easy think The remedy; perhaps more valid arms, Weapons more violent, when next we meet May serve to better us, and worse our foes, Or equal what between us made the odds, In nature none; if other hidden cause Left them superior, while we can preserve Unhurt our minds and understanding sound, Due search and consultation will disclose.

"He sat: and in the assembly next upstood Nisroch, of principalities the prime; As one he stood escaped from cruel fight, Sore toiled, his riven arms to havoc hewn, And cloudy in aspect thus answering spake:

"'Deliverer from new lords, leader to free Enjoyment of our right as gods; yet hard For gods, and too unequal work we find, Against unequal arms to fight in pain, Against unpained, impassive; from which evil Ruin must needs ensue; for what avails Valour or strength, though matchless, quelled with pain Which all subdues, and makes remiss the hands

Of mightiest? Sense of pleasure we hay well Spare out of life, perhaps, and not repine, But live content, which is the calmest life: But pain is perfect misery, the worst Of evils, and, excessive, overturns All patience. He who therefore can invent With what more forcible we may offend Our yet unwounded enemies, or arm Ourselves with like defence, to me deserves No less than for deliverance what we owe.'

"Whereto, with look composed, Satan replied: 'Not uninvented that, which thou aright Believ'st so main to our success, I bring. Which of us who beholds the bright surfáce Of this ethereous mould whereon we stand. This continent of spacious Heaven, adorned With plan, fruit, flower ambrosial, gems and gold; Whose eye so superficially surveys These things, as not to mind from whence they grow Deep under ground, materials dark and crude, Of spirituous and fiery spume, till touched With Heaven's ray, and tempered, they shoot forth So beauteous, opening to the ambient light? These in their dark nativity, the deep Shall yield us, pregnant with infernal flame; Which into hollow engines long and round Thick-rammed, at the other bore with touch of fire Dilated and infuriate, shall send forth From far, with thundering noise, among our foes. Such implements of mischief, as shall dash To pieces, and o'erwhelm whatever stands Adverse, that they shall fear we have disarmed The Thunderer of his only dreaded bolt. Nor long shall be our labour; yet, ere dawn, Effect shall end our wish. Meanwhile revive; Abandon fear; to strength and counsel joined Think nothing hard, much less to be despaired.

"He ended, and his words their drooping cheer Enlightened, and their languished hope revived. The invention all admired, and each, how he

To be the inventor missed; so easy it seemed Once found, which yet unfound most would have thought Impossible: yet haply of thy race In future days, if malice should abound. Some one intent on mischief, or inspired With devilish machination, might devise Like instrument to plague the sons of men For sin, on war and mutual slaughter bent. Forthwith from council to the work they flew: None arguing stood; innumerable hands Were ready; in a moment up they turned Wide the celestial soil, and saw beneath The originals of nature in their crude Conception; sulphurous and nitrous foam They found, they mingled, and, with subtle art Concocted and adjusted, they reduced To blackest grain, and into store conveyed: Part hidden veins digged up (nor hath this earth Entrails unlike) of mineral and stone, Whereof to found their engines and their balls Of missive ruin; part incentive reed Provide, pernicious with one touch to fire. So all ere day-spring, under conscious night, Secret they finished, and in order set, With silent circumspection, unespied. " Now when fair morn orient in Heaven appeared, Up rose the victor angels, and to arms The matin trumped sung: in arms they stood Of golden panoply, refulgent host, Soon banded; others from the dawning hills Looked round, and scouts each coast light-arméd scour, Each quarter, to descry the distant foe, Where lodged, or whither fled, or if for fight, In motion or in halt: him soon they meet Under spread ensigns moving nigh, in slow But firm battalion; back with speediest sail Zophiel, of cherubim the swiftest wing, Come flying, and in mid air aloud thus cried: " 'Arm, warriors, arm for fight! the foe at hand, Whom fled we thought, will save us long pursuit

This day; fear not his flight; so thick a cloud He comes, and settled in his face I see Sad resolution and secure: let each His adamantine coat gird well, and each Fit well his helm, gripe fast his orbéd shield, Borne even or high; for this day will pour down, If I conjecture aught, no drizzling shower, But rattling storm of arrows barbed with fire.'

"So warned he them, aware themselves, and soon In order, quit of all impediment, Instant without disturb they took alarm, And onward moved embattled: when, behold, Not distant far, with heavy pace, the foe Approaching gross and huge, in hollow cube Training his devilish enginery, impaled On every side with shadowing squadrons deep, To hide the fraud. At interview both stood Awhile; but suddenly at head appeared Satan, and thus was heard commanding loud:

"' Vanguard, to right and left the front unfold; That all may see who hate us, how we seek Peace and composure, and with open breast Stand ready to receive them, if they like Our overture, and turn not back perverse; But that I doubt; however, witness Heaven, Heaven witness thou anon, while we discharge Freely out part; ye who appointed stand, Do as you have in charge, and briefly touch What we propound, and loud, that all may hear?

"So scoffing, in ambiguous words, he scarce Had ended, when to right and left the front Divided, and to either flank retired: Which to our eyes discovered, new and strange, A triple mounted row of pillars laid On wheels (for like to pillars most they seemed, Or hollowed bodies made of oak or fir, With branches lopped, in wood or mountain felled) Brass, iron, stony mould, had not their mouths With hideous orifice gaped on us wide, Portending hollow truce; at each behind

A seraph stood, and in his hand a reed Stood waving, tipped with fire; while we, suspense, Collected stood within our thoughts amused, Not long; for sudden all at once their reeds Put forth, and to a narrow vent applied With nicest touch. Immediate in a flame. But soon obscured with smoke, all Heaven appeared, From those deep-throated engines belched, whose roar Embowelled with outrageous noise the air, And all her entrails tore, disgorging foul Their devilish glut, chained thunderbolts and hail Of iron globes; which, on the victor host Levelled, with such impetuous fury smote, That whom they hit, none on their feet might stand, Though standing else as rocks, but down they fell By thousands, angel on archangel rolled, The sooner for their arms: unarmed they might Have easily, as spirits, evaded swift By quick contration or remove; but now Foul dissipation followed, and forced rout; Nor served it to relax their serried files. What should they do? if on they rushed, repulse Repeated, and indecent overthrow Doubled, would render them yet more despised. And to their foes a laughter; for in view Stood ranked of seraphim another row, In posture to displode their second tire Of thunder: back defeated to return They worse abhorred. Satan beheld their plight, And to his mates thus in derision called: "O friends, why come not on these victors proud?

Trewhile they fierce were coming; and when we,
To entertain them fair with open front
And breast (what could we more?) propounded terms
Of composition, straight they changed their minds,
Flew off, and into strange vagaries fell,
As they would dance; yet for a dance they seemed Somewhat extravagant and wild, perhaps
For joy of offered peace: but I suppose,
If our proposals once again were heard,

We should compel them to a quick result.'

"To whom thus Belial, in like gamesome mood:
Leader, the terms we sent were terms of weight,
Of hard contents, and full of force urged home,
Such as we might perceive amused them all,
And stumbled many; who receives them right,
Had need from head to foot well understand;
Not understood, this gift they have besides,
They show us when our foes walk not upright.'

"So they among themselves, in pleasant vein, Stood scoffing, heightened in their thoughts beyond All doubt of victory; eternal might To match with their inventions they presumed So easy, and of his thunder made a scorn, And all his host derided, while they stood Awhile in trouble: but they stood not long; Rage prompted them at length, and found them arms Against such hellish mischief fit to oppose. Forthwith (behold the excellence, the power, Which God hath in his mighty angels placed) Their arms away they threw, and to the hills (For earth hath this variety from Heaven Of pleasure situate in hill and dale) Light as the lighting glimpse they ran, they flew: From their foundations lossening to and fro They plucked the seated hills with all their load, Rocks, waters, woods, and by the shaggy tops Uplifting bore them in their hands: amaze, Be sure, and terror, seized the rebel host, When coming towards them so dread they saw The bottom of the mountains upward turned; Till on those curséd engines, triple row They saw them whelmed, and all their confidence Under the weight of mountains buried deep; Themselves invaded next, and on their heads Main promontories flung, which in the air Came shadowing, and oppressed whole legions armed; Their armour helped their harm, crushed in and bruised Into their substance pent, which wrought them pain Implacable, and many a dolorous groan, Long struggling underneath, ere they could wind Out of such prison, though spirits of purest light, Purest at first, now gross by sinning grown. The rest in imitation to like arms Betook them, and the neighboring hills uptore; So hills amid the air encountered hills Hurled to and fro with jaculation dire, That under ground they fought in dismal shade; Infernal noise! war seemed a civil game To this uproar; horrid confusion heaped Upon confusion rose: and now all Heaven Had gone to wrack, with ruin overspread, Had not the Almighty Father, where he sits Shrined in his sanctuary of Heaven secure, Consulting on the sum of things, foreseen This tumult, and permitted all, advised: That his great purpose he might so fulfil, To honor his anointed Son avenged Upon his enemies, and to declare All power on him transferred: whence to his son, The assessor of his throne, he thus began: " 'Effulgence of my glory, Son beloved, Son in whose face invisible is beheld Visibly, what by deity I am, And in whose hand what by decree I do, Second Omnipotence! two days are past, Two days, as we compute the days of Heaven, Since Michael and his powers went forth to tame These disobedient; sore hath been their fight, As likeliest was, when two such foes met armed; For to themselves I left them; and thou knowest Equal in their creation they were formed, Save what sin hath impaired, which yet hath wrought Insensibly, for I suspend their doom; Whence in prepetual fight they needs must last Endless, and no solution will be found: War wearied hath performed what war can do, And to disordered rage let lose the reins, With mountains as with weapons armed, which makes Wild work in Heaven, and dangerous to the main.

Two days are therefore past, the third is thine; For thee I have ordained it, and thus far Have suffered, that the glory may be thine Of ending this great war, since none but thou Can end it. Into thee such virtue and grace Immense I have transfused, that all may know In Heaven and Hell thy power above compare; And, this perverse commotion governed thus, To manifest the worthiest to be Heir Of all things, to be Heir and to be King By sacred unction, thy deserved right. Go then, thou mightiest in thy Father's might, Ascend my chariot, guide the rapid wheels That shake Heaven's basis, bring forth all my war, My bow and thunder, my almighty arms Gird on, and sword upon thy puissant thigh; Pursue these sons of darkness, drive them out From all Heaven's bounds into the utter deep; There let them learn, as likes them, to despise God and Messiah his anointed King.'

"He said, and on his Son with rays direct Shone full; he all his Father full expressed

Ineffably into his face received;

And thus the filial Godhead answering spake: "'O Father, O supreme of heavenly thrones, First, highest, holiest, best! thou always seek'st To glorify thy Son, I always thee, As is most just; this I my glory account, My exaltation, and my whole delight, That thou in me, well pleased, declar'st thy will Fulfilled, which to fulfil is all my bliss. Sceptre and power, thy giving, I assume And gladlier shall resign, when in the end Thou shalt be all in all, and I in thee For ever, and in me all whom thou lov'st: But whom thou hat'st, I hate, and can put on Thy terrors, as I put thy mildness on, Image of thee in all things, and shall soon, Armed with thy might, rid Heaven of these rebelled, To their prepared ill mansion driven down,

To chains of darkness, and the undying worm, That from thy just obedience could revolt, Whom to obey is happiness entire. Then shall thy saints unmixed, and from the impure Far separate, circling thy holy mount, Unfeigned hallelujahs to thee sing, Hymns of high praise, and I among them chief.' "So said, he, o'er his sceptre bowing, rose From the right hand of glory where he sat; And the third sacred morn began to shine, sound Dawning through Heaven: forth rushed with whirlwind The chariot of paternal Deity, Flashing thick flames, wheel within wheel undrawn, Itself instinct with spirit, but convoyed By four cherubic shapes; four faces each Had wondrous; as with stars their bodies all And wings were set with eyes, with eyes the wheels Of beryl, and careering fires between; Over their heads a crystal firmament, Whereon a sapphire throne, inlaid with pure Amber, and colors of the showery arch. He, in celestial panoply all armed Of radiant Urim, work divinely wrought, Ascended; at his right hand victory Sat eagle-winged; beside him hung his bow And quiver with three-bolted thunder stored, And from about him fierce effusion rolled Of smoke, and bickering flame, and sparkles dire: Attended with ten thousand thousand saints, He onward came; far off his coming shone; And twenty thousand (I their number heard) Chariots of God, half on each hand, were seen: He on the wings of cherub rode sublime On the crystálline sky, in sapphire throned, Illustrious far and wide, but by his own First seen; them unexpected joy surprised, When the great ensign of Messiah blazed Aloft by angels borne, his sign in Heaven; Under whose conduct Michael soon reduced His army, circumfused on either wing,

Under their Head embodied all in one. Before him power divine his way prepared; At his command the uprooted hills retired Each to his place; they heard his voice, and went Obsequious; Heaven his wonted face renewed, And with fresh flowerets hill and valley smiled. This saw his hapless foes, but stood obdured, And to rebellious fight rallied their powers Insensate, hope conceiving from despair. In heavenly spirits could such perverseness dwell? But to convince the proud what signs avail, Or wonders move the obdurate to relent? They, hardened more by what might most reclaim, Grieving to see his glory, at the sight Took envy; and, aspiring to his height, Stood re-embattled fierce, by force or fraud Weening to prosper, and at length prevail Against God and Messiah, or to fall In universal ruin last; and now To final battle drew, disdaining flight, Or faint retreat; when the great Son of God To all his host on either hand thus spake: "'Stand still in bright array, ye saints; here stand, Ye angels armed; this day from battle rest. Faithful hath been your warfare, and of God Accepted, fearless in his righteous cause; And as ye have received, so have ye done Invincibly: but of this curséd crew The punishment to other hand belongs; Vengeance is his, or whose he sole appoints: Number to this day's work is not ordained, Nor multitude; stand only and behold God's indignation on these godless poured By me; not you, but me, they have despised, Yet envied; against me is all their rage,

Kingdom, and power, and glory, appertains, Hath honored me according to his will. Therefore to me their doom he hath assigned, That they may have their wish, to try with me

Because the Father, to whom in Heaven supreme

In battle which the strongest proves, they all, Or I alone against them, since by strength They measure all, of other excellence Not emulous, nor care who them excels; Nor other strife with them do I vouchsafe.' "So spake the Son, and into terror changed

"So spake the Son, and into terror changed His countenance too severe to be beheld, And full of wrath bent on his enemies. At once the four spread out their starry wings With dreadful shade contiguous, and the orbs Of his fierce chariot rolled, as with the sound Of torrent floods, or of a numerous host. He on his impious foes right onward drove, Gloomy as night; under his burning wheels The stedfast empyréan shook throughout, All but the throne itself of God. Full soon Among them he arrived, in his right hand Grasping ten thousand thunders, which he sent Before him, such as in their souls infixed Plagues; they, astonished, all resistance lost, All courage; down their idle weapons dropped; O'er shields, and helms, and helmed heads, he rode Of thrones and mighty seraphim prostráte, That wished the mountains now might be again Thrown on them as a shelter from his ire. Nor less on either side tempestuous fell His arrows, from the fourfold-visaged four Distinct with eyes, and from the living wheels Distinct alike with multitude of eyes; One spirit in them ruled, and every eye Glared lightning, and shot forth pernicious fire Among the accursed, that withered all their strength, And of their wonted vigor left them drained, Exhausted, spiritless, afflicted, fallen. Yet half his strength he put not forth, but checked His thunder in mid volley; for he meant Not to destroy, but root them out of Heaven: The overthrown he raised, and, as a herd Of goats or timorous flock together throughd, Drove them before him thunderstruck, pursued

With terrors and with furies to the bounds
And crystal wall of Heaven; which, opening wide,
Rolled inward, and a spacious gap disclosed
Into the wasteful deep; the monstrous sight
Struck them with horror backward, but far worse
Urged them behind; headlong themselves they threw
Down from the verge of Heaven; eternal wrath
Burnt after them to the bottomless pit.

"Hell heard the unsufferable noise; Hell saw Heaven ruining from Heaven, and would have fled Affrighted; but strict fate had cast too deep Her dark foundations, and too fast had bound. Nine days they fell; confounded Chaos roared, And felt tenfold confusion in their fall Through his wild anarchy, so huge a rout Encumbered him with ruin: Hell at last Yawning received them whole, and on them closed: Hell, their fit habitation, fraught with fire Unquenchable, the house of woe and pain. Disburdened Heaven rejoiced, and soon repaired Her mural breach, returning whence it rolled. Sole victor, from the expulsion of his foes, Messiah his triumphal chariot turned: To meet him all his saints, who silent stood Eye-witnesses of his almighty acts, With jubilee advanced; and as they went, Shaded with branching palm, each order bright Sung triumph, and him sung victorious King, Son, Heir, and Lord to him dominion given, Worthiest to reign: he celebrated rode Triumphant through mid Heaven, into the courts And temple of his mighty Father throned On high; who into glory him received, Where now he sits at the right hand of bliss.

"Thus measuring things in Heaven by things on earth, At thy request, and that thou mayst beware By what is past, to thee I have revealed What might have else to human race been hid; The discord which befell, and war in Heaven Among the angelic powers, and the deep fall

Of those too high aspiring, who rebelled With Satan; he who envies now thy state, Who now is plotting how he may seduce Thee also from obedience, that with him Bereaved of happiness thou mayst partake His punishment, eternal misery; Which would be all his solace and revenge, As a despite done against the most High, Thee once to gain companion of his woe. But listen not to his temptations; warn Thy weaker; let it profit thee to have heard By terrible example the reward Of disobedience; firm they might have stood, Yet fell: remember, and fear to transgress."

BOOK VII.

THE ARGUMENT.

RAPHAEL, at the request of Adam, relates how and wherefore this world was first created; that God, after the expelling of Satan and his angels ont of Heaven, declared his pleasure to create another world, and other creatures to dwell therein; sends his Son with glory and attendance of angels to perform the work of creation in six days; the angels celebrate with hymns the performance thereof, and his reascension into Heaven.

Descend from Heaven, Urania, by that name If rightly thou art called, whose voice divine Following, above the Olympian hill I soar, Above the flight of Pegaséan wing. The meaning, not the name, I call; for thou Nor of the Muses nine, nor on the top Of old Olympus dwell'st; but, heavenly born, Before the hills appeared, or fountain flowed, Thou with eternal Wisdom didst converse, Wisdom thy sister, and with her didst play In presence of the almighty Father, pleased With thy celestial song. Up led by thee Into the Heaven of Heavens I have presumed, An earthly guest, and drawn empyreal air, Thy tempering: with like safety guided down, Return me to my native element; Lest from this flying steed unreined (as once Bellerophon, though from a lower clime) Dismounted, on the Aleian field I fall, Erroneous there to wonder, and forlorn. Half yet remains unsung, but narrower bound Within the visible diurnal sphere; Standing on earth, not rapt above the pole, More safe I sing with mortal voice, unchanged To hoarse or mute, though fallen on evil days,

On evil days though fallen, and evil tongues; In darkness, and with dangers compassed round, And solitude; yet not alone, while thou Visit'st my slumbers nightly, or when morn Purples the east: still govern thou my song, Urania, and fit audience find, though few. But drive far off the barbarous dissonance Of Bacchus and his revellers, the race Of that wild rout that tore the Thracian bard In Rhodope, where woods and rocks had ears To rapture, till the savage clamour drowned Both harp and voice; nor could the Muse defend Her son. So fail not thou, who thee implores: For thou art heavenly, she an empty dream.

Say, goddess, what ensued when Raphaël, The affable archangel, had forewarned Adam by dire example to beware Apostacy, by what befell in Heaven To those apostates, lest the like befall In Paradise to Adam or his race, Charged not to touch the interdicted tree, If they transgress, and slight that sole command So easily obeyed amid the choice Of all the taste else to please their appetite, Though wandering. He, with his consorted Eve, The story heard attentive, and was filled With admiration and deep muse, to hear Of things so high and strange, things to their thought So unimaginable as hate in Heaven, And war so near the peace of God in bliss, With such confusion; but the evil, soon Driven back, rebounded as a flood on those From whom it sprung, impossible to mix With blessedness. Whence Adam soon repealed The doubts that in his heart arose: and now Led on, yet sinless, with desire to know What nearer might concern him; how this world Of Heaven and earth conspicuous first began; When, and whereof created; for what cause; What within Eden, or without, was done

Before his memory; as one whose drouth Yet scarce allayed, still eyes the current stream, Whose liquid murmur heard, new thirst excites, Proceeded thus to ask his heavenly guest:

"Great things, and full of wonder in our ears. Far differing from this world, thou hast revealed, Divine interpreter, by favour sent Down from the empyréan to forewarn Us timely of what might else have been our loss, Unknown, which human knowledge could not reach: For which to the infinitely Good we owe Immortal thanks, and his admonishment Receive with solemn purpose to observe Immutably his sovereign will, the end Of what we are. But since thou hast vouchsafed Gently for our instruction to impart Things above earthly thought, which yet concerned Our knowing, as to highest wisdom seemed, Deign to descend now lower, and relate What may no less, perhaps, avail us known, How first began this Heaven which we behold Distant so high, with moving fires adorned Innumerable, and this which yields or fills All space, the ambient air wide interfused, Embracing round this florid earth; what cause Moved the Creator, in his holy rest Through all eternity, so late to build In Chaos; and, the work begun, how soon Absolved; if unforbid thou mayst unfold What we, not to explore the secrets ask Of his eternal empire, but the more To magnify his works, the more we know. And the great light of day yet wants to run Much of his race though steep; suspense in Heaven, Held by thy voice, thy potent voice, he hears, And longer will delay to hear thee tell His generation, and the rising birth Of nature from the unapparent deep: Or if the star of evening and the moon Haste to thy audience, night with her will bring Silence, and sleep listening to thee will watch, Or we can bid his absence, till thy song End, and dismiss thee ere the morning shine."

Thus Adam his illustrious guest besought; And thus the godlike angel answered mild: "This also thy request, with caution asked, Obtain: though to recount almighty works What words or tongue of seraph can suffice. Or heart of man suffice to comprehend? Yet what thou canst attain, which best may serve To glorify the Maker, and infer Thee also happier, shall not be withheld Thy hearing: such commission from above I have received, to answer thy desire Of knowledge within bounds; beyond, abstain To ask, nor let thine own inventions hope Things not revealed, which the invisible King, Only omniscient, hath suppressed in night, To none communicable in earth or Heaven: Enough is left besides to search and know. But knowledge is as food, and needs no less Her temperance over appetite, to know In measure what the mind may well contain: Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

"Know, then, that after Lucifer from Heaven (So call him, brighter once amidst the host Of angels, than that star the stars among) Fell with his flaming legions through the deep Into his place, and the great Son returned Victorious with his saints, the omnipotent Eternal Father from his throne beheld Their multitude, and to his Son thus spake:

"'At least our envious foe hath failed, who thought All like himself rebellious, by whose aid This inaccessible high strength, the seat Of Deity supreme, us dispossessed, He trusted to have seized, and into fraud Drew many, whom their place knows here no more; Yet far the greater part have kept, I see,

Their station; Heaven yet populous retains Number sufficient to possess her realms Though wide, and this high temple to frequent With ministries due and solemn rites: But lest his heart exalt him in the harm Already done, to have dispeopled Heaven, My damage fondly deemed, I can repair That detriment, if such it be to lose Self-lost, and in a moment will create Another world, out of one man a race Of innumerable, there to dwell, Not here, till by degrees of merit raised They open to themselves at length the way Up hither, under long obedience tried, And earth be changed to Heaven, and Heaven to earth. One kingdom, joy and union without end. Meanwhile inhabit lax, ye powers of Heaven; And thou my Word, begotten Son, by thee This I perform; speak thou, and be it done: My overshadowing Spirit and might with thee I send along; ride forth, and bid the deep Within appointed bounds be Heaven and earth; Boundless the deep, because I am who fill Infinitude, nor vacuous the space. Though I, uncircumscribed myself, retire, And put not forth my goodness, which is free To act or not, necessity and chance Approach not me, and what I will is fate.' "So spake the Almighty, and to what he spake

His Word, the filial Godhead, gave effect.
Immediate are the acts of God, more swift
Than time or motion, but to human ears
Cannot without process of speech be told,
So told as earthly notion can receive.
Great triumph and rejoicing was in Heaven,
When such was heard declared the Almighty's will;
Glory they sung to the most High, good will
To future men, and in their dwellings peace;
Glory to him, whose just avenging ire
Had driven out thy ungodly from his sight,

And the habitations of the just; to him Glory and praise, whose wisdom had ordained Good out of evil to create, instead Of spirits malign a better race to bring Into their vacant room, and thence diffuse His good to worlds and ages infinite.

" So sang the hierarchies: meanwhile the Son On his great expedition now appeared, Girt with omnipotence, with radiance crowned Of majesty divine; sapience and love Immense, and all his Father in him shone. About his chariot numberless were poured Cherub and seraph, potentates and thrones, And virtues, winged spirits, and chariots winged From the armoury of God, where stand of old Myriads between two brazen mountains lodged Against a solemn day, harnessed at hand, Celestial equipage; and now came forth Spontaneous, for within them spirit lived, Attendant on their Lord; Heaven opened wide Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound On golden hinges moving, to let forth The King of Glory, in his powerful Word And Spirit coming to create new worlds. On heavenly ground they stood, and from the shore They viewed the vast immeasurable abyss Outrageous as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild, Up from the bottom turned by furious winds And surging waves, as mountains, to assault Heaven's height, and with the centre mix the pole. "'Silence, ye troubled waves! and thou deep, peace!

Silence, ye troubled waves! and thou deep, peac Said then the omnific Word: 'your discord end!' Nor stayed, but on the wings of cherubim Uplifted, in paternal glory rode Far into Chaos, and the world unborn; For Chaos heard his voice: him all his train Followed in bright procession, to behold Creation, and the wonders of his might. Then stayed the fervid wheels, and in his hand He took the golden compasses, prepared

In God's eternal store, to cirumscribe . This universe, and all created things: One foot he centered, and the other turned Round through the vast profoundity obscure, And said: 'Thus far extend, thus far thy bounds, This be thy just circumference, O world. Thus God the Heaven created, thus the earth, Matter unformed and void: darkness profound Covered the abyss; but on the watery calm His brooding wings the Spirit of God outspread. And vital virtue infused, and vital warmth Throughout the fluid mass, but downward purged The black tartarous cold infernal dregs, Adverse to life: then founded, then conglobed Like things to like, to several place Disparted, and between spun out the air, And earth self-balanced on her centre hung. "'Let there be light!' said God, and forthwith light Ethereal, first of things, quintessence pure, Sprung from the deep, and from her native east To journey through the airy gloom began, Sphered in a radiant cloud, for yet the sun Was not; she in a cloudy tabernacle Sojourned the while. God saw the light was good; And light from darkness by the hemisphere Divided: light the day, and darkness night He named. Thus was the first day even and morn: Nor passed uncelebrated, nor unsung My the celestial quires, when orient light Exhaling first from darkness they beheld; Sirth-day of Heaven and earth; with joy and shout The hollow universal orb they filled, And touched their golden harps, and hymning praised God and his works; Creator him they sung, Both when first evening was, and when first morn.

"Again, God said, 'Let there be firmament Amid the waters, and let it divide The waters from the waters!' and God made The firmament, expanse of liquid, pure, Transparent, elemental air, diffused In circuit to the uttermost convex
Of this great round; partition firm and sure,
The waters underneath from those above
Dividing: for as earth, so he the world
Built on circumfluous waters calm, in wide
Crystalline ocean: and the loud misrule
Of Chaos far removed, lest fierce extremes
Contiguous might distemper the whole frame:
And Heaven he named the firmament: so even
And morning chorus sung the second day.

"The earth was formed, but in the womb as yet Of waters, embryon immature involved, Appeared not: over all the face of earth Main ocean flowed, not idle, but, with warm Prolific humor softening all her globe, Fermented the great mother to conceive, Satiate with genial moisture, when God said, 'Be gathered now, ye waters under Heaven, Into one place, and let dry land appear!' Immediately the mountains huge appear Emergent, and their broad bare backs upheave Into the clouds; their tops ascend the sky: So high as heaved the tumid hills, so low Down sunk a hollow bottom broad and deep, Capacious bed of waters: thither they Hasted with glad precipitance, uprolled As drops on dust conglobing from the dry; Part rise in crystal wall, or ridge direct, For haste; such flight the great command impressed On the swift floods; as armies at the call Of trumpet (for of armies thou hast heard) Troop to their standard, so the watery throng, Wave rolling after wave, where way they found, If steep, with torrent rapture; if through plain, Soft ebbing; nor withstood them rock or hili, But they, or under ground, or circuit wide With serpent error wandering, found their way, And on the washy ooze deep channels wore; Easy, ere God had bid the ground be dry, All but within those banks, where rivers now

Stream, and perpetual draw their humid train. The dry land, earth, and the great receptacle Of congregated waters he called seas: And saw that it was good, and said, 'Let the earth Put forth the verdant grass, herb yielding seed, And fruit-tree yielding fruit after her kind, Whose seed is in herself upon the earth!' He scarce had said, when the bare earth, till then Desert and bare, unsightly, unadorned, Brought forth the tender grass, whese verdure clad Her universal face with pleasant green; Then herbs of every leaf, that sudden flowered Opening their various colors, and made gay Her bosom, smelling sweet: and, these scarce blown, Forth flourished thick the clustering vine, forth crept The smelling gourd, up stood the corny reed Embattled in her field; and the humble shrub, And bush with frizzled hair implicit; last Rose as in dance the stately trees, and spread Their branches hung with copious fruit, or gemmed Their blossoms; with high woods the hills were crowned, With tufts the valleys and each fountain side, With borders long the rivers; that earth now Seemed like to Heaven, a seat where gods might dwell, Or wander with delight, and love to haunt Her sacred shades: though God had yet not rained Upon the earth, and man to till the ground None was, but from the earth a dewy mist Went up and watered all the ground, and each Plant of the field, which, ere it was in the earth God made, and every herb, before it grew On the green stem; God saw that it was good: So even and morn recorded the third day.

"Again the Almighty spake: 'Let there be lights High in the expanse of Heaven, to divide The day from night; and let them be for signs, For seasons, and for days, and circling years; And let them be for lights, as I ordain Their office in the firmament of Heaven To give light on the earth!' and it was so.

And God made two great lights, great for their use To man, the greater to have rule by day, The less by night altern; and made the stars. And set them in the firmament of Heaven To illuminate the earth, and rule the day In their vicissitude, and rule the night, And light from darkness to divide. God saw, Surveying his great work, that it was good: For of celestial bodies first the sun A mighty sphere he framed, unlightsome first, Though of ethereal mould: then formed the moon Globose, and every magnitude of stars, And sowed with stars the Heaven thick as a field: Of light by far the greater part he took, Transplanted from her cloudy shrine, and placed In the sun's orb, made porous to receive And drink the liquid light, firm to retain Her gathered beams, great palace now of light. Hither, as to their fountain, other stars Repairing, in their golden urns draw light, And hence the morning planet gilds her horns; By tincture of reflection they augment Their small peculiar, though from human sight So far remote, with diminution seen. First in his east the glorious lamp was seen, Regent of day, and all the horizon round Invested with bright rays, jocund to run His longitude through Heaven's high road; the gray Dawn and the Pleiades before him danced, Shedding sweet influence: less bright the moon, But opposite in levelled west was set, His mirror, with full face borrowing her light From him, for other light she needed none In that aspect, and still that distance keeps Till night, then in the east her turn she shines, Revolved on Heaven's great axle, and her reign With thousand lesser lights dividual holds, With thousand thousand stars, that then appeared Spangling the hemisphere: then first adorned With their bright luminaries that set and rose,

Glad evening and glad morn crowned the fourth day. "And God said: 'Let the waters generate Reptile with spawn abundant, living soul: And let fowl fly above the earth, with wings Displayed on the open firmament of Heaven! And God created the great whales, and each Soul living, each that crept, which plenteously The waters generated by their kinds. And every bird of wing after his kind; And saw that it was good, and bless'd them, saying: 'Be fruitful, multiply, and in the seas And lakes, and running streams, the waters fill; And let the fowl be multiplied on the earth!' Forthwith the sounds and seas, each creek and bay, With fry innumerable swarm, and shoals Of fish that with their fins and shining scales Glide under the green wave, in sculls that oft Bank the mid sea; part single, or with mate, Graze the sea-weed their pasture, and through groves Of coral spray, or sporting with quick glance Show to the sun their waved coats dropt with gold. Or, in their pearly shells at ease, attend Moist nutriment, or under rocks their food In jointed armour watch; on smooth the seal And bended dolphins play: part huge of bulk Wallowing unwieldy, enormous in their gait, Tempest the ocean; there leviathan, Hugest of living creatures, on the deep Stretched like a promontory, sleeps or swims, And seems a moving land, and at his gills Draws in, and at his trunk spouts out, a sea. Meanwhile the tepid caves, and fens, and shores, Their brood as numerous hatch, from the egg that soon Bursting with kindly rupture forth disclosed Their callow young; but feathered soon and fledge, They summed their pens, and, soaring the air sublime With clang despised the ground, under a cloud In prospect; there the eagle and the stork On cliffs and cedar tops their eyries build: Part loosely wing the region, part more wise

In common, ranged in figure, wedge their way, Intelligent of seasons, and set forth Their airy caravan, high over seas Flying, and over lands, with mutual wing Easing their flight; so steers the prudent crane Her annual voyage, borne on winds; the air Floats, as they pass, fanned with unnumbered plumes: From branch to branch the smaller birds with song Solaced the woods, and spread their painted wings Till even, nor then the solemn nightingale Ceased warbling, but all night tuned her soft lays; Others on silver lakes and rivers bathed Their downy breast; the swan with archéd neck Between her white wings mantling proudly, rows Her state with oary feet; yet oft they quit The dank, and, rising on stiff pennons, tower The mid aërial sky: others on ground Walked firm; the crested cock, whose clarion sounds The silent hours, and the other whose gay train Adorns him, coloured with the florid hue Of rainbows and starry eyes. The waters thus With fish replenished, and the air with fowl, Evening and morn solemnized the fifth day. "The sixth, and of creation last, arose With evening harps and matin, when God said: 'Let the earth bring forth soul living in her kind, Cattle, and creeping things, and beast of the earth, Each in their kind!' The earth obeyed, and straight Opening her fertile womb, teemed at a birth Innumerous living creatures, perfect forms, Limbed and full grown: out of the ground up rose, As from his lair, the wild beast, where he wons In forest wild, in thicket, brake, or den; Among the trees in pairs they rose, they walked: The cattle in the fields and meadows green: Those rare and solitary, these in flocks Pasturing at once, and in broad herds upsprung. The grassy clods now calved, now half appeared The tawny lion, pawing to get free His hinder parts, then springs as broke from bonds,

And rampart shakes his brinded main; the ounce, The libbard, and the tiger, as the mole Rising, the crumbled earth above them threw In hillocks: the swift stag from underground Bore up his branching head: scarce from his mould Behemoth, biggest born of earth, upheaved His vastness: fleeced the flocks and bleating rose, As plants: ambiguous between sea and land The river-horse and scaly crocodile. At once came forth whatever creeps the ground, Insect or worm: those waved their limber fans For wings, and smallest lineaments exact In all the liveries decked of summer's pride With spots of gold and purple, azure and green; These as a line their long dimension drew, Streaking the ground with sinuous trace; not all Minims of nature: some of serpent kind, Wondrous in length and corpulence, involved Their snaky folds, and added wings. First crept The parsimonious emmet, provident Of future, in small room large heart enclosed; Pattern of just equality perhaps Hereafter, joined in her popular tribes Of commonalty: swarming next appeared The female bee, that feeds her husband drone Deliciously, and builds her waxen cells With honey stored: the rest are numberless, And thou their natures know'st, and gav'st them names. Needless to thee repeated; nor unknown The serpent, subtlest beast of the field, Of huge extent sometimes, with brazen eyes And hairy mane terrific, though to thee Not noxious, but obedient at thy call. "Now Heaven in all her glory shone, and rolled

Her motions, as the great first Mover's hand First wheeled their course; earth in her rich attire Consummate lovely smiled; air, water, earth, By fowl, fish, beast, was flown, was swum, was walked Frequent; and of the sixth day yet remained: There wanted yet the master-work, the end

Of all yet done; a creature who, not prone And brute as other creatures, but endued With sanctity of reason, might erect His stature, and upright with front serene Govern the rest, self-knowing; and from thence Magnanimous to correspond with Heaven, But grateful to acknowledge whence his good Descends; thither with heart, and voice, and eyes Directed in devotion, to adore And worship God supreme, who made him chief Of all his works; therefore the Omnipotent Eternal Father (for where is not he Present?) thus to his Son audibly spake: "'Let us make now man in our image, man In our similitude, and let them rule Over the fish and fowl of sea and air, Beast of the field, and over all the earth, And every creeping thing that creeps the ground. This said, he formed thee, Adam; thee, O man, Dust of the ground, and in thy nostrils breathed The breath of life; in his own image he Created thee, in the image of God Express, and thou becam'st a living soul. Male he created thee, but thy consort Female, for race; then bless'd mankind, and said: 'Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the earth; Subdue it, and throughout dominion hold Over fish of the sea, and fowl of the air, And every living thing that moves on the earth. Wherever thus created, for no place Is yet distinct by name, thence, as thou know'st, He brought thee into this delicious grove, This garden, planted with the trees of God Delectable both to behold and taste; And freely all their pleasant fruit for food Gave thee; all sorts are here that all the earth yields, Variety without end; but of the tree Which, tasted, works knowledge of good and evil, Thou mayst not; in the day thou eat'st, thou diest. Death is the penalty imposed: beware,

And govern well thy appetite; lest Sin Surprise thee, and her black attendant Death. "Here finished he, and all that he had made Viewed, and behold all was entirely good; So even and morn accomplished the sixth day: Yet not till the Creator, from his work Desisting, though unwearied, up returned, Up to the Heaven of Heavens, his high abode, Thence to be bold this new-created world, The addition of his empire, how it showed In prospect from his throne, how good, how fair, Answering his great idea. Up he rode, Followed with acclamation, and the sound Symphonious of ten thousand harps that tuned Angelic harmonies: the earth, the air, Resounded (thou rememberest, for thou heard'st), The Heavens and all the constellations rung, The planets in their station listening stood, While the bright pomp ascended jubilant. 'Open, ve everlasting gates!' they sung; 'Open, ye Heavens, your living doors; let in The great Creator from his work returned Magnificent, his six days' work, a world; Open, and henceforth oft; for God will deign To visit oft the dwellings of just men Delighted, and with frequent intercourse Thither will send his wingéd messengers On errands of supernal grace.' So sung The glorious train ascending: He through Heaven, That opened wide her blazing portals, led To God's eternal house direct the way; A broad and ample road, whose dust is gold, And pavement stars, as stars to thee appear, Seen in the galaxy, that milky way, Which nightly as a circling zone thou seest Powdered with stars. And now on earth the seventh Evening arose in Eden, for the sun Was set, and twilight from the east came on, Forerunning night; when at the holy mount Of Heaven's high-seated top, the imperial throne

Of Godhead, fixed for ever firm and sure, The Filial Power arrived, and sat him down With his great Father; for he also went Invisible, yet stayed (such privilege Hath Omnipresence), and the work ordained, Author and end of all things, and from work Now resting, blessed and hallowed the seventh day. As resting on that day from all his work, But not in silence holy kept; the harp Had work, and rested not; the solemn pipe, . And dulcimer, all organs of sweet stop, All sounds on fret by string or golden wire, Tempered soft tunings, intermixed with voice Choral or unison; of incense clouds, Fuming from golden censers, hid the mount. Creation and the six days' acts they sung: 'Great are thy works, Jehovah! infinite Thy power! what thought can measure thee, or tongue Relate thee? Greater now in thy return Than from the giant angels: thee that day Thy thunders magnified; but to create Is greater than created to destroy. Who can impair thee, mighty King, or bound Thy empire? Easily the proud attempt Of spirits apostate and their counsels vain Thou hast repelled, while impiously they thought Thee to diminish, and from thee withdraw The number of thy worshippers. Who seeks To lessen thee, against his purpose serves To manifest the more thy might: his evil Thou usest, and from thence creat'st more good. Witness this mew-made world, another Heaven From Heaven-gate not far, founded in view On the clear hyaline, the glassy sea; Of amplitude almost immense, with stars Numerous, and every star perhaps a world Of destined habitation; but thou know'st Their seasons: among these the seat of men, Earth, with her nether ocean circumfused, Their pleasant dwelling-place. Thrice happy men,

And sons of men, whom God hath thus advanced, Created in his image, there to dwell
And worship him, and in reward to rule
Over his works, on earth, in sea, or air,
And multiply a race of worshippers
Holy and just; thrice happy if they know
Their happiness, and persevere upright!'

"So sung they, and the empyréan rung With hallelujahs: thus was sabbath kept. And thy request think now fulfilled, that asked How first this world and face of things began, And what before thy memory was done From the beginning, that posterity Informed by thee might know: if else thou seek'st Aught, not surpassing human measure, say."

BOOK VIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

ADAM inquires concerning celestial motions, is doubtfully answered, and ex orted to search rather things more worthy of knowledge. Adam assents, and, still desirous to detain Raphael, relates to him what he remembered since his own creation, his placing in Paradise, his talk with God concerning solitude and fit society. his first meeting and nuptials with Eve, his discourse with the angel thereupon, who, after admonitions repeated, departs.

The angel ended, and in Adam's ear So charming left his voice, that he a while Thought him still speaking, still stood fixed to hear; Then, as new waked, thus gratefully replied: "What thanks sufficient, or what recompense Equal have I to render thee, divine Historian, who thus largely hast allayed The thirst I had of knowledge, and vouchsafed This friendly condescension to relate Things else by me unsearchable, now heard With wonder, but delight, and, as is due, With glory attributed to the high Creator? Something yet of doubt remains, Which only thy solution can resolve. When I behold this goodly frame, this world Of Heaven and earth consisting, and compute Their magnitudes, this earth a spot, a grain, An atom, with the firmament compared And all her numbered stars, that seem to roll Spaces incomprehensible (for such, Their distance argues, and their swift return Liurnal), merely to officiate light Round this opacous earth, this punctual spot,

One day and night, in all their vast survey
Useless besides; reasoning I oft admire,
How nature, wise and frugal, could commit
Such disproportions, with superfluous hand
So many nobler bodies to create,
Greater so manifold, to this one use,
For aught appears, and on their orbs impose
Such restless revolution day by day
Repeated; while the sedentary earth,
That better might with far less compass move,
Served by more noble than herself, attains
Her end without least motion, and receives,
As tribute, such a sumless journey brought
Of incorporeal speed, her warmth and light;
Speed, to describe whose swiftness number fails."

So spake our sire, and by his countenance seemed Entering on studious thoughts abstruse, which Eve Perceiving, where she sat retired in sight, With lowliness majestic from her seat, And grace that won who saw to wish her stay, Rose, and went forth among her fruits and flowers, To visit how they prospered, bud and bloom, Her nursery; they at her coming sprung, And, touched by her fair tendance, gladlier grew, Yet went she not, as not with such discourse Delighted, or not capable her ear Of what was high; such pleasure she reserved, Adam relating, she sole auditress: Her husband the relater she preferred Before the angel, and of him to ask Chose rather: he, she knew, would intermix Grateful digressions, and solve high dispute With conjugal caresses; from his lip Not words alone pleased her. Oh! when meet now Such pairs, in love and mutual honour joined? With goddess-like demeanour forth she went, Not unattended, for on her as queen A pomp of winning graces waited still, And from about her shot darts of desire Into all eyes to wish her still in sight.

And Raphael now, to Adam's doubt proposed,

Benevolent and facile thus replied:

"To ask or search I blame thee not, for Heaven Is as the book of God before thee set, Wherein to read his wondrous works, and learn His seasons, hours, or days, or months, or years: This to attain, whether Heaven move or earth Imports not, if thou reckon right; the rest From man or angel the great Architect Did wisely to conceal, and not divulge His secrets to be scanned by them who ought Rather admire; or if they list to try Conjecture, he his fabric of the Heavens Hath left to their disputes, perhaps to move His laughter at their quaint opinions wide Hereafter, when they come to model Heaven And calculate the stars, how they will wield The mighty frame; how build, unbuild, contrive To save appearances; how gird the sphere With centric and eccentric scribbled o'er, Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb: Already by thy reasoning this I guess, Who art to lead thy offspring, and supposest That bodies bright and greater should not serve The less not bright, nor Heaven such journeys run, Earth sitting still, when she alone receives The benefit. Consider first, that great Or bright infers not excellence: the earth Though, in comparison of Heaven, so small, Nor glistering, may of solid good contain More plenty than the sun that barren shines, Whose virtue on itself works no effect, But in the fruitful earth; there first received. His beams, unactive else, their vigour find. Yet not to earth are those bright luminaries Officious, but to thee, earth's habitant. And for the Heaven's wide circuit, let it speak The Maker's high magnificence, who built So spacious, and his line stretched out so far: That man may know he dwells in his own:

An edifice too large for him to fill, Lodged in a small partition, and the rest Ordained for uses to his Lord best known. The swiftness of those circles attribute, Though numberless, to his omnipotence, That to corporeal substance could add Speed almost spiritual: me thou think'st not slow, Who since the morning hour set out from Heav'n, Where God resides, and ere mid-day arrived In Eden, distance inexpressible By numbers that have name. But this I urge. Admitting motion in the Heavens, to show Invalid that which thee to doubt it moved; Not that I so affirm, though so it seem To thee who hast thy dwelling here on earth. God, to remove his ways from human sense, Placed Heaven from earth so far, that earthly sight, If it presume, might err in things too high, And no advantage gain. What if the sun Be centre to the world, and other stars, By his attractive virtue and their own Incited, dance about him various rounds? Their wandering course now high, now low, then hid, Progressive, retrograde, or standing still, In six thou seest; and what if seventh to these The planet earth, so steadfast though she seem, Insensibly three different motions move? Which else to several spheres thou must ascribe, Moved contrary with thwart obliquities, Or save the sun his labour, and that swift Nocturnal and diurnal rhomb supposed Invisible else, above all stars, the wheel Of day and night; which needs not thy belief If earth industrious of herself fetch day Travelling east, and with her part averse From the sun's beam meet night, her other part Still luminous by his ray. What if that light, Sent from her through the wide transpicuous air, To the terrestrial moon be as a star Enlightening her by day, as she by night

This earth? reciprocal, if land be there, Fields and inhabitants: her spots thou seest As clouds, and clouds may rain, and rain produce Fruits in her softened soil, for some to eat Allotted there; and other suns, perhaps, With their attendant moons thou wilt descry. Communicating male and female light, Which two great sexes animate the world, Stored in each orb, perhaps, with some that live. For such vast room in nature unpossessed By living soul, desert and desolate, Only to shine, yet scarce to contribute Each orb a glimpse of light, conveyed so far Down to this habitable, which returns Light back to them, is obvious to dispute. But whether thus these things, or whether not: Whether the sun predominant in Heaven Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the sun; He from the east his flaming road begin, Or she from west her silent course advance With inoffensive pace that spinning sleeps On her soft axle, while she paces even, And bears thee soft with the smooth air along: Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid; Leave them to God above, him serve and fear: Of other creatures, as him pleases best, Wherever placed, let him dispose: joy thou In what he gives to thee, this Paradise And thy fair Eve; Heaven is for thee too high To know what passes there; be lowly wise: Think only what concerns thee and thy being; Dream not of other worlds, what creatures there Live, in what state, condition, or degree, Contented that thus far hath been revealed Not of earth only, but of highest Heaven. To whom thus Adam, cleared of doubt, replied: "How fully hast thou satisfied me, pure Intelligence of Heaven, angel serene! And, freed from intricacies, taught to live The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts

To interrupt the sweet of life, from which God hath bid dwell far off all anxious cares, And not molest us, unless we ourselves Seek them with wandering thoughts, and notions vain. But apt the mind or fancy is to rove Unchecked, and of her roving is no end; Till warned, or by experience taught, she learn, That not to know at large of things remote From use, obscure and subtle, but to know That which before us lies in daily life, Is the prime wisdom; what is more, is fume Or emptiness, or fond impertinence, And renders us in things that most concern Unpractised, unprepared, and still to seek. Therefore from this high pitch let us descend A lower flight, and speak of things at hand Useful, whence haply mention may arise Of something not unseasonable to ask By sufferance, and thy wonted favour deigned. Thee I have heard relating what was done Ere my remembrance: now hear me relate My story, which perhaps thou hast not heard; And day is yet not spent; till then thou seest How subtly to detain thee I devise, Inviting thee to hear while I relate, Fond, were it not in hope of thy reply: For while I sit with thee, I seem in Heaven, And sweeter thy discourse is to my ear Than fruits of palm-tree pleasantest to thirst And hunger both, from labour, at the hour Of sweet repast: they satiate, and soon fill, Though pleasant; but thy words, with grace divine Imbued, bring to their sweetness no satiety." To whom thus Raphael answered heavenly meek:

"Nor are thy lips ungraceful, sire of men,
Nor tongue ineloquent; for God on thee
Abundantly his gifts hath also poured
Inward and outward both, his image fair;
Speaking or mute all comeliness and grace
Attends thee, and each word, each motion forms;

Nor less think we in Heaven of thee on earth Than of our fellow-servant, and inquire Gladly into the ways of God with man: For God we see hath honoured thee, and set On man his equal love; say therefore on, For I that day was absent, as befell, Bound on a voyage uncouth and obscure, Far on excursion toward the gates of Hell; Squared in full legion (such command we had) To see that none thence issued forth a spy, Or enemy, while God was in his work; Lest he, incensed at such eruption bold, Destruction with creation might have mixed. Not that they durst without his leave attempt. But us he sends upon his high behests For state, as sovran King, and to inure Our prompt obedience. Fast we found, fast shut The dismal gates, and barricadoed strong; But long ere our approaching heard within Noise, other than the sound of dance or song, Torment, and loud lament, and furious rage. Glad we returned up to the coasts of light Ere sabbath evening: so we had in charge. But thy relation now; for I attend, Pleased with thy words no less than thou with mine."

So spake the godlike power, and thus our sire:
"For man to tell how human life began
Is nard; for who himself beginning knew?
Desire with thee still longer to converse
Induced me. As new waked from soundest sleep,
Soft on the flowery herb I found me laid
In bamly sweat, which with his beams the sun
Soon dried, and on the reeking moisture fed.
Straight toward Heaven my wondering eyes I turned,
And gazed a while the ample sky; till, raised
By quick instinctive motion, up I sprung,
As thitherward endeavouring, and upright
Stood on my feet; about me round I saw
Hill, dale, and shady woods, and sunny plains,
And liquid lapse of murmuring streams; by these

Creatures that lived, and moved, and walked, or flew. Birds on the branches warbling; all things smiled; With fragrance and with joy my heart o'erflowed. Myself I then perused, and limb by limb Surveyed, and sometimes went, and sometimes ran With supple joints, as lively vigour led: But who I was, or where, or from what cause, Knew not; to speak I tried, and forthwith spake; My tongue obeyed, and readily could name Whate'er I saw. 'Thou sun,' said I, 'fair light, And thou enlightened earth, so fresh and gay, Ye hills and dales, ye rivers, woods, and plains, And ye that live and move, fair creatures, tell, Tell, if ye saw, how came I thus, how here? Not of myself; by some great Maker, then, In goodness and in power pre-eminent; Tell me, how may I know him, how adore, From whom I have that thus I move and live, And feel that I am happier than I know?' While thus I called, and strayed I knew not whither From where I first drew air, and first beheld This happy light, when answer none returned, On a green shady bank, profuse of flowers, Pensive I sat me down; there gentle sleep First found me, and with soft oppression seized My drowsied sense, untroubled, though I thought I then was passing to my former state Insensible, and forthwith to dissolve: When suddenly stood at my head a dream, Whose inward apparition gently moved My fancy to believe I yet had being, And lived: One came, methought, of shape divine, And said, 'Thy mansion wants thee, Adam; rise, First man, of men innumerable ordained First father! called by thee, I come thy guide To the garden of bliss, thy seat prepared.' So saying, by the hand he took me raised, And over fields and waters, as in air Smooth sliding without step, last led me up A woody mountain, whose high top was plain,

A circuit wide, enclosed, with goodliest trees Planted, with walks, and bowers, that what I saw Of earth before scarce pleasant seemed. Each tree Loaden with fairest fruit, that hung to the eye Tempting, stirred in me sudden appetite To pluck and eat; whereat I waked, and found Before mine eyes all real, as the dream Had lively shadowed: here had new begun My wandering, had not he who was my guide Up hither, from among the trees appeared, Presence divine. Rejoicing, but with awe, In adoration at his feet I fell Submiss: he reared me, and 'Whom thou sought'st I am,' Said mildly, 'Author of all this thou seest Above, or round about thee, or beneath. This Paradise I give thee; count it thine To till and keep, and of the fruit to eat: Of every tree that in the garden grows Eat freely with glad heart: fear here no dearth: But of the tree whose operation brings Knowledge of good and ill, which I have set The pledge of thy obedience and thy faith, Amid the garden by the tree of life, Remember what I warn thee, shun to taste, And shun the bitter consequence; for know, The day thou eat'st thereof, my sole command Transgressed, inevitably thou shalt die, From that day mortal; and this happy state Shalt lose, expelled from hence into a world Of woe and sorrow.' Sternly he pronounced The rigid interdiction, which resounds Yet dreadful in mine ear, though in my choice Not to incur; but soon his clear aspect Returned, and gracious purpose thus renewed: Not only these fair bounds, but all the earth, To thee and to thy race I give; as lords Possess it, and all things that therein live, Or live in sea, or air, beast, fish, and fowl. In sign whereof each bird and beast behold After their kinds. I bring them to receive

From thee their names, and pay thee fealty With low subjection: understand the same Of fish within their watery residence, Not hither summoned, since they cannot change Their element to draw the thinner air.

"As thus he spake, each bird and beast behold Approaching two and two; these cowering low With blandishment; each bird stopped on his wing. I named them, as they passed, and understood Their nature, with such knowledge God endued My sudden apprehension: but in these I found not what methought I wanted still; And to the heavenly vision thus presumed:

"'O by what name, for thou above all these, Above mankind, or aught than mankind higher, Surpassest far my naming; how may I Adore thee, Author of this universe, And all this good to man? for whose well being So amply, and with hands so liberal, Thou hast provided all things: but with me I see not who partakes. In solitude What happiness? who can enjoy this alone, Or all enjoying, what contentment find?' Thus I presumptuous; and the Vision bright, As with a smile more brightened, thus replied:

"'What call'st thou solitude? Is not the earth With various living creatures, and the air, Replenished, and all these at thy command To come and play before thee? Know'st thou not Their language and their ways? They also know, And reason not contemptibly: with these Find pastime, and bear rule; thy realm is large.' So spake the universal Lord, and seemed So ordering. I, with leave of speech implored And humble deprecation, thus replied:

"'Let not my words offend thee, heavenly Power, My Maker, be propitious while I speak. Hast thou not made me here thy substitute, And these inferior far beneath me set? Among unequals what society

Can sort, what harmony or true delight?
Which must be mutual, in proportion due
Given and received; but in disparity
The one intense, the other still remiss,
Cannot well suit with either, but soon prove
Tedious alike. Of fellowship I speak,
Such as I seek, fit to participate
All rational delight, wherein the brute
Cannot be human consort: they rejoice
Each with their kind, lion with lioness;
So fitly them in pairs thou hast combined:
Much less can bird with beast, or fish with fowl,
So well converse; nor with the ox the ape;
Worse then can man with beast, and least of all.'
"Whereto the Almighty answered, not displeased
'A nice and subtle happiness I see

'A nice and subtle happiness, I see,
Thou to thyself proposest, in the choice
Of thy associates, Adam, and wilt taste
No pleasure, though in pleasure, solitary.
What think'st thou then of me, and this my state?
Seem I to thee sufficiently possessed
Of happiness, or not? who am alone
From all eternity; for none I know
Second to me, or like, equal much less.
How have I, then, with whom to hold converse
Save with the creatures which I made, and those
To me inferior, infinite descents
Beneath what other creatures are to thee?'

"He ceased: I lowly answered: 'To attain
The height and depth of thy eternal ways
All human thoughts come short, Supreme of things!
Thou in thyself art perfect, and in thee
Is no deficience found; not so is man,
But in degree; the cause of his desire
By conversation with his like to help,
Or solace his defects. No need that thou
Shouldst propagate, already infinite,
And through all numbers absolute, though one;
But man by number is to manifest
His single imperfection, and beget

Like of his like, image multiplied,
In unity defective, which requires
Collateral love, and dearest amity.
Thou in thy secresy although alone,
Best with thyself accompanied, seek'st not
Social communication, yet so pleased
Canst raise thy creature to what height thou wilt
Of union or communion, deified:
I by conversing cannot these erect
From prone, nor in their ways complacence find.'
Thus I emboldened spake, and freedom used
Permissive, and acceptance found, which gained
This answer from the gracious voice divine:
""Thus far to try thee, Adam, I was pleased,

And find thee knowing not of beasts alone,
Which thou hast rightly named; but of thyself,
Expressing well the spirit within thee free,
My image, not imparted to the brute:
Whose fellowship therefore, unmeet for thee,
Good reason was thou freely shouldst dislike,
And be so minded still: I, ere thou spak'st,
Knew it not good for man to be alone,
And no such company as then thou sawest
Intended thee, for trial only brought,
To see how thou couldst judge of fit and meet:
What next I bring shall please thee, be assured,
Thy likeness, thy fit help, thy other self,
Thy wish exactly to thy heart's desire.'

"He ended, or I heard no more, for now
My earthly by his heavenly overpowered,
Which it had long stood under, strained to the height
In that celestial colloquy sublime,
As with an object that excels the sense
Dazzled and spent, sunk down, and sought repair
Of sleep, which instantly fell on me, called
By nature as in aid, and closed mine eyes.
Mine eyes he closed, but open left the cell
Of fancy, my internal sight, by which
Abstract as in a trance methought I saw,
Though sleeping, where I lay, and saw the shape

Still glorious before whom awake I stood; Who, stooping, opened my left side, and took From thence a rib, with cordial spirits warm, And life-blood streaming fresh: wide was the wound, But suddenly with flesh filled up and healed: The rib he formed and fashioned with his hands; Under his forming hands a creature grew, Manlike, but different sex, so lovely fair, That what seemed fair in all the world, seemed now Mean; or in her summed up, in her contained, And in her looks, which from that time infused Sweetness into my heart, unfelt before, And into all things from her air inspired The spirit of love and amorous delight. She disappeared, and left me dark; I waked To find her, or for ever to deplore Her loss, and other pleasures all abjure. When out of hope, behold her, not far off, Such as I saw her in my dream, adorned With what all earth or Heaven could bestow To make her amiable. On she came, Led by her heavenly Maker, though unseen, And guided by his voice, nor uninformed Of nuptial sanctity and marriage rites: Grace was in all her steps, Heaven in her eye, In every gesture dignity and love. I, overjoyed, could not forbear aloud: "'This turn hath made amends: thou hast fulfilled

"'This turn hath made amends: thou hast fulfilled Thy words, Creator bounteous and benign, Giver of all things fair! but fairest this Of all thy gifts! nor enviest. I now see Bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, myself Before me: woman is her name, of man Extracted; for this cause he shall forego Father and mother, and to his wife adhere; And they shall be one flesh, one heart, one soul.'

"She heard me thus, and though divinely brought, Yet innocence and virgin modesty, Her virtue and the conscience of her worth, That would be wooed, and not unsought be won,

Not obvious, not obtrusive, but retired, The more desirable; or, to say all, Nature herself, though pure of sinful thought, Wrought in her so, that seeing me she turned: I followed her; she what was honour knew, And with obsequious majesty approved My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bower I led her blushing like the morn: all Heaven And happy constellations on that hour Shed their selectest influence; the earth Gave signs of gratulation, and each hill; Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs Whispered it to the woods, and from their wings Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub. Disporting, till the amorous bird of night Sung spousal, and bid haste the evening star On his hill top, to light the bridal lamp. "Thus have I told thee all my state, and brought My story to the sum of earthly bliss Which I enjoy, and must confess to find In all things else delight indeed, but such As, used or not, works in the mind no change, Nor vehement desire: these delicacies I mean of taste, sight, smell, herbs, fruits and flowers, Walks, and the melody of birds; but here Far otherwise: transported I behold, Transported touch; here passion first I felt, Commotion strange, in all enjoyments else Superior and unmoved, here only weak Against the charm of beauty's powerful glance. Or nature failed in me, and left some part Not proof enough such object to sustain; Or, from my side subducting, took perhaps More than enough; at least, on her bestowed Too much of ornament, in outward show Elaborate, of inward less exact. For well I understand in the prime end Of nature her the inferior, in the mind And inward faculties, which most excel, In outward also her resembling less

His image who made both, and less expressing The character of that dominion given O'er other creatures; yet when I approach Her loveliness, so absolute she seems. And in herself complete, so well to know Her own, that what she wills to do or say Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best: All higher knowledge in her presence falls Degraded; wisdom in discourse with her Loses discountenanced, and like folly shows: Authority and reason on her wait, As one intended first, not after made Occasionally; and, to consummate all, Greatness of mind and nobleness their seat Build in her loveliest, and create an awe About her, as a guard angelic placed."

To whom the angel, with contracted brow: "Accuse not nature, she hath done her part; Do thou but thine, and be not diffident Of wisdom; she deserts thee not, if thou Dismiss not her, when most thou need'st her nigh. By attributing overmuch to things Less excellent, as thou thyself perceiv'st. For what admir'st thou, what transports thee so? An outside? fair, no doubt, and worthy well Thy cherishing, thy honouring, and thy love, Not thy subjection: weigh with her thyself; Then value: oft-times nothing profits more Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right Well managed; of that skill the more thou know'st, The more she will acknowledge thee her head, And to realities yield all her shows: Made so adorn for thy delight the more, So awful, that with honour thou mayst love, Thy mate, who sees when thou art seen least wise. But if the sense of touch whereby mankind Is propagated seem such dear delight Beyond all other, think the same vouchsafed To cattle and each beast; which would not be To them made common and divulged, if aught

Therein enjoyed were worthy to subdue
The soul of man, or passion in him move.
What higher in her society thou find'st
Attractive, human, rational, love still;
In loving thou dost well, in passion not,
Wherein true love consists not; love refines
The thoughts, and heart enlarges, hath his seat
In reason, and is judicious, is the scale
By which to heavenly love thou may'st ascend,
Not sunk in carnal pleasure; for which cause
Among the beasts no mate for thee is found."

To whom thus, half abashed, Adam replied: "Neither her outside formed so fair, nor aught In procreation common to all kinds (Though higher of the genial bed by far, And with mysterious reverence I deem), So much delights me, as those graceful acts. Those thousand decencies that daily flow From all her words and actions mixed with love And sweet compliance, which declare unfeigned Union of mind, or in us both one soul; Harmony to behold in wedded pair More grateful than harmonious sound to the ear. Yet these subject not: I to thee disclose What inward thence I feel, not therefore foiled, Who meet with various objects, from the sense Variously representing; yet, still free, Approve the best, and follow what I approve. To love thou blamest me not; for love, thou say'st Leads up to Heaven, is both the way and guide; Bear with me, then, if lawful what I ask. Love not the heavenly spirits? and how their love Express they? by looks only? or do they mix Irradiance, virtual or immediate touch?"

To whom the angel, with a smile that glowed Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue,
Answered: "Let it suffice thee that thou know'st Us happy, and without love no happiness.
Whatever pure thou in the body enjoy'st (And pure thou wert created) we enjoy

In eminence, and obstacle find none Of membrane, joint or limb, exclusive bars: Easier than air with air, if spirits embrace, Total they mix, union of pure with pure Desiring; nor restrained conveyance need As flesh to mix with flesh, or soul with soul. But I can now no more; the parting sun Beyond the earth's green cape and verdant isles Hesperian sets, my signal to depart. Be strong, live happy, and love, but first of all Him whom to love is to obey, and keep His great command; take heed lest passion sway Thy judgment to do aught which else free will Would not admit; thine and of all thy sons The weal or woe in thee is placed: beware! I in thy persevering shall rejoice, And all the blest: stand fast; to stand or fall Free in thine own arbitrement it lies. Perfect within, no outward aid require; And all temptation to transgress repel."

So saying, he arose; whom Adam thus Followed with benediction: "Since to part, Go, heavenly guest, ethereal messenger, Sent from whose sovran goodness I adore. Gentle to me and affable hath been Thy condescension, and shall be honoured ever With grateful memory: thou to mankind Be good and friendly still, and oft return."

So parted they: the angel up to Heaven From the thick shade, and Adam to his bower.

BOOK IX.

THE ARGUMENT.

SATAN, having compassed the earth, with meditated guile returns as a mist by night into Paradise; enters into the serpent sleeping. Adam and Eve in the morning go forth to their labours, which Eve proposes to divide in several places, each labouring apart: Adam consents not, alleging the danger lest that enemy, of whom they were forewarned, should attempt her found alone: Eve, loath to be thought not circumspect or firm enough, urges her going apart, the rather desirous to make trial of her strength; Adam at last yields. The serpent finds her alone; his subtle approach, first gazing, then speaking, with much flattery extolling Eve above all other creatures. Eve, wondering to hear the serpent speak, asks how he attained to human speech and such understanding not till now; the serpent answers, that by tasting of a certain tree in the garden he attained both to speech and reason, till then void of both; Eve requires him to bring her to that tree, and finds it to be the tree of knowledge forbidden: the serpent, now grown bolder, with many wiles and arguments induces her at length to eat: she, pleased with the taste, deliberates a while whether to impart thereof to Adam or not; at last brings him of the fruit; relates what persuaded her to eat thereof: Adam, at first amazed, but perceiving her lost, resolves, through vehemence of love, to perish with her; and, extenuating the trespass, eats also of the fruit: the effects thereof in them both; they seek to cover their nakedness; then fall to variance and accusation of one another.

No more of talk where God or angel guest With man, as with his friend, familiar used To sit indulgent, and with him partake Rural repast, permitting him the while Venial discourse unblanned: I now must change Those notes to tragic; foul distrust, and breach Disloyal on the part of man, revolt, And disobedience; on the part of Heaven Now alienated, distance and distaste, Anger and just rebuke, and judgment given, That brought into this world a world of woe, Sin and her shadow Death, and misery Death's harbinger: sad task, yet argument

Not less but more heroic than the wrath Of stern Achilles on his foe pursued Thrice fugitive about Troy wall; or rage Of Turnus for Lavinia disespoused; Or Neptune's ire, or Juno's, that so long Perplexed the Greek and Cytherea's son; If answerable style I can obtain Of my celestial patroness, who designs Her nightly visitation unimplored, And dictates to me slumbering, or inspires Easy my unpremeditated verse: Since first this subject for heroic song Pleased me long choosing, and beginning late: Not sedulous by nature to indite Wars, hitherto the only argument Heroic deemed, chief mastery to dissect With long and tedious havoc fabled knights In battles feigned; the better fortitude Of patience and heroic martyrdom Unsung; or to describe races and games, Or tilting furniture, emblazoned shields, Impresses quaint, caparisons and steeds; Bases and tinsel trappings, gorgeous knights At joust or tournament; then marshalled feast Served up in hall with sewers and seneschals; The skill of artifice or office mean, Not that which justly gives heroic name To person or to poem. Me of these Nor skilled, nor studious, higher argument Remains, sufficient of itself to raise That name, unless an age too late, or cold Climate, or years, damp my intended wing Depressed, and much they may, if all be mine, Not here who brings it nightly to my ear.

The sun was sunk, and after him the star Of Hesperus, whose office is to bring Twilight upon the earth, short arbiter "Twixt day and night, and now from end to end Night's hemisphere had veiled the horizon round: When Satan, who late fled before the threats

Of Gabriel out of Eden, now improved In meditated fraud and malice, bent On man's destruction, maugre what might hap Of heavier on himself, fearless returned By night he had fled, and at midnight returned From compassing the earth, cautious of day, Since Uriel, regent of the sun, descried His entrance, and forewarned the cherubim That kept their watch; thence full of anguish driven, The space of seven continued nights he rode With darkness; thrice the equinoctial line He circled; four times crossed the car of night From pole to pole, travérsing each colúre: On the eighth returned, and on the coast averse From entrance or cherubic watch, by stealth Found unsuspected way. There was a place, Now not, though sin, not time, first wrought the change, Where Tigris at the foot of Paradise Into a gulf shot under ground, till part Rose up a fountain by the tree of life; In with the river sunk, and with it rose Satan, involved in rising mist; then sought Where to lie hid; sea he had searched, and land, From Eden over Pontus, and the pool Mæotis, up beyond the river Ob; Downward as far antartic; and in length West from Orontes to the ocean barred At Darien; thence to the land where flows Ganges and Indus: thus the orb he roamed With narrow search, and with inspection deep Considered every creature, which of all Most opportune might serve his wiles, and found The serpent subtlest beast of all the field. Him after long debate, irresolute Of thoughts revolved, his final sentence chose Fit vessel, fittest imp of fraud, in whom To enter, and his dark suggestions hide From sharpest sight; for in the wily snake, Whatever sleights, none would suspicious mark, As from his wit and native subtlety

Proceeding; which, in other beasts observed, Doubt might beget of diabolical power Active within beyond the sense of brute. Thus he resolved, but first from inward grief His bursting passion into plaints thus poured: "O earth! how like to Heaven, if not preferred More justly, seat worthier of gods, as built With second thoughts, reforming what was old! For what God, after better, worse would build? Terrestrial Heaven, danced round by other heavens That shine, yet bear their bright officious lamps, Light above light, for thee alone, as seems, In thee concentring all their precious beams Of sacred influence! As God in Heaven Is centre, yet extends to all, so thou Centring receiv'st from all those orbs; in thee, Not in themselves, all their known virtue appears Productive in herb, plant, and nobler birth Of creatures animate with gradual life Of growth, sense, reason, all summed up in man. With what delight could I have walked thee round, If I could joy in aught, sweet interchange Of hill and valley, rivers, woods, and plains, Now land, now sea, and shores with forest crowned, Rocks, dens, and caves! but I in none of these Find place or refuge; and the more I see Pleasures about me, so much more I feel Torment within me, as from the hateful seige Of contraries; all good to me becomes Bane, and in Heaven much worse would be my state. But neither here seek I, no, nor in Heaven To dwell, unless by mastering Heaven's supreme; Nor hope to be myself less miserable By what I seek, but others to make such As I, though thereby worse to me redound: For only in destroying I find ease. To my relentless thoughts; and him destroyed. Or won to what may work his utter loss, For whom all this was made, all this will soon Follow, as to him linked in weal or woe;

In woe then; that destruction wide may range: To me shall be the glory sole among The infernal powers, in one day to have marred What he, Almighty styled, six nights and days Continued making, and who knows how long Before had been contriving, though perhaps Not longer than since I in one night freed From servitude inglorious well nigh half The angelic name, and thinner left the throng Of his adorers: he, to be avenged, And to repair his numbers thus impaired, Whether such virtue spent of old now failed More angels to create, if they at least Are his created, or, to spite us more, Determined to advance into our room A creature formed of earth, and him endow, Exalted from so base original, With heavenly spoils, our spoils: what he decreed He effected; man he made, and for him built Magnificent this world, and earth his seat, Him lord pronounced, and (oh, indignity!) Subjected to his service angel-wings, And flaming ministers to watch and tend Their earthly charge: of these the vigilance I dread, and to elude, thus wrapped in mist Of midnight vapour, glide obscure and pry In every bush and brake, whose hap may find The serpent sleeping, in whose mazy folds To hide me and the dark intent I bring. Oh, foul descent! that I, who erst contended With gods to sit the highest, am now constrained Into a beast, and mixed with bestial slime, This essence to incarnate and imbrute, That to the height of deity aspired! But what will not ambition and revenge Descend to? who aspires must down as low As high he soared, obnoxious first or last To basest things. Revenge, at first though sweet, Bitter ere long back on itself recoils: Let it; I reck not, so it light well aimed,

Since higher I fall short, on him who next Provokes my envy, this new favourite Of Heaven, this man of clay, son of despite, Whom, us the more to spite, his Maker raised From dust: spite then with spite is best repaid."

So saying, through each thicket dank or dry Like a black mist low creeping, he held on His midnight search, where soonest he might find The serpent: him fast sleeping soon he found In labyrinth of many a round self-rolled, His head the midst, well stored with subtle wiles: Nor yet in horrid shade or dismal den, Nor nocent yet, but on the grassy herb Fearless, unfeared, he slept: in at his mouth The devil entered, and his brutal sense, In heart or head, possessing, soon inspired With act intelligential; but his sleep Disturbed not, waiting close the approach of morn. Now when as sacred light began to dawn In Eden on the humid flowers, that breathed Their morning incense, when all things that breathe, From the earth's great altar send up silent praise To the Creator, and his nostrils fill With grateful smell, forth came the human pair. And joined their vocal worship to the quire Of creatures wanting voice; that done, partake The season, prime for sweetest sents and airs: Then commune how that day they best may ply Their growing work: for much their work outgrew The hands' despatch of two gardening so wide. And Eve first to her husband thus began:

"Adam, well may we labour still to dress
This garden, still to tend plant, herb, and flower,
Our pleasant task enjoined; but, till more hands
Aid us, the work under our labour grows,
Luxurious by restraint; what we by day
Lop overgrown, or prune, or prop, or bind,
One night or two with wanton growth derides,
Tending to wild. Thou, therefore, now advise,
Or hear what to my mind first thoughts present;

Let us divide our labours, thou where choice Leads thee, or where most needs, whether to wind The woodbine round this arbour, or direct The clasping ivy where to climb, while I In yonder spring of roses intermixed With myrtle, find what to redress till noon: For while so near each other thus all day Our task we choose, what wonder if so near Looks intervene and smiles, or object new Casual discourse draw on, which intermits Our day's work, brought to little, though begun Early, and the hour of supper comes unearned?"

To whom mild answer Adam thus returned: "Sole Eve, associate sole, to me beyond Compare above all living creatures dear! Well hast thou motioned, well thy thoughts employed How we might best fulfil the work which here God hath assigned us, nor of me shalt pass Unpraised; for nothing lovelier can be found In woman, than to study household good, And good works in her husband to promote. Yet not so strictly hath our Lord imposed Labor, as to debar us when we need Refreshment, whether food, or talk between, Food of the mind, or this sweet intercourse Of looks and smiles; for smiles from reason flow, To brute denied, and are of love the food; Love, not the lowest end of human life. For not to irksome toil, but to delight He made us, and delight to reason joined. These paths and bowers doubt not but our joint hands Will keep from wilderness with ease, as wide As we need walk, till younger hands ere long Assist us: but if much converse perhaps Thee satiate, to short absence I could yield: For solitude sometimes is best society, And short retirement urges sweet return. But other doubt possesses me, lest harm Befall thee severed from me; for thou know'st What hath been warned us, what malicious foe, Envying our happiness, and of his own Despairing, seeks to work us woe and shame By sly assault; and somewhere nigh at hand Watches, no doubt, with greedy hope to find His wish and best advantage, us asunder, Hopeless to circumvent us joined, where each To other speedy aid might lend at need; Whether his first design be to withdraw Our feälty from God, or to disturb Conjugal love, than which perhaps no bliss Enjoyed by us excites his envy more; Or this, or worse, leave not the faithful side That gave thee being, still shades thee and protects. The wife, where danger or dishonor lurks, Safest and seemliest by her husband stays, Who guards her, or with her the worst endures."

To whom the virgin majesty of Eve, As one who loves, and some unkindness meets, With sweet austere composure thus replied:

"Offspring of Heaven and earth, and all earth's lord. That such an enemy we have, who seeks Our ruin, both by thee informed I learn, And from the parting angel overheard, As in a shady nook I stood behind, Just then returned at shut of evening flowers. But that thou shouldst my firmness, therefore, doubt To God or thee, because we have a foe May tempt it, I expected not to hear. His violence thou fear'st not, being such As we, not capable of death or pain, Can either not receive, or can repel. His fraud is then thy fear, which plain infers Thy equal fear that my firm faith and love Can by his fraud be shaken or seduced; Thoughts, which how found they harbour in thy breast, Adam, misthought of her to thee so dear?

To whom with healing words Adam replied: " Daughter of God and man, immortal Eve, For such thou art, from sin and blame entire:

Not diffident of thee do I dissuade

Thy absence from my sight, but to avoid The attempt itself, intended by our foe. For he who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses The tempted with dishonour foul, supposed Not incorruptible of faith, not proof Against temptation: thou thyself with scorn And anger wouldst resent the offered wrong, Though ineffectual found: misdeem not, then, If such affront I labour to avert From thee alone, which on us both at once The enemy, though bold, will hardly dare; Or, daring, first on me the assault shall light Nor thou his malice and false guile contemn, Subtle he needs must be, who could seduce Angels; nor think superfluous others' aid. I from the influence of thy looks receive Access in every virtue; in thy sight More wise, more watchful, stronger, if need were, Of outward strength; while shame, thou looking on, Shame to be overcome or over-reached, Would utmost vigour raise, and raised unite. Why should not thou like sense within thee feel When I am present, and thy trial choose With me, best witness of thy virtue tried?"

So spake domestic Adam in his care And matrimonial love; but Eve, who thought Less attributed to her faith sincere,

Thus her reply with accent sweet renewed:

"If this be our condition, thus to dwell
In narrow circuit straitened by a foe,
Subtle or violent, we not endued
Single with like defence, wherever met,
How are we happy, still in fear of harm?
But harm precedes not sin: only our foe,
Tempting, affronts us with his foul esteem
Of our integrity: his foul esteem
Sticks no dishonor on our front, but turns
Foul on himself; then wherefore shunned or feared
By us? who rather double honour gain
From his surmise proved false, find peace within,

Favor from Heaven, our witness from the event And what is faith, love, virtue, unassayed Alone, without exterior help sustained? Let us not, then, suspect our happy state Left so imperfect by the Maker wise, As not secure to single or combined. Frail is our happiness, is this be so, And Eden were no Eden thus exposed." To whom thus Adam fervently replied: "O woman, best are all things as the will Of God ordained them; his creating hand Nothing imperfect or deficient left Of all that he created, much less man, Or aught that might his happy state secure, Secure from outward force; within himself The danger lies, yet lies within his power: Against his will he can receive no harm. But God left free the will, for what obeys Reason, is free; and reason he made right, But bid her well beware, and still erect; Lest by some fair-appearing good surprised She dictate false, and misinform the will To do what God expressly hath forbid. Not then mistrust, but tender love, enjoins That I should mind thee oft; and mind thou me. Firm we subsist, yet possibly to swerve, Since reason not impossibly may meet Some specious object by the foe suborned, And fall into deception unaware, Not keeping strictest watch, as she was warned. Seek not temptation then, which to avoid Were better, and most likely, if from me Thou sever not: trial will come unsought. Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve First thy obedience; the other who can know, Not seeing thee attempted, who attest? But if thou think trial unsought may find Us both securer than thus warned thou seem'st, Go; for thy stay, not free, absents thee more; Go in thy native innocence; rely

On what thou hast of virtue; summon all:

For God towards thee hath done his part: do thine."
So spake the patriarch of mankind; but Eye

Persisted; yet submiss, though last, replied:

"With thy permission, then, and thus forewarned, Chiefly by what thy own last reasoning words Touched only, that our trial, when least sought, May find us both, perhaps, far less prepared, The willinger I go, nor much expect A foe so proud will first the weaker seek; So bent, the more shall shame him his repulse."

Thus saying, from her husband's hand her hand Soft she withdrew, and, like a wood-nymph light, Oread or Dryad, or of Delia's train. Betook her to the groves; but Delia's self In gait surpassed, and goddess-like deport, Though not as she with bow and quiver armed. But with such gardening tools as art yet rude. Guiltless of fire, had formed, or angels brought. To Pales, or Pomona, thus adorned, Likest she seemed: Pomona when she fled Vertumnus, or to Ceres in her prime, Yet virgin of Prosérpina from Jove. Her long with ardent look his eye pursued Delighted, but desiring more her stay. Oft he to her his charge of quick return Repeated; she to him as oft engaged To be returned by noon amid the bower. And all things in best order to invite Noontide repast, or afternoon's repose. O much deceived, much failing, hapless Eve. Of thy presumed return! event perverse! Thou never from that hour in Paradise Found'st either sweet repast, or sound repose; Such ambush, hid among sweet flowers and shades. Waited with hellish rancour imminent To intercept thy way, or send thee back Despoiled of innocence, of faith, of bliss. For now, and since first break of dawn, the fiend. Mere serpent in appearance, forth was come,

And on his quest, where likliest he might find The only two of mankind, but in them The whole included race, his purposed prev. In bower and field he sought, where any tuft Of grove or garden-plot more pleasant lay, Their tendance or plantation for delight; By fountain or by shady rivulet He sought them both, but wished his hap might find Eve separate; he wished, but not with hope Of what so seldom chanced; when to his wish, Beyond his hope, Eve separate he spies, Veiled in a cloud of fragrance, where she stood, Half spied, so thick the roses blushing round About her glowed, oft stooping to support Each flower of slender stalk, whose head, though gay Carnation, purple, azure, or specked with gold, Hung drooping unsustained; them she upstays Gently with myrtle band, mindless the while Herself, though fairest unsupported flower, From her best prop so far, and storm so nigh. Nearer he drew, and many a walk traversed Of stateliest covert, cedar, pine, or palm, Then voluble and bold, now hid, now seen Among thick-woven arborets and flowers Embordered on each bank, the hand of Eve: Spot more delicious than those gardens feigned Or of revived Adonis, or renowned Alcinous, host of old Laërtes' son; Or that, not mystic, where the sapient king Held dalliance with his fair Egyptian spouse. Much he the place admired, the person more, As one who long in populous city pent, Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air. Forth issuing on a summer's morn to breathe Among the pleasant villages and farms Adjoined, from each thing met conceives delight; The smell of grain, or tedded grass, or kine, Or dairy, each rural sight, each rural sound; If chance with nymph-like step fair virgin pass, What pleasing seemed, for her now pleases more.

She most, and in her look sums all delight: Such pleasure took the serpent to behold This flowery plat, the sweet recess of Eve. Thus early, thus alone; her heavenly form Angelic, but more soft and feminine; Her graceful innocence, her every air Of gesture, or least action, overawed His malice, and with rapine sweet bereaved His fierceness of the fierce intent it brought. That space the evil one abstracted stood From his own evil, and for the time remained Stupidly good, of enmity disarmed, Of guile, of hate, of envy, of revenge; But the hot Hell that always in him burns, Though in mid Heaven, soon ended his delight, And tortures him now more, the more he sees Of pleasure not for him ordained: then soon Fierce hate he recollects, and all his thoughts Of mischief, gratulating, thus excites:

"Thoughts, whither have ye led me! with what sweet Compulsion thus transported to forget What hither brought us! hate, not love; nor hope Of Paradise for Hell, hope here to taste Of pleasure; but all pleasure to destroy, Save what is in destroying; other joy To me is lost. Then let me not let pass Occasion which now smiles; behold alone The woman, opportune to all attempts; Her husband, for I view far round, not nigh, Whose higher intellectual more I shun, And strength, of courage haughty, and of limb Heroic built, though of terrestrial mould; Foe not informidable; exempt from wound, I not; so much hath Hell debased, and pain Enfeebled me, to what I was in Heaven. She fair, divinely fair, fit love for gods; Not terrible, though terror be in love And beauty, not approached by stronger hate, Hate stronger, under show of love well feigned, The way which to her ruin now I tend."

So spake the enemy of mankind enclosed In serpent, inmate bad! and toward Eve Addressed his way, not with indented wave, Prone on the ground, as since, but on his rear. Circular base of rising folds that towered Fold above fold, a surging maze, his head Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes; With burnished neck of verdant gold, erect Amidst his circling spires, that on the grass Floated redundant: pleasing was his shape, And lovely; never since of serpent kind Lovelier, not those that in Illyria changed Hermione and Cadmus, or the god In Epidaurus; nor to which transformed Ammonian Jove, or Capitoline, was seen; He with Olympias; this with her who bore Scipio the height of Rome. With tract oblique At first, as one who sought access, but feared To interrupt, sidelong he works his way, As when a ship by skilful steersman wrought Nigh river's mouth or foreland, where the wind Veers oft, as oft so steers, and shifts her sail: So varied he, and of his tortuous train Curled many a wanton wreath in sight of Eve, To lure her eye; she busied heard the sound Of rustling leaves, but minded not, as used To such disport before her through the field From every beast, more duteous at her call Than at Circean call the herd disguised. He, bolder now, uncalled before her stood, But as in gaze admiring: oft he bowed His turret crest; and sleek enamelled neck, Fawning, and licked the ground whereon she trod. His gentle dumb expression turned at length The eye of Eve to mark his play; he, glad Of her attention gained, with serpent tongue Organic, or impulse of vocal air, His fraudulent temptation thus began:

"Wonder not, sovran mistress, if perhaps Thou canst, who art sole wonder; much less arm

Thy looks, the heaven of mildness, with disdain, Displeased that I approach thee thus, and gaze Insatiate, I thus single, nor have feared Thy awful brow, more awful thus retired. Fairest resemblance of thy Maker fair, Thee all things living gaze on, all things thine By gift, and thy celestial beauty adore With ravishment beheld, there best beheld Where universally admired; but here In this enclosure wild, these beasts among, Beholders rude, and shallow to discern Half what in thee is fair, one man except, Who sees thee? (and what is one?) who shouldst be seen A goddess among gods, adored and served By angels numberless, thy daily train."

So glozed the tempter, and his proem tuned; Into the heart of Eve his words made way, Though at the voice much marvelling; at length,

Not unamazed, she thus in answer spake:

"What may this mean? language of man pronounced By tongue of brute, and human sense expressed! The first, at least, of these I thought denied To beasts, whom God on their creation-day Created mute to all articulate sound; The latter I demur, for in their looks Much reason, and in their actions oft appears. Thee, serpent, subtlest beast of all the field I knew, but not with human voice endued; Redouble then this miracle, and say, How cam'st thou speakable of mute, and how To me so friendly grown above the rest Of brutal kind, that daily are in sight: Say, for such wonder claims attention due."

To whom the guileful tempter thus replied: "Empress of this fair world, resplendent Eve,

Easy to me it is to tell thee all

What thou command'st, and right thou shouldst be obeyed. I was at first as other beasts that graze

The trodden herb, of abject thoughts and low, As was my food; nor aught but food discerned Or sex, and apprehended nothing high . Till on a day, roving the field, I chanced A goodly tree far distant to behold Loaden with fruit of fairest colours mixed, Ruddy and gold: I nearer drew to gaze; When from the boughs a savory odour blown, Grateful to appetite, more pleased my sense Than smell of sweetest fennel, or the teats Of ewe or goat dropping with milk at even, Unsucked of lamb or kid, that tend their play. To satisfy the sharp desire I had Of tasting those fair apples, I resolved Not to defer: hunger and thirst at once, Powerful persuaders, quickened at the scent Of that alluring fruit, urged me so keen. About the mossy trunk I wound me soon, For high from ground the branches would require Thy utmost reach or Adam's: round the tree All other beasts that saw, with like desire Longing and envying stood, but could not reach. Amid the tree now got, where plenty hung Tempting so nigh, to pluck and eat my fill I spared not; for such pleasure, till that hour, At feed or fountain never had I found. Sated at length, ere long I might perceive Strange alteration in me, to degree Of reason in my inward powers, and speech Wanted not long, though to this shape retained, Thenceforth to speculations high or deep I turned my thoughts, and with capacious mind Considered all things visible in Heaven, Or earth, or middle, all things fair and good; But all that fair and good in thy divine Semblance, and in thy beauty's heavenly ray, United I beheld; no fair to thine Equivalent or second, which compelled Me thus, though importune perhaps, to come And gaze, and worship thee, of right declared Sovran of creatures, universal dame." So talked the spirited sly snake; and Eve,

Yet more amazed, unwary thus replied:

"Serpent, thy overpraising leaves in doubt
The virtue of that fruit, in thee first proved;
But say, where grows the tree, from hence how far?
For many are the trees of God that grow
In Paradise, and various, yet unknown
To us, in such abundance lies our choice,
As leaves a greater store of fruit untouched,
Still hanging incorruptible, till men
Grow up to their provision, and more hands
Help to disburden nature of her birth."
To whom the wily adder, blithe and glad:

"Empress, the way is ready, and not long; Beyond a row of myrtles, on a flat, Fast by a fountain, one small thicket past Of blowing myrrh and balm: if thou accept My conduct, I can bring thee hither soon."

"Lead then," said Eve. He, leading, swiftly rolled In tangles, and made intricate seem straight, To mischief swift. Hope elevates, and joy Brightens his crest; as when a wandering fire, Compact of unctuous vapour, which the night Condenses, and the cold environs round, Kindled through agitation to a flame, Which oft, they say, some evil spirit attends, Hovering and blazing with delusive light, Misleads the amazed night-wanderer from his way To bogs and mires, and oft through pond or pool; There swallowed up and lost, from succour far. So glistered the dire snake, and into fraud Led Eve our credulous mother, to the tree Of prohibition, root of all our woe; Which when she saw, thus to her guide she spake:

"Serpent, we might have spared our coming hither, Fruitless to me, though fruit be here to excess, The credit of whose virtue rest with thee, Wondrous indeed, if cause of such effects. But of this tree we may not taste nor touch; God so commanded, and left that command Sole daughter of his voice; the rest, we live

Law to ourselves; our reason is our law."

To whom the tempter guilefully replied:
"Indeed! hath God then said that of the fruit
Of all these garden trees ye shall not eat,
Yet lords declared of all in earth or air?"

To whom thus Eve, yet sinless: "Of the fruit Of each tree in the garden we may eat, But of the fruit of this fair tree amidst The garden, God hath said, 'Ye shall not eat Thereof, nor shall ye touch it, lest ye die.'"

She scarce had said, though brief, when now more bold The tempter, but with show of zeal and love To man, and indignation at his wrong, New part puts on; and, as to passion moved, · Fluctuates disturbed, yet comely and in act Raised, as of some great matter to begin. As when of old some orator renowned In Athens or free Rome, where eloquence Flourished, since mute, to some great cause addressed, Stood in himself collected, while each part, Motion, each act, won audience ere the tongue, Sometimes in height began, as no delay Of preface brooking through his zeal of right; So standing, moving, or to height up-grown, The tempter, all impassioned, thus began: 150

"O sacred, wise, and wisdom-giving plant,
Mother of science! now I feel thy power
Within me clear, not only to discern
Things in their causes, but to trace the ways
Of highest agents, deemed however wise.
Queen of this universe, do not believe
Those rigid threats of death. Ye shall not die!
How should ye? By the fruit? It gives you life
To knowledge. By the threatener? Look on me,
Me who have touched and tasted, yet both live,
And life more perfect have attained than fate
Meant me, by venturing higher than my lot.
Shall that be shut to man, which to the beast
Is open? or will God incense his ire
For such a petty trespass? and not praise

723

Rather your dauntless virtue, whom the pain Of death denounced, whatever thing death be, Deterred not from achieving what might lead To happier life, knowledge of good and evil: Of good, how just? of evil, if what is evil Be real, why not known, since easier shunned? God therefore cannot hurt ye, and be just; Not just, not God; not feared then, nor obeyed: Your fear itself of death removes the fear. Why then was this forbid? Why, but to awe? Why, but to keep ye low and ignorant, His worshippers? He knows that in the day Ye eat thereof, your eyes that seem so clear Yet are but dim, shall perfectly be then Opened and cleared, and ye shall be as gods, Knowing both good and evil as they know. That we shall be as gods, since I as man, Internal man, is but proportion meet: I of brute human, ye of human gods. So ye shall die, perhaps, by putting off Human, to put on gods; death to be wished, Though threatened, which no worse than this can bring. And what are gods that man may not become As they, participating godlike food? The gods are first, and that advantage use On our belief that all from them proceeds; I question it; for this fair earth I see, Warmed by the sun, producing every kind, Them nothing: if they all things, who enclosed Knowledge of good and evil in this tree, That whose eats thereof forthwith attains Wisdom without their leave? and wherein lies The offence, that man should thus attain to know? What can your knowledge hurt him, or this tree Impart against his will, if all be his? Or is it envy? and can envy dwell In heavenly breasts? These, these and many more Causes import your need of this fair fruit, Goddess humane: reach then, and freely taste." He ended; and his words, replete with guile,

Into her heart too easy entrance won:
Fixed on the fruit she gazed, which to behold
Might tempt alone, and in her ears the sound
Yet rung of his persuasive words impregned
With reason, to her seeming, and with truth;
Meanwhile the hour of noon drew on, and waked
An eager appetite, raised by the smell
So savoury of that fruit, which with desire,
Inclinable now grown to touch or taste,
Solicited her longing eye; yet first
Pausing a while, thus to herself she mused:

"Great are thy virtues, doubtless, best of fruits, Though kept from man, and worthy to be admired, Whose taste, too long forborne, at first assay Gave elecution to the mute, and taught The tongue not made for speech to speak thy praise: Thy praise He also who forbids thy use, Conceals not from us, naming thee the tree Of knowledge, knowledge both of good and evil: Forbids us then to taste, but his forbidding Commends thee more, while it infers the good By thee communicated, and our want: For good unknown sure is not had; or, had And yet unknown, is as not had at all. In plain, then, what forbids He but to know, Forbids us good, forbids us to be wise? Such prohibitions bind not. But if death Bind us with after-bands, what profits then Our inward freedom? In the day we eat Of this fair fruit, our doom is, we shall die. How dies the serpent? he hath eaten and lives, And knows, and speaks, and reasons, and discerns, Irrational till then. For us alone Was death invented? or to us denied This intellectual food, for beasts reserved? For beasts, it seems: yet that one beast which first Hath tasted, envies not, but brings with joy The good befallen him, author unsuspect, Friendly to man, far from deceit or guile. What feer I, then? rather, what know to fear Under this ignorance of good and evil, Of God or death, of law or penalty? Here grows the cure of all, this fruit divine, Fair to the eye, inviting to the taste, Of virtue to make wise: what hinders then To reach, and feed at once both body and mind?"

So saying, her rash hand in evil hour Forth reaching to the fruit, she plucked, she ate: Earth felt the wound, and nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe. That all was lost. Back to the thicket slunk The guilty serpent; and well might; for Eve, Intent now wholly on her taste, nought else Regarded; such delight till then, as seemed, In fruit she never tasted, whether true Or fancied so, through expectation high Of knowledge; nor was godhead from her thought. Greedily she engorged without restraint, And knew not eating death; satiate at length, And heightened as with wine, jocund and boon, Thus to herself she pleasingly began:

"O sovran, virtuous, precious of all trees In Paradise! of operation blest To sapience, hitherto obscured, infamed, And thy fair fruit let hang, as to no end Created; but henceforth my early care, Not without song each morning, and due praise, Shall tend thee, and the fertile burden ease Of thy full branches offered free to all; God notsingui Till, dieted by thee, I grow mature In knowledge, as the gods who all things know; Though others envy what they cannot give; For had the gift been theirs, it had not here Thus grown. Experience, next to thee I owe, Best guide; not following thee, I had remained In ignorance; thou open'st wisdom's way, And giv'st access, though secret she retire. And I perhaps am secret; Heaven is high, High, and remote to see from thence distinct Each thing on earth; and other care perhaps

May have diverted from continual watch Our great Forbidder, safe with all his spies About him. But to Adam in what sort Shall I appear? shall I to him make known As yet my change, and give him to partake Full happiness with me, or rather not, But keep the odds of knowledge in my power Without co-partner? so to add what wants In female sex, the more to draw his love, And render me more equal, and, perhaps, A thing not undesirable, sometime Superior; for inferior who is free? This may be well; but what if God have seen, And death ensue? then I shall be no more, And Adam, wedded to another Eve, Shall live with her enjoying, I extinct: A death to think! Confirmed then I resolve. Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe: So dear I love him, that with him all deaths I could endure, without him live no life."

So saying, from the tree her step she turned, But first low reverence done, as to the power That dwelt within, whose presence had infused Into the plant sciential sap, derived From nectar, drink of gods. Adam the while, Waiting desirous her return, had wove Of choicest flowers a garland to adorn Her tresses, and her rural labours crown, As reapers oft are wont their harvest queen. Great joy he promised to his thoughts, and new Solace in her return, so long delayed; Yet oft his heart, divine of something ill, Misgave him; he the faltering measure felt; And forth to meet her went, the way she took That morn when first they parted; by the tree Of knowledge he must pass, there he her met, Scarce from the tree returning; in her hand A bough of fairest fruit, that downv smiled, New gathered, and ambrosial smell diffused. To him she hasted; in her face excuse

Came prologue, and apology too prompt,
Which with bland words at will she thus addressed:
"Hast thou not wondered Adam at wards."

"Hast thou not wondered, Adam, at my stay? Thee I have missed, and thought it long deprived Thy presence; agony of love till now Not felt, nor shall be twice; for never more Mean I to try, what rash untried I sought, The pain of absence from thy sight. But strange Hath been the cause, and wonderful to hear: This tree is not, as we are told, a tree Of danger tasted, nor to evil unknown Opening the way, but of divine effect To open eyes, and make them gods who taste; And hath been tasted such: the serpent wise, Or not restrained as we, or not obeying, Hath eaten of the fruit, and is become, Not dead, as we are threatened, but thenceforth Endued with human voice and human sense. Reasoning to admiration; and with me Persuasively hath so prevailed, that I Have also tasted, and have also found The effects to correspond: opener mine eyes, Dim erst, dilated spirits, ampler heart, And growing up to godhead, which for thee Chiefly I sought, without thee can despise. For bliss, as thou hast part, to me is bliss; Tedious, unshared with thee, and odious soon. Thou therefore also taste, that equal lot May join us, equal joy as equal love; Lest, thou not tasting, different degree Disjoin us, and I then, too late, renounce Deity for thee, when fate will not permit."

Thus Eve, with countenance blithe, her story told; But in her cheek distemper flushing glowed. On the other side, Adam, soon as he heard The fatal trespass done by Eve, amazed, Astonied stood and blank, while horror chill Ran through his veins, and all his joints relaxed; From his slack hand the garland wreathed for Eve

Down dropped, and all the faded roses shed.

Speechless he stood and pale, till thus at length First to himself he inward silence broke:

"O fairest of creation, last and best Of all God's works, creature in whom excelled Whatever can to sight or thought be formed, Holy, divine, good, amiable, or sweet, How art thou lost! how on a sudden lost, Defaced, deflowered, and now to death devote! Rather, how hast thou yielded to transgress The strict forbiddance, how to violate The sacred fruit forbidden! Some cursed fraud Of enemy hath beguiled thee, yet unknown, And me with thee hath ruined, for with thee Certain my resolution is to die; How can I live without thee? how forego Thy sweet converse and love so dearly joined, To live again in these wild woods forlorn? Should God create another Eve, and I Another rib afford, yet loss of thee Would never from my heart; no, no! I feel The link of nature draw me; flesh of flesh, Bone of my bone thou art, and from thy state Mine never shall be parted, bliss or woe."

So having said, as one from said dismay Recomforted, and after thoughts disturbed Submitting to what seemed remediless,

Thus in calm mood his words to Eve he turned:

"Bold deed thou hast presumed, adventurous Eve,
And peril great provoked, who thus hast dared,
Had it been only coveting to eye
That sacred fruit, sacred to abstinence;
Much more to taste it under ban to touch.
But past who can recall, or done undo?
Not God omnipotent, nor fate; yet so
Perhaps thou shalt not die, perhaps the fact
Is not so heinous now, foretasted fruit,
Profaned first by the serpent, by him first
Made common and unhallowed ere our taste;
Nor yet on him found deadly; he yet lives;
Lives, as thou saidst, and gains to live, as man,

Higher degree of life: inducement strong To us, as likely tasting to attain Proportional ascent, which cannot be But to be gods, or angels, demi-gods. Nor can I think that God, Creator wise. Though threatening, will in earnest so destroy Us his prime creatures, dignified so high, Set over all his works, which in our fall, For us created, needs with us must fail, Dependent made; so God shall uncreate, Be frustrate, do, undo, and labour lose: Not well conceived of God, who, though his power Creation could repeat, yet would be loth Us to abolish, lest the adversary Triumph and say, 'Fickle their state whom God Most favours; who can please him long? Me first He ruined, now mankind; whom will he next?' Matter of scorn, not to be given the foe. However, I with thee have fixed my lot, Certain to undergo like doom; if death Consort with thee, death is to me as life; So forcible within my heart I feel The bond of nature draw me to my own, My own in thee, for what thou art is mine; Our state cannot be severed; we are one, One flesh; to lose thee were to lose myself." So Adam, and thus Eve to him replied: "O glorious trial of exceeding love, Illustrious evidence, example high! Engaging me to emulate; but, short Of thy perfection, how shall I attain, Adam, from whose dear side I boast me sprung? And gladly of our union hear thee speak, One heart, one soul in both; whereof good proof This day affords, declaring thee resolved, Rather than death, or aught than death more dread. Shall separate us, linked in love so dear, To undergo with me one guilt, one crime, If any be, of tasting this fair fruit, Whose virtue (for of good still good proceeds, Direct, or by occasion) hath presented This happy trial of thy love, which else So eminently never had been known. Were it I thought death menaced would ensue This my attempt, I would sustain alone The worst, and not persuade thee; rather die Deserted, than oblige thee with a fact Pernicious to thy peace, chiefly assured, Remarkably so late of thy so true, So faithful love unequalled: but I feel Far otherwise the event; not death, but life Augmented, opened eyes, new hopes, new joys, Taste so divine, that what of sweet before Hath touched my sense, flat seems to this and harsh. On my experience, Adam, freely taste, And fear of death deliver to the winds."

So saying, she embraced him, and for joy Tenderly wept; much won, that he his love Had so ennobled, as of choice to incur Divine displeasure for her sake, or death. In recompense (for such compliance bad Such recompense best merits) from the bough She gave him of that fair enticing fruit With liberal hand: he scrupled not to eat, Against his better knowledge; not deceived, But fondly overcome with female charm. Earth trembled from her entrails, as again In pangs, and nature gave a second groan; Sky loured; and, muttering thunder, some sad drops Wept at completing of the mortal sin Original; while Adam took no thought, Eating his fill, nor Eve to iterate Her former trespass feared, the more to soothe Him with her loved society; that now, As with new wine intoxicated both, They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel Divinity within them breeding wings Wherewith to scorn the earth: but that false fruit Far other operation first displayed, Carnal desire inflaming; he on Eve

Began to cast lascivious eyes, she him As wantonly repaid; in lust they burn: Till Adam thus 'gan Eve to dalliance move:

"Eve, now I see thou art exact of taste, And elegant, of sapience no small part, Since to each meaning savour we apply, And palate call judicious: I the praise Yield thee, so well this day thou hast purveyed. Much pleasure we have lost, while we abstained From this delightful fruit, nor known till now True relish, tasting; if such pleasure be In things to us forbidden, it might be wished For this one tree had been forbidden ten. But come, so well refreshed, now let us play, As meet is, after such delicious fare; For never did thy beauty, since the day I saw thee first and wedded thee, adorned With all perfections, so inflame my sense With ardour to enjoy thee, fairer now Than ever, bounty of this virtuous tree."

So said he, and forbore not glance or toy
Of amorous intent, well understood
Of Eve, whose eye darted contagious fire.
Her hand he seized, and to a shady bank,
Thick over-head with verdant roof embowered,
He led her nothing loth; flowers were the couch,
Pansies, and violets, and asphodel,
And hyacinth, earth's freshest, softest lap.
There they their fill of love and love's disport
Took largely, of their mutual guilt the seal,
The solace of their sin; till dewy sleep

Oppressed them, wearied with their amorous rlay.
Soon as the force of that fallacious fruit,
That with exhilarating vapour bland
About their spirits had played, and inmost powers
Made err, was now exhaled; and grosser sleep,
Bred of unkindly fumes, with conscious dreams
Encumbered, now had left them; up they rose
As from unrest, and each the other viewing,

Soon found their eyes how opened, and their minds

How darkened; innocence, that as a veil
Had shadowed them from knowing ill, was gone,
Just confidence, and native righteousness,
And honour from about them, naked left
To guilty shame; he covered, but his robe
Uncovered more. So rose the Danite strong,
Herculean Samson, from the harlot-lap
Of Philistéan Dalilah, and waked
Shorn of his strength; they destitute and bare
Of all their virtue: silent, and in face
Confounded, long they sat, as strucken mute;
Till Adam, though not less than Eve abashed,
At length gave utterance to these words constrained:

"O Eve! in evil hour thou didst give ear To that false worm, of whomsoever taught To counterfeit man's voice, true in our fall, False in our promised rising; since our eyes Opened we find indeed, and find we know Both good and evil; good lost, and evil got: Bad fruit of knowledge, if this be to know, Which leaves us naked thus, of honour void, Of innocence, of faith, of purity, Our wonted ornaments now soiled and stained. And in our faces evident the signs Of foul concupiscence; whence evil store; Even shame, the last of evils; of the first Be sure then. He shall I behold the face Henceforth of God or angel, erst with joy And rapture so oft beheld? those heavenly shapes Will dazzle now this earthly with their blaze Insufferably bright. Oh! might I here In solitude live savage, in some glade Obscured, where highest woods, impenetrable To star or sunlight, spread their umbrage broad And brown as evening: cover me, ye pines! Ye cedars, with innumerable boughs Hide me, where I may never see them more! But let us now, as in bad plight, devise What best may for the present serve to hide The parts of each from other, that seem most

To shame obnoxious, and unseemliest seen; Some tree, whose broad smooth leaves together sewed, And girded on our loins, may cover round Those middle parts, that this new comer, shame, There sit not, and reproach us as unclean."

So counselled he, and both together went Into the thickest wood; there soon they chose The fig-tree, not that kind for fruit renowned, But such as at this day to Indians known In Malabar or Deccan spreads her arms Branching so broad and long, that in the ground The bended twigs take root, and daughters grow About the mother tree, a pillared shade High overarched, and echoing walks between; There oft the Indian herdsman, shunning heat, Shelters in cool, and tends his pasturing herds At loopholes cut through thickest shade: those leaves They gathered, broad as Amazonian targe, And, with what skill they had, together sewed, To gird their waist: vain covering, if to hide Their guilt and dreaded shame! Oh, how unlike To that first naked glory! Such of late Columbus found the American, so girt With feathered cincture, naked else and wild Among the trees on isles and woody shores. Thus fenced, and as they thought, their shame in part Covered, but at not rest or ease of mind, They sat them down to weep; nor only tears Rained at their eyes, but high winds worse within Began to rise, high passions, anger, hate, Mistrust, suspicion, discord; and shook sore Their inward state of mind, calm region once And full of peace, now tossed and turbulent; For understanding ruled not, and the will Heard not her lore, both in subjection now To sensual appetite, who from beneath Usurping over sovran reason claimed Superior sway. From thus distempered breast, Adam, estranged in look and altered style, Speech intermitted thus to Eve renewed:

"Would thou hadst hearkened to my words, and stayed With me, as I besought thee, when that strange Desire of wandering, this unhappy morn, I know not whence possessed thee; we had then Remained still happy, not as now, despoiled Of all our good, shamed, naked, miserable. Let none henceforth seek needless cause to approve The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek Such proof, conclude, they then begin to fail."

To whom, soon moved with touch of blame, thus Eve "What words have passed thy lips? Adam severe, Imput'st thou that to my default, or will Of wandering, as thou call'st it, which, who knows But might as ill have happened thou being by, Or to thyself, perhaps? Hadst thou been there, Or here the attempt, thou couldst not have discerned Fraud in the serpent, speaking as he spake; No ground of enmity between us known, Why he should mean me ill, or seek to harm? Was I to have never parted from thy side? As good have grown there still a lifeless rib. Being as I am, why didst not thou, the head. Command me absolutely not to go, Going into such danger as thou saidst? Too facile then, thou didst not much gainsay, Nay, didst permit, approve, and fair dismiss. Hadst thou been firm and fixed in thy dissent, Neither had I transgressed, nor thou with me."

To whom, then first incensed, Adam replied:
"Is this the love, is this the recompense
Of mine to thee, ungrateful Eve! expressed
Immutable when thou wert lost, not I,
Who might have lived and joyed immortal bliss,
Yet willingly chose rather death with thee?
And am I now upbraided as the cause
Of thy transgressing? Not enough severe,
It seems, in thy restraint: what could I more?
I warned thee, I admonished thee, foretold
The danger, and the lurking enemy
That lay in wait; beyond this had been force,

And force upon free will hath here no place. But confidence then bore thee on, secure Either to meet no danger, or to find Matter of glorious trial; and perhaps I also erred in overmuch admiring What seemed in thee so perfect, that I thought No evil durst attempt thee; but I rue That error now, which is become my crime, And thou the accuser. Thus it shall befall Him who, to worth in woman overtrusting, Lets her will rule; restraint she will not brook; And, left to herself, if evil thence ensue, She first his weak indulgence will accuse."

Thus they in mutual accusation spent
The fruitless hours, but neither self condemning.
And of their vain contest appeared no end.

BOOK X.

THE ARGUMENT.

Man's transgression known, the guardian angels forsake Paradise, and return up to Heaven to approve their vigilance, and are approved; God declaring that the entrance of Satan could not by them be prevented. He sends his Son to judge the transgressors, who descends, and gives sentence accordingly; then in pity clothes them both, and reascends. Sin and Death, sitting till then at the gates of Hell, by wondrous sympathy feeling the success of Satan in this new world, and the sin by man there committed, resolve to sit no longer confined in Hell, but to follow Satan, their sire, up to the place of man. To make the way easier from Hell to this world, to and fro, they pave a broad highway or bridge over Chaos, according to the track that Satan first made; then preparing for earth, they meet him, proud of his success, returning to Hell; their mutual gratulation. Satan arrives at Pandemonium; in full assembly relates his success against man; instead of applause is treated with a general hiss by all his audience, transformed with himself also suddenly into serpents, according to his doom given in Paradise; then deluded with a show of the forbidden tree springing up before them, they, greedily reaching to take off the fruits, chew dust and bitter ashes. The proceedings of Sin and Death; God foretells the final victory of his Son over them, and the renewing of all things; but for the present commands his angels to make several alterations in the heavens and elements. Adam more and more perceiving his fallen condition, heavily bewails, rejects the condolement of Eve; she persists, and at length appeares him; then, to evade the curse likely to fall on their offspring, proposes to Adam violent ways, which he approves not, but, conceiving better hope, buts her in mind of the late promise made them, that her seed should be revenged on the serpent, and exhorts her with him to seek peace of the offended Deity, by repentance and supplication.

MEANWHILE the heinous and despiteful act
Of Satan done in Paradise, and how
He, in the serpent, had perverted Eve,
Her husband she, to taste the fatal fruit,
Was known in Heaven; for what can 'scape the eye
Of God all-seeing, or deceive his heart
Omniscient? who, in all things wise and just,
Hindered not Satan to attempt the mind
Of man, with strength entire, and free-will armed,

Complete to have discovered and repulsed Whatever wiles of foe or seeming friend. For still they knew, and ought to have still remembered The high injunction not to taste that fruit, Whoever tempted; which they not obeying, Incurred (what could they less?) the penalty, And, manifold in sin, deserved to fall. Up into Heaven from Paradise in haste The angelic guards ascended, mute and sad For man, for of his state by this they knew, Much wondering how the subtle fiend had stolen Entrance unseen. Soon as the unwelcome news From earth arrived at Heaven-gate, displeased All were who heard; dim sadness did not spare That time celestial visages, yet, mixed With pity, violated not their bliss. About the new-arrived, in multitudes The ethereal people ran, to hear and know How all befell: they towards the throne supreme Accountable made haste to make appear With righteous plea their utmost vigilance, And easily approved; when the most High, Eternal Father, from his secret cloud, Amidst in thunder uttered thus his voice: "Assembled angels, and ye powers returned From unsuccessful charge, be not dismayed Nor troubled at these tidings from the earth, Which your sincerest care could not prevent, When first this tempter crossed the gulf from Hell

Which your sincerest care could not prevent,
Foretold so lately what would come to pass,
When first this tempter crossed the gulf from Hel
I told ye then he should prevail and speed
On his bad errand, man should be seduced
And flattered out of all, believing lies
Against his Maker; no decree of mine
Concurring to necessitate his fall,
Or touch with lightest moment of impulse
His free will, to her own inclining left
In even scale. But fallen he is, and now
What rests, but that the mortal sentence pass
On his trangression, death denounced that day?

Which he presumes already vain and void,
Because not yet inflicted, as he feared,
By some immediate stroke; but soon shall find
Forbearance no acquittance ere day end.
Justice shall not return as bounty scorned.
But whom send I to judge them? whom but thee,
Viceregent Son? To thee I have transferred
All judgment whether in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell.
Easy it may be seen that I intend
Mercy colleague with justice, sending thee
Man's friend, his Mediator, his designed
Both ransom and Redcemer voluntary,
And destined man himself to judge man fallen."
So spake the Father, and unfolding bright

So spake the Father, and unfolding bright Toward the right hand his glory, on the Son Blazed forth unclouded Deity; he full Resplendent all his Father manifest Expressed, and thus divinely answered mild:

"Father eternal, thine is to decree, Mine both in Heaven and earth to do thy will Supreme, that thou in me thy Son beloved Mayst ever rest well pleased. I go to judge On earth these thy trangressors; but thou know'et, Whoever judged, the worst on me must light, When time shall be, for so I undertook Before thee; and not repenting, this obtain Of right, that I may mitigate their doom On me derived; yet I shall temper so Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most Them fully satisfied, and thee appearse. Attendance none shall need, nor train, where none Are to behold the judgment, but the judged, Those two; the third best absent is condemned, Convict by flight, and rebel to all law: Conviction to the serpent none belongs."

Thus saying, from his radiant seat he rose Of high collateral glory: him thrones and powers, Princedoms, and dominations ministrant, Accompanied to Heaven-gate, from whence Eden and all the coast in prospect lay.

Down he descended straight; the speed of gods
Time counts not, though with swiftest minutes winged.
Now was the sun in western cadence low
From noon, and gentle airs, due at their hour,
To fan the earth now waked, and usher in
The evening cool, when he, from wrath more cool,
Came the mild Judge and Intercessor both,
To sentence man: the voice of God they heard
Now walking in the garden, by soft winds
Brought to their ears, while day declined; they heard,
And from his presence hid themselves among
The thickest trees, both man and wife; till God,
Approaching, thus to Adam called aloud:

Where art thou, Adam, wont with joy to meet My coming seen far off? I miss thee here, Not pleased, thus entertained with solitude, Where obvious duty erewhile appeared unsought: Or come I less conspicuous, or what change

Absents thee, or what chance detains? Come forth!"
He came, and with him Eve, more loth, though first
To offend; discountenanced both, and discomposed;
Love was not in their looks, either to God
Or to each other, but apparent guilt,
And shame, and perturbation, and despair.

Anger and obstinacy, and hate and guile.
Whence Adam, faltering long, thus answered brief:

"I heard thee in the garden, and of thy voice Afraid, being naked, hid myself." To whom The gracious Judge without revile replied:

"My voice thou oft hast heard, and hast vot feared, But still rejoiced; how is it now become So dreadful to thee? That thou art naked, who Hath told thee? Hast thou eaten of the tree Whereof I gave thee charge thou shouldst not ext?"

To whom thus Adam, sore beset, replied:
"O Heaven! in evil strait this day I stand
Before my Judge, either to undergo
Myself the total crime, or to accuse
My other self, the partner of my life;
Whose failing, while her faith to me remains,

I should conceal, and not expose to blame
By my complaint; but strict necessity
Subdues me, and calamitous constraint,
Lest on my head both sin and punishment,
However insupportable, be all
Devolved; though should I hold my peace, yet thou
Wouldst easily detect what I conceal.
This woman, whom thou mad'st to be my help,
And giv'st me as thy perfect gift so good,
So fit, so acceptable, so divine,
That from her hand I could suspect no ill,
And what she did, whatever in itself,
Her doing seemed to justify the deed:
She gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

To whom the sovran Presence thus replied "Was she thy God, that her thou didst obey Before his voice? or was she made thy guide, Superior, or but equal, that to her Thou didst resign thy manhood, and the place Wherein God set thee above her made of thee, And for thee, whose perfection far excelled Hers in all real dignity? Adorned She was indeed, and lovely to attract Thy love, not thy subjection; and her gifts Were such as under government well seemed; Unseemly to bear rule, which was thy part And person, hadst thou known thyself aright."

So having said, he thus to Eve in few:

"Say, woman, what is this which thou hast done?"
To whom sad Eve, with shame nigh overwhelmed,
Confessing soon, yet not before her Judge
Bold or loquacious, thus abashed replied:
"The scrpent me beguiled, and I did eat."

Which when the Lord God heard, without delay To judgment he proceeded on the accused Scrpent, though brute, unable to transfer The guilt on him who made him instrument Of mischief, and polluted from the end Of his creation, justly then accursed, As vitiated in nature: more to know

Concerned not man (since he no further knew), Nor altered his offence; yet God at last To Satan, first in sin, his doom applied, Though in mysterious terms, judged as then best; And on the serpent thus his curse let fall:

"Because thou hast done this, thou art accursed Above all cattle, each beast of the field; Upon thy belly grovelling thou shalt go, And dust shalt eat all the days of thy life. Between thee and the woman I will put Enmity and between thing and her seed:

Enmity, and between thine and her seed; Her seed shall bruise thy head, thou bruise his heel."

So spake this oracle, then verified When Jesus, son of Mary, second Eve, Saw Satan fall like lightning down from Heaven, Prince of the air; then rising from his grave, Spoiled principalities and powers, triumphed In open show, and with ascension bright Captivity led captive through the air, The realm itself of Satan long usurped, Whom he shall tread at last under our feet; Even he, who now foretold his fatal bruise; And to the woman thus his sentence turned:

"Thy sorrow I will greatly multiply By thy conception; children thou shalt bring In sorrow forth; and to thy husband's will Thine shall submit: he over thee shall rule."

On Adam last thus judgment he pronounced:
"Because thou hast hearkened to the voice of thy wife,
And eaten of the tree concerning which
I charged thee, saying, 'Thou shalt not eat thereof,'
Cursed is the ground for thy sake: thou in sorrow
Shalt eat thereof all the days of thy life;
Thorns also, and thistles, it shall bring thee forth
Unbid; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;
In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,
Till thou return unto the ground; for thou
Out of the ground wast taken, know thy birth,
For dust thou art, and shalt to dust return."

So judged he man, both Judge and Saviour sent;

And the instant stroke of death, denounced that day, Removed far off; then pitying how they stood Before him naked to the air, that now Must suffer change, disdained not to begin Thenceforth the form of servant to assume, As when he washed his servants' feet; so now. As father of his family, he clad Their nakedness with skins of beasts, or slain, Or as the snake with youthful coat repaid; And thought not much to clothe his enemies: Nor he their outward only with the skins Of beasts; but inward nakedness, much more Opprobrious, with his robe of righteousness Arraying, covered from his Father's sight. To him with swift ascent he up returned, Into his blissful bosom reassumed In glory as of old; to him appeared. All, though all-knowing, what had passed with man Recounted, mixing intercession sweet.

Meanwhile, ere thus was sinned and judged on earth, Within the gates of Hell sat Sin and Death, In counterview within the gates, that now Stood open wide, belching outrageous flame Far into Chaos, since the Fiend passed through, Sin opening; who thus now to Death began:

"O son, why sit we here each other viewing Idly, while Satan our great author thrives In other worlds, and happier seat provides For us his offspring dear? It cannot be But that success attends him; if mishap, Ere this he had returned, with fury driven By his avengers, since no place like this Can fit his punishment, or their revenge. Methinks I feel new strength within me rise, Wings growing, and dominion given me large Beyond this deep; whatever draws me on, Or sympathy, or some connatural force, Powerful at greatest distance to unite With secret amity things of like kind By secretest conveyance. Thou, my shade

Inseparable, must with me along;
For Death from Sin no power can separate.
But lest the difficulty of passing back
Stay his return perhaps over this gulf
Impassable, impervious, let us try
Adventurous work, yet to thy power and mine
Not unagreeable, to found a path
Over this main from Hell to that new world
Where Satan now prevails; a monument
Of merit high to all the infernal host,
Easing their passage hence, for intercourse,
Or transmigration, as their lot shall lead.
Nor can I miss the way, so strongly drawn
By this new-felt attraction and instinct."

Whom thus the meagre shadow answered soon:
"Go whither fate and inclination strong
Lead thee; I shall not lag behind, nor err
The way, thou leading; such a scent I draw
Of carnage, prey innumerable, and taste
The savour of death from all things there that live:
Nor shall I to the work thou enterprisest

Be wanting, but afford thee equal aid."
So saying, with delight he snuffed the smell
Of mortal change on earth. As when a flock
Of ravenous fowl, though many a league remote,

Against the day of battle, to a field Where armies lie encamped, come flying, lured With scent of living carcasses designed

For death, the following day, in bloody fight: So scented the grim feature, and upturned

His nostril wide into the murky air, Sagacious of his quarry from so far. Then both from out Hell-gates into the waste

Wide anarchy of Chaos, damp and dark, Flew diverse; and with power (their power was great)

Hovering upon the waters, what they met Solid or flimsy, as in raging sea

Tossed up and down together, crowded drove From each side shoaling towards the mouth of Hell:

As when two polar winds, blowing adverse

Upon the Cronian sea, together drive Mountains of ice, that stop the imagined way Beyond Petsora eastward, to the rich Cathaian coast. The aggregated soil Death, with his mace petrific, cold and dry, As with a trident smote, and fixed as firm As Delos floating once; the rest his look Bound with Gorgonian rigour not to move; And with asphaltic slime, broad as the gate, Deep to the roots of Hell the gathered beach They fastened, and the mole immense wrought on Over the foaming deep high arched, a bridge Of length prodigious, joining to the wall Immoveable of this now senseless world Forfeit to Death; from hence a passage broad, Smooth, easy, inoffensive, down to Hell. So, if great things to small may be compared, Xerxes, the liberty of Greece to yoke, From Susa, his Memnonian palace high, Came to the sea, and, over Hellespont Bridging his way, Europe with Asia joined, And scourged with many a stroke the indignant waves. Now had they brought the work by wondrous art Pontifical, a ridge of pendent rock, Over the vexed abvss, following the track Of Satan to the self-same place where he First lighted from his wing, and landed safe From out of Chaos, to the outside bare Of this round world: with pins of adamant And chains they made all fast, too fast they made, And durable; and now in little space The confines met of empyrréan Heaven, And of this world; and, on the left hand, Hell With long reach interposed; three several ways In sight, to each of these three places led. And now their way to earth they had descried, To Paradise first tending, when behold Satan, in likeness of an angel bright, Betwixt the Centaur and the Scorpion steering His zenith, while the sun in Aries rose:

Disguised he came, but those his children dea Their parent soon discerned, though in disguise. He, after Eve seduced, unminded slunk Into the wood fast by; and, changing shape To observe the sequel, saw his guileful act By Eve, though all unweeting, seconded Upon her husband, saw their shame that sought Vain covertures; but when he saw descend The Son of God to judge them, terrified He fled, not hoping to escape, but shun The present, fearing guilty what his wrath Might suddenly inflict; that past, returned By night, and listening where the hapless pair Sat in their sad discourse, and various plaint, Thence gathered his own doom, which understood Not instant, but of future time, with joy And tidings fraught, to Hell he now returned; And at the brink of Chaos, near the foot Of this new wondrous pontifice, unhoped Met who to meet him came, his offspring dear. Great joy was at their meeting, and at sight Of that stupendous bridge his joy increased. Long he admiring stood, till Sin, his fair Enchanting daughter, thus the silence broke: "O parent, these are thy magnific deeds, Thy trophies, which thou view'st as not thine own: Thou art their author and prime architect:

For I no sooner in my heart divined,
My heart, which by a secret harmony
Still moves with thine, joined in connection sweet,
That thou on earth hadst prospered, which thy looks
Now also evidence, but straight I felt,
Though distant from thee worlds between, yet felt
That I must after thee with this thy son,
Such fatal consequence unites us three:
Hell could not longer hold us in her bounds,
Nor this unvoyageable gulf obscure
Detain from following thy illustrious track.
Thou hast achieved bur liberty, confined
Within Hell-gates till now, thou us empowered

To fortify thus far, and overlay
With this portentous bridge the dark abyss.
Thine now is all this world; thy virtue hath won
What thy hands builded not, thy wisdom gained
With odds what war hath lost, and fully avenged
Our foil in Heaven; here thou shalt monarch reign,
There didst not; there let him still victor sway,
As battle hath adjudged, from this new world
Retiring, by his own doom alienated;
And henceforth monarchy with thee divide,
Of all things parted by the empyreal bounds,
His quadrature, from thy orbicular world,
Or try thee now more dangerous to his throne."

Whom thus the prince of darkness answered glad: " Fair daughter, and thou son and grandchild both, High proof ye now have given to be the race Of Satan (for I glory in the name, Antagonist of Heaven's almighty King); Amply have merited of me, of all The infernal empire, that so near Heaven's door Triumphal with triumphal act have met, Mine, with this glorious work, and made one realm Hell and this world, one realm, one continent Of easy thoroughfare. Therefore, while I Descend through darkness, on your road with ease, To my associate powers, them to acquaint With these successes, and with them rejoice; You two this way, among these numerous orbs All yours, right down to Paradise descend; There dwell and reign in bliss, thence on the earth Dominion exercise, and in the air, Chiefly on man, sole lord of all declared; Him first make sure your thrall, and lastly kill. My substitutes I send ye, and create Plenipotent on earth, of matchless might Issuing from me: on your joint vigour now My hold of this new kingdom all depends, Through Sin to Death exposed by my exploit. If your joint power prevail, the affairs of Hell No detriment need fear; go, and be strong."

So saying, he dismissed them; they with speed Their course through thickest constellations held, Spreading their bane; the blasted stars looked wan. And planets, plant-struck, real eclipse Then suffered. The other way Satan went down The causey to Hell gate; on either side Disparted Chaos, over built, exclaimed, And with rebounding surge the bars assailed, That scorned his indignation; through the gate, Wide open and unguarded, Satan passed, And all about found desolate; for those Appointed to sit there, had left their charge, Flown to the upper world; the rest were all Far to the inland retired, about the walls Of Pandemonium, city and proud seat Of Lucifer, so by allusion called, Of that bright star to Satan paragoned. There kept their watch the legions, while the grand In council sat, solicitous what chance Might intercept their emperor sent; so he, Departing, gave command, and they observed. As when the Tartar from his Russian foe. By Astracan, over the snowy plains Retires; or Bactrian Sophi, from the horns Of Turkish crescent, leaves all waste beyond The realm of Aladule, in his retreat To Tauris or Casbeen: so these, the late Heaven-banished host, left desert utmost Hell Many a dark league, reduced in careful watch Round their metropolis, and now expecting Each hour their great adventurer from the search Of foreign worlds; he through the midst unmarked, In show plebeian angel militant Of lowest order, passed; and from the door Of that Plutonian hall, invisible Ascended his high throne, which, under state Of richest texture spread, at the upper end Was placed in regal lustre. Down a while He sat, and round about him saw unseen: At last, as from a cloud, his fulgent head

And shape star-bright appeared, or brighter, clad With what permissive glory since his fall Was left him, or false glitter; all amazed At that so sudden blaze the Stygian throng Bent their aspect, and whom they wished beheld, Their mighty chief returned: loud was the acclaim: Forth rush'd in haste the great consulting peers, Raised from their dark divan, and with like joy Congratulant approached him, who with hand Silence, and with these words attention, won:

"Thrones, dominations, princedoms, virtues, powers, For in possession such, not only of right, I call ye and declare ye now; returned Successful beyond hope, to lead ve forth Triumphant out of this infernal pit Abominable, accursed, the house of woe, And dungeon of our tyrant: now possess, As lords, a spacious world, to our native Heaven Little inferior, by my adventure hard With peril great achieved. Long were to tell What I have done, what suffered, with what pain Voyaged the unreal, vast, unbounded deep Of horrible confusion, over which By Sin and Death a broad way now is paved To expedite your glorious march; but I Toiled out my uncouth passage, forced to ride The untractable abyss, plunged in the womb Of unoriginal night and Chaos wild, That, jealous of their secrets, fiercely opposed My journey strange, with clamorous uproar Protesting Fate supreme; thence how I found The new-created world, which fame in Heaven Long had foretold, a fabric wonderful Of absolute perfection, therein man Placed in a Paradise, by our exile Made happy: him by fraud I have seduced From his Creator, and the more to increase Your wonder, with an apple; He, thereat Offended (worth your laughter), hath given up Both his beloved man and all his world,

To Sin and Death a prey, and so to us,
Without our hazard, labour, or alarm,
To range in, and to dwell, and over man
To rule, as over all he should have ruled.
True is, me also he hath judged, or rather
Me not, but the brute scrpent in whose shape
Man I deceived: that which to me belongs,
Is enmity, which he will put between
Me and mankind; I am to bruise his heel;
His seed (when, is not set) shall bruise my head:
A world who would not purchase with a bruise,
Or much more grevious pain? Ye have the account
Of my performance: what remains, ye gods,
But up and enter now into full bliss?"

So having said, a while he stood, expecting Their universal shout and high applause To fill his ear; when, contrary, he hears On all sides, from innumerable tongues, A dismal universal hiss, the sound Of public scorn: he wondered, but not long Had leisure, wondering at himself now more; His visage drawn he felt to sharp and spare, His arms clung to his ribs, his legs intwining Each other, till supplanted down he fell A monstrous serpent on his belly prone, Reluctant, but in vain; a greater power Now ruled him, punished in the shape he sinned, According to his doom: he would have spoke, But hiss for hiss returned with forked tongue To forked tongue, for now were all transformed Alike, to serpents all, as accessories To his bold riot: dreadful was the din Of hissing through the hall, thick swarming now With complicated monsters head and tail, Scorpion, and asp, and amphisbæna dire, Cerastes horned, hydrus, and elops drear, And dipsas (not so thick swarmed once the soil Bedropped with blood of Gorgon, or the isle Ophiusa); but still greatest he the midst, Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun

Engendered in the Pythian vale on slime, Huge Python, and his power no less he seemed Above the rest still to retain; they all Him followed, issuing forth to the open field, Where all yet left of the revolted rout, Heaven-fallen, in station stood or just array, Sublime with expectation, when to see In triumph issuing forth their glorious chief; They saw, but other sight instead! a crowd Of ugly serpents: horror on them fell, And horrid sympathy; for what they saw, They felt themselves now changing; down their arms, Down fell both spear and shield, down they as fast, And the dire hiss renewed, and the dire form Catched by contagion, like in punishment, As in their crime. Thus was the applause they meant Turned to exploding hiss, triumph to shame Cast on themselves from their own mouths. stood

A grove hard by, sprung up with this their change, His will who reigns above, to aggravate Their penance, laden with fair fruit, like that Which grew in Paradise, the bait of Eve Used by the tempter: on that prospect strange Their earnest eves they fixed, imagining For one forbidden tree a multitude Now risen, to work them further woe or shame; Yet, parched with scalding thirst and hunger fierce, Though to delude them sent, could not abstain, But on they rolled in heaps, and up the trees Climbing, sat thicker than the snaky locks That curled Megæra; greedily they plucked The fruitage fair to sight, like that which grew Near that bituminous lake where Sodom flamed: This, more delusive, not the touch but taste Deceived; they, fondly thinking to allay Their appetite with gust, instead of fruit Chewed bitter ashes, which the offended taste With spattering noise rejected: oft they assayed, Hunger and thirst constraining; drugged as oft,

With hatefullest disrelish writhed their jaws With soot and einders filled; so oft they fell Into the same illusion, not as man

Whom they triumphed once lapsed. Thus were ties plagued

And worn with famine, long and ceaseless hiss, Till their lost shape, permitted, they resumed; Yearly enjoined, some say, to undergo This annual humbling certain numbered days, To dash their pride, and joy for man seduced. However, some tradition they dispersed Among the heathen of their purchase got, And fabled how the serpent, whom they called Ophion, with Eurynome, the wide Encroaching Eve, perhaps, had first the rule Of high Olympus, thence by Saturn driven, And Ops, ere yet Dictean Jove was born.

Meanwhile in Paradise the hellish pair Too soon arrived; Sin, there in power before, Once actual, now in body, and to dwell Habitual habitant; behind her Death Close following pace for pace, not mounted yet On his pale horse: to whom Sin thus began:

"Second of Satan sprung, all-conquering Death, What think'st thou of our empire now; though earned With travel difficult, not better far Than still at Hell's dark threshold to have sat watch, Unnamed, undreaded, and thyself half-starved?"

Whom thus the Sin-born monster answered soon: "To me, who with eternal famine pine, Alike is Hell, or Paradise, or Heaven; There best, where most with ravine I may meet; Which here, though plenteous, all too little seems To stuff this maw, this vast unhide-bound corps."

To whom the incestuous mother thus replied: "Thou, therefore, on these herbs, and fruits, and flowers, Feed first, on each beast next, and fish, and fowl, No homely morsels; and whatever thing The scythe of Time mows down, devour unspared; Till I, in man residing, through the race,

His thoughts, his looks, words, actions all infect, And season him thy last and sweetest prey." This said, they both betook them several ways, Both to destroy, or unimmortal make All kinds, and for destruction to mature Sooner or later; which the Almighty seeing, From his transcendent seat the saints among, To those bright orders uttered thus his voice:

"See with what heat these dogs of Hell advance To waste and havor yonder world, which I So fair and good created, and had still Kept in that state, had not the folly of man Let in these wasteful furies, who impute Folly to me; so doth the prince of Hell And his adherents, that with so much ease I suffer them to enter and possess A place so heavenly; and conniving seem -To gratify my scornful enemies, That laugh, as if, transported with some fit Of passion, I to them had quitted all, At random yielded up to their misrule; And know not that I called and drew them thither, My Hell-hounds, to lick up the draff and filth Which man's polluting sin with taint hath shed On what was pure, till, crammed and gorged nigh burst With sucked and glutted offal, at one sling Of thy victorious arm, well-pleasing Son, Both Sin, and Death, and yawing grave, at last Through Chaos hurled, obstruct the mouth of Hell For ever, and seal up his ravenous jaws. Then Heaven and earth, renewed, shall be made pure To sanctity that shall receive no stain:

Till then the curse pronounced on both precedes."
He ended, and the heavenly audience loud

Sung hallelujah, as the sound of seas,
Through multitude that sung: "Just are thy w ys,
Righteous are thy decrees on all thy works;
Who can extenuate thee?" Next, to the Son,
"Destined Restorer of mankind, by whom
New Heaven and earth shall to the ages rise,

Or down from heaven descend." Such was their song; While the Creator, calling forth by name His mighty angels, gave them several charge, As sorted best with present things. The sun Had first his precept so to move, so shine, As might affect the earth with cold and heat Scarce tolerable; and from the north to call Decrepit winter; from the south to bring Solstitial summer's heat. To the blank moon Her office they prescribed: to the other five Their planetary motions and aspects, In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite Of noxious efficacy; and when to join In synod unbenign: and taught the fixed Their influence malignant when to shower; Which of them, rising with the sun, or falling, Should prove tempestuous. To the winds they set Their corners; when with bluster to confound Sea, air, and shore; the thunder when to roll With terror through the dark aërial hall. Some say he bid his angels turn askance The poles of earth twice ten degrees and more From the sun's axle; they with labour pushed Oblique the centric globe: some say the sun Was bid turn reins from the equinoctial road Like distant breadth to Taurus, with the seven Atlantic Sisters, and the Spartan Twins, Up to the Tropic Crab; thence down amain By Leo, and the Virgin, and the Scales, As deep as Capricorn, to bring in change Of seasons to each clime; else had the spring Perpetual smiled on earth with vernant flowers, Equal in days and nights, except to those Beyond the poler circles; to them day Had unbenighted shone, while the low sun, To recompense his distance, in their sight Had rounded still the horizon, and not known Or east, or west, which had forbid the snow From cold Estotiland, and south as far Beneath Magellan. At that tasted fruit

The sun, as from Thyéstean banquet, turned His course intended; else how had the world Inhabited, though sinless, more than now, Avoided pinching cold and scorching heat? These changes in the heavens, though slow, produced Like change on sea and land; sideral blast, Vapour, and mist, and exhalation hot, Corrupt and pestilent: now from the north Of Norumbega, and the Samoed shore, Bursting their brazen dungeon, armed with ice, And snow, and hail, and stormy gust, and flaw; Boreas, and Cæcias, and Argestes loud, And Thrascias rend the woods, and seas upturn; With adverse blasts upturns them from the south, Notus, and Afer black with thunderous clouds From Serraliona; thwart of these, as fierce, Forth rush the Levant and the Ponent winds, Eurus and Zephyr, with their lateral noise, Sirocco and Libecchio. Thus began Outrage from lifeless things; but Discord first, Daughter of Sin, among the irrational, Death introduced, through fierce antipathy: Beast now with beast 'gan war, and fowl with fowl And fish with fish; to graze the herb all leaving. Devoured each other; nor stood much in awe Of man, but fled him, or with countenance grim Glared on him passing. These were, from without The growing miseries, which Adam saw Already in part, though hid in gloomiest shade, To sorrow abandoned; but worse felt within, And, in a troubled sea of passion tossed, Thus to disburden sought with sad complaint: "Oh, miserable of happy! is this the end

Of this new glorious world, and me so late
The glory of that glory, who now become
Accursed, of blessed? Hide me from the face
Of God, whom to behold was then my height
Of happiness! Yet well, if here would end
The misery; I deserved it, and would bear
My own deservings: but this will not serve:

All that I eat or drink, or shall beget, Is propagated curse. Oh, voice once heard Delightfully, 'Increase and multiply,' Now death to hear! for what can I increase Or multiply but curses on my head? Who of all ages to succeed, but, feeling The evil on him brought by me, will curse My head? 'Ill fare our ancestor impure! For this we may thank Adam;' but his thanks Shall be the execration: so besides Mine own that bide upon me, all from me Shall with a fierce reflux on me rebound: On me, as on their natural centre light, Heavy, though in their place. O fleeting joys Of Paradise, dear bought with lasting woes! Did I request thee, Maker, from my clay To mould me man? did I solicit thee From darkness to promote me? or here place In this delicious garden? As my will Concurred not to my being, it were but right And equal to reduce me to my dust, Desirous to resign and render back All I received, unable to perform Thy terms too hard, by which I was to hold The good I sought not. To the loss of that, Sufficient penalty! why hast thou added The sense of endless woes? Inéxplicable Thy justice seems; yet, to say truth, too late I thus contest; then should have been refused Those terms, whatever, when they were proposed: Thou didst accept them. Wilt thou enjoy the good. Then cavil the conditions? and though God Made thee without thy leave, what if thy son Prove disobedient, and reproved, retort, 'Wherefore didst thou beget me? I sought it not:' Wouldst thou admit, for his contempt of thee, That proud excase? Yet him, not thy election, But natural necessity, begot. God made thee of choice his own, and of his own To serve him: thy reward was of his grace;

Thy punishment then, justly, is at his will, Be it so, for I submit: his doom is fair; That dust I am, and shall to dust return. O welcome hour whenever! Why delays His hand to execute what his decree Fixed on this day? Why do I over-live? Why am I mocked with death, and lengthened out To deathless pain? How gladly would I meet Mortality my sentence, and be earth Insensible! how glad would lay me down As in my mother's lap! there I should rest And sleep secure: his dreadful voice no more Would thunder in my ears; no fear of worse To me and to my offspring would torment me With cruel expectation. Yet one doubt Pursues me still, lest all I cannot die: Lest that pure breath of life, the spirit of man Which God inspired, cannot together perish With this corporeal clod; then in the grave, Or in some other dismal place, who knows But I shall die a living death? O thought Horrid, if true! Yet why? It was but breath Of life that sinned: what dies but what had life And sin? The body properly had neither. All of me then shall die: let this appease The doubt, since human reach no further knows. For though the Lord of all be infinite, Is his wrath also? Be it; man is not so, But mortal doomed. How can be exercise Wrath without end on man whom death must end? Can be make deathless death? That were to make Strange contradiction, which to God himself Impossible is held, as argument Of weakness, not of power. Will he draw out, For anger's sake, finite to infinite · In punished man, to satisfy his rigour Satisfied never? That were to extend His sentence beyond dust and nature's law, By which all causes else according still To the reception of their matter act,

Not to the extent of their own sphere. But say That death be not one stroke, as I supposed, Bereaving sense, but endless misery From this day onward, which I feel begun Both in me, and without me, and so last To perpetuity: ay me! that fear Comes thundering back with dreadful revolution On my defenceless head; both Death and I Am found eternal, and incorporate both: Nor I on my part single: in me all Posterity stands cursed. Fair patrimony That I must leave ye, sons. Oh! were I able To waste it all myself, and leave ye none! So disinherited, how would ve bless Me now your curse! Ah! why should all mankind For one man's fault thus guiltless be condemned, If guiltless? But from me what can proceed, But all corrupt, both mind and will depraved, Not to do only, but to will the same With me? How can they then acquitted stand In sight of God? Him, after all disputes, Forced I absolve: all my evasions vain; And reasonings, though through mazes, lead me still But to my own conviction: first and last On me, me only, as the source and spring Of all corruption, all the blame lights due; So might the wrath! Fond wish! couldst thou support That burden heavier than the earth to bear, That all the world much heavier, though divided With that bad woman? Thus what thou desir'st, And what thou fear'st, alike destroys all hope Of refuge, and concludes thee miserable Beyond all past example and future, To Satan only like both crime and doom. O conscience! into what abyss of fears And horrors hast thou driven me, out of which I find no way, from deep to deeper plunged!" Thus Adam to himself lamented loud, Through the still night; not now, as ere man fell, Wholesome, and cool, and mild; but with black air

Accompanied, with damps and dreadful gloom, Which to his evil conscience represented All things with double terror: on the ground Outstretched he lay, on the cold ground, and oft Cursed his creation, death as oft accused Of tardy execution, since denounced The day of his offence. "Why comes not death," Said he, "with one thrice acceptable stroke To end me? Shall truth fail to keep her word? Justice divine not hasten to be just? But death comes not at call; justice divine Mends not her slowest pace for prayers or cries. O woods! O fountains, hillocks, dales, and bowers! With other echo late I taught your shades To answer, and resound far other song."

Whom thus afflicted, when sad Eve beheld, Desolate where she sat, approaching nigh, Soft words to his fierce passion she assayed; But her with stern regard he thus repelled;

"Out of my sight, thou serpent! that name best Befits thee with him leagued, thyself as false And hateful; nothing wants but that thy shape, Like his, and colour serpentine, may show Thy inward fraud, to warn all creatures from thee Henceforth; lest that too heavenly form pretended To hellish falsehood snare them. But for thee I had persisted happy, had not thy pride And wandering vanity, when least was safe, Rejected my forewarning, and disdained Not to be trusted, longing to be seen, Though by the devil himself, him overweening To over-reach, but with the serpent meeting Fooled and beguiled; by him thou, I by thee; To trust thee from my side, imagined wise, Constant, mature, proof against all assaults; And understood not all was but a show, Rather than solid virtue; all but a rib, Crooked by nature; bent, as now appears, More to the part sinister, from me drawn; Well if thrown out, as supernumerary

To my just number found. Oh! why did God. Creator wise, that peopled highest Heaven With spirits masculine, create at last This novelty on earth, this fair defect Of nature, and not fill the world at once With men, as angels, without feminine, Or find some other way to generate Mankind? This mischief had not then befallen. And more that shall befall, innumerable Disturbances on earth through female snares, And strait conjunction with this sex: for either He never shall find out fit mate, but such As some misfortune brings him, or mistake: Or whom he wishes most shall seldom gain Through her perverseness, but shall see her gained By a far worse, or if she love, withheld By parents; or his happiest choice too late Shall meet, already linked and wedlock-bound To a fell adversary, his hate or shame; Which infinite calamity shall cause To human life, and household peace confound."

He added not, and from her turned; but Eve, Not so repulsed, with tears that ceased not flowing, And tresses all disordered, at his feet

Fell humble, and embracing them, besought His peace, and thus proceeded in her plaint:

"Forsake me not thus, Adam! witness Heaven What love sincere, and reverence in my heart I bear thee, and unweeting have offended, Unhappily deceived! Thy suppliant I beg, and clasp thy knees; bereave me not Whereon I live, thy gentle looks, thy aid, Thy counsel in this uttermost distress, My only strength and stay; forlorn of thee, Whither shall I betake me, where subsist? While yet we live, scarce one short hour perhaps, Between us two let there be peace, both joining, As joined in injuries, one enmity Against a foe by doom express assigned us, That cruel serpent on me exercise not Thy hatred for this misery befallen, On me already lost, me then thyself More miserable; both have sinned, but thou Against God only, I against God and thee, And to the place of judgment will return, There with my cries importune Heaven, that all The sentence, from thy head removed, may light On me, sole cause to thee of all this woe, Me, me only, just object of his ire."

She ended weeping, and her lowly plight, Immoveable till peace obtained from fault Acknowledged and deplored, in Adam wrought Commiscration; soon his heart relented Towards her, his life so late, and sole delight, Now at his feet submissive in distress, Creature so fair his reconcilement seeking, His counsel whom she had displeased, his aid; As one disarmed, his anger all he lost, And thus with peaceful words upraised her soon:

"Unwary, and too desirous, as before, So now of what thou know'st not, who desir'st The punishment all on thyself; alas! Bear thine own first, ill able to sustain His full wrath, whose thou feel'st as yet least part, And my displeasure bear'st so ill. If prayers Could alter high decrees, I to that place Would speed before thee, and be louder heard, That on my head all might be visited, Thy frailty and infirmer sex forgiven, To me committed and by me exposed. But rise, let us no more contend, nor blame Each other, blamed enough elsewhere, but strive In offices of love, how we may lighten Each other's burden in a share of woe: Since this day's death denounced, if aught I see, Will prove no sudden, but a slow-paced evil, A long day's dying to augment our pain, An I to our seed (O hapless seed!) derived."

To whom thus Eve, recovering heart, replied:

" Adam, by sad experiment I know

How little weight my words with thee can find, Found so erroneous, thence by just event Found so unfortunate; nevertheless, Restored by thee, vile as I am, to place Of new acceptance, hopeful to regain Thy love, the sole contentment of my heart Living or dying, from thee I will not hide What thoughts in my unquiet breast are risen, Tending to some relief of our extremes, Or end, though sharp and sad, yet tolerable, As in our evils, and of easier choice. If care of our descent perplex us most Which must be born to certain woe, devoured By death at last; and miserable it is To be to others cause of misery, Our own begotten, and of our loins to bring Into this cursed world a woeful race, That after wretched life must be at last Food for so foul a monster; in thy power It lies, yet ere conception to prevent The race unblessed, to being yet unbegot. Childless thou art, childless remain; so Death Shall be deceived his glut, and with us two Be forced to satisfy his ravenous maw. But if thou judge it hard and difficult, Conversing, looking, loving, to abstain From love's due rites, nuptial embraces sweet, And with desire to languish without hope, Before the present object languishing With like desire, which would be misery And torment less than none of what we dread; Then, both ourselves and seed at once to free From what we fear for both, let us make short, Let us seek Death, or he not found, supply With our own hands his office on ourselves. Why stand we longer shivering under fears, That show no end but death, and have the power, Of many ways to die the shortest choosing, Destruction with destruction to destroy?" She ended here, or vehement despair

Broke off the rest; so much of death her thoughts Had entertained, as dyed her cheeks with pale. But Adam with such counsel nothing swayed, To better hopes his more attentive mind Laboring had raised, and thus to Eve replied:

"Eve, thy contempt of life and pleasure seems To argue in thee something more sublime And excellent than what thy mind contemns; But self-destruction therefore sought, refutes That excellence thought in thee, and implies, Not thy contempt, but anguish and regret For loss of life and pleasure overloved. Or if thou covet death, as utmost end Of misery, so thinking to evade The penalty pronounced, doubt not but God Hath wiselier armed his vengeful ire than so To be forestalled; much more I fear lest death, So snatched, will not exempt us from the pain We are by doom to pay; rather such acts Of contumacy will provoke the Highest To make death in us live. Then let us seek Some safer resolution, which methinks I have in view, calling to mind with heed Part of our sentence, that thy seed shall bruise The serpent's head; piteous amends! unless Be meant, whom I conjecture, our grand foe Satan, who in the serpent hath contrived Against us this deceit: to crush his head Would be revenge indeed; which will be lost By death brought on ourselves, or childless days Resolved as thou proposest; so our foe Shall 'scape his punishment ordained, and we Instead shall double ours upon our heads. No more be mentioned then of violence Against ourselves, and wilful barrenness, That cuts us off from hope, and savours only Rancour and pride, impatience and despite, Reluctance against God and his just yoke Laid on our necks. Remember with what mild And gracious temper he both heard and judged

Without wrath or reviling; we expected Immediate dissolution, which we thought Was meant by death that day, when lo! to thee Pains only in child-bearing were foretold, And bringing forth, soon recompensed with jov, Fruit of thy womb: on me the curse aslope Glanced on the ground: with labour I must earn My bread; what harm? Idleness had been worse. My labour will sustain me; and lest cold Or heat should injure us, his timely care Hath unbesought provided, and his hands Clothed us unworthy, pitying while he judged; How much more, if we pray him, will his ear Be open, and his heart to pity incline, And teach us further by what means to shun The inclement seasons, rain, ice, hail, and snow? Which now the sky with various face begins To show us in this mountain, while the winds Blow moist and keen, shattering the graceful locks Of these fair-spreading trees; which bids us seek Some better warmth to cherish Our limbs benumbed, ere this diurnal star Leave cold the night, how we his gathered beams Reflected, may with matter sere foment; Or, by collision of two bodies, grind The air attrite to fire, as late the clouds Justling, or pushed with winds, rude in their shock, Tine the slant lightning, whose thwart flame driven down Kindles the gummy bark of fir or pine, And sends a comfortable heat from far, Which might supply the sun: such fire to use. And what may else be remedy or cure To evils which our own misdeeds have wrought, He will instruct us praying, and of grace Beseeching him, so as we need not fear To pass commodiously this life, sustained By him with many comforts, till we end In dust our final rest and native home. What better can we do, than, to the place Repairing where he judged us, prostrate fall

Before him reverent, and there confess Humbly our faults, and pardon beg, with tears Watering the ground, and with our sighs the air Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign Of sorrow unfeigned, and humiliation meek? Undoubtedly he will relent and turn From his displeasure; in whose look serene, When angry most he seemed and most severe, What else but favour, grace, and mercy shone?"

So spake our father penitent, nor Eve Felt less remorse: they forthwith to the place Repairing where he judged them, prostrate fell Before him reverent, and both confessed Humbly their faults, and pardon begged, with tears Watering the ground, and with their sighs the air Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign Of sorrow unfeigned, and humiliation meek.

BOOK XI.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE Son of God presents to his Father the prayers of our first parents. now repenting, and intercedes for them : God accepts them, but declares that they must no longer abide in Paradise; sends Michael with a band of cherubim to dispossess them; but first to reveal to Adam future things: Michael's coming down. Adam shows to Eve certain ominous signs; he discerns Michael's approach; goes out to meet him: the angel denounces their departure. Eve's lamentation. Adam pleads, but submits : the angel leads him up to a high hill ; sees before him in vision what shall happen till the flood.

Thus they, in lowliest plight, repentant stood Praying; for, from the mercy-seat above, Prevenient grace descending had removed The stony from their hearts, and made new flesh Regenerate grow instead, that sighs now breathed Unutterable, which the Spirit of prayer Inspired, and winged for Heaven with speedier flight Than loudest oratory; yet their port Not of mean suitors, nor important less Seemed their petition, than when the ancient pair In fables old, less ancient yet than these Deucalion and chaste Pyrrha, to restore The race of mankind drowned, before the shrine Of Themis stood devout. To Heaven their prayers Flew up, nor missed the way, by envious winds Blown vagabond or frustrate: in they passed Dimensionless through heavenly doors; then clad With incense, where the golden altar fumed, By their great Intercessor, came in sight Before the Father's throne: them the glad Son Presenting thus to intercede began:

"See, Father, what first-fruits on earth are sprung

From thy implanted grace in man; these sighs And prayers, which in this golden censer, mixed With incense, I thy priest before thee bring, Fruits of more pleasing sayour, from thy seed Sown with contrition in his heart, than those Which his own hand, manuring all the trees Of Paradise, could have produced, ere fallen From innocence. Now therefore bend thine ear To supplication; hear his sighs, though mute; Unskilful with what words to pray, let me Interpret for him, me his advocate And propitiation: all his works on me, Good or not good, ingraft; my merit those Shall perfect, and for these my death shall pay. Accept me, and in me from these receive The smell of peace toward mankind; let him live Before thee reconciled, at least his days Numbered, though sad, till death, his doom (which I To mitigate thus plead, not to reverse), To better life shall yield him, where with me All my redeemed may dwell in joy and bliss, Made one with me, as I with thee am one."

To whom the father, without cloud, serene: "All thy request for man, accepted Son, Obtain: all thy request was my decree; But longer in that Paradise to dwell, The law I gave to nature him forbids. Those pure immortal elements that know No gross, no unharmonious mixture foul, Eject him tainted now, and purge him off As a distemper, gross to air as gross, And mortal food, as may dispose him best For dissolution wrought by sin, that first Distempered all things, and of incorrupt Corrupted. I at first with two fair gifts Created him endowed, with happiness And immortality: that fondly lost, This other served but to eternize woe, Till I provided death; so death becomes His final remedy, and after life

Tried in sharp tribulation, and refined

By faith and faithful works, to second life,
Waked in the renovation of the just,
Resigns him up with Heaven and earth renewed.
But let us call to synod all the blest
Through Heaven's wide bounds; from them I will not hide

My judgments, how with mankind I proceed, As how with peccant angels late they saw, And in their state, though firm, stood more confirmed."

He ended; and the Son gave signal high
To the bright minister that watched: he blew
His trumpet, heard in Oreb since perhaps
When God descended, and perhaps once more
To sound at general doom. The angelic blast
Filledall the regions: from their blissful bowers
Of amaranthine shade, fountain, or spring,
By the waters of life, where'er they sat
In fellowships of joy, the sons of light
Hasted, resorting to the summons high,
And took their seats; till from his throne supreme
The Almighty thus pronounced his sovran will:

"O sons! like one of us man is become
To know both good and evil, since his taste
Of that defended fruit; but let him boast
His knowledge of good lost, and evil got;
Happier, had it sufficed him to have known
Good by itself, and evil not at all.
He sorrows now, repents, and prays contrite,
My motions in him; longer than they move,
His heart I know how variable and vain,
Self-left. Lest therefore his now bolder hand
Reach also of the tree of life, and eat,
And live for ever, dream at least to live
For ever, to remove him I decree,
And send him from the garden forth to till
The ground whence he was taken, fitter soil.

"Michael, this my behest have thou in charge: Take to thee from among the cherubim Thy choice of flaming warriors, lest the fiend,

Or in behalf of man, or to invade Vacant possession, some new trouble raise: Haste thee, and from the Paradise of God Without remorse drive out the sinful pair, From hallowed ground the unholy, and denounce To them and to their progeny from thence Perpetual banishment. Yet lest they faint At the sad sentence rigorously urged (For I behold them softened, and with tears Bewailing their excess), all terror hide. If patiently thy bidding they obey, Dismiss them not disconsolate; reveal To Adam what shall come in future days, As I shall thee enlighten: intermix My covenant in the woman's seed renewed; So send them forth, though sorrowing, yet in peace; And on the east side of the garden place, Where entrance up from Eden easiest climbs, Cherubic watch, and of a sword the flame Wide-waving, all approach far off to fright, And guard all passage to the tree of life; Lest Paradise a receptacle prove To spirits foul, and all my trees their prey, With whose stolen fruit man once more to delude." He ceased; and the archangelic power prepared For swifts descent; with him the cohort bright Of watchful cherubin: four faces each Had, like a double Janus; all their shape Spangled with eyes, more numerous than those Of Argus, and more wakeful than to drowse, Charmed with Arcadian pipe, the pastoral reed Of Hermes, or his opiate rod. Meanwhile, To resalute the world with sacred light, Leucothea waked, and with fresh dews embalmed The earth; when Adam and first matron Eve Had ended now their orisons, and found Strength added from above; new hope to spring Ont of despair; joy, but with fear yet linked; Which thus to Eve his welcome words renewed:

"Eve! easily may faith admit that all

The good which we enjoy from Heaven descends: But, that from us aught should ascend to Heaven, So prevalent as to concern the mind Of God high blest, or to incline his will, Hard to belief may seem; yet this will prayer, Or one short sigh of human breath, upborne Even to the seat of God. For since I sought By prayer the offended Deity to appease, Kneeled, and before him humbled all my heart, Methought I saw him placable, and mild, Bending his ear: persuasion in me grew That I was heard with favour; peace returned Home to my breast; and to my memory His promise, that thy seed shall bruise our foe; Which, then not minded in dismay, yet now Assures me that the bitterness of death Is past, and we shall live. Whence hail to thee. Eve rightly called, mother of all mankind! Mother of all things living, since by thee Man is to live; and all things live for man." To whom thus Eve, with sad demeanour meek:

"Ill-worthy I, such title should belong To me trangressor! who, for thee ordained A help, became thy snare: to me reproach Rather belongs, distrust, and all dispraise. But infinite in pardon was my Judge, That I, who first brought death on all, am graced The source of life: next favourable thou, Who highly thus to entitle me vouchsaf'st, Far other names deserving. But the field To labour calls us, now with sweat imposed, Though after sleepless pight; for see! the morn, All unconcerned with our unrest, begins Her rosy progress smiling: let us forth; I never from thy side henceforth to stray, Where'er our day's work lies, though now enjoined Laborious till day droop: while here we dwell, What can be toilsome in these pleasant walks? Here let us live, though in fallen state, content!" So spake, so wished, much-humbled Eve; but fate Subscribed not: nature first gave signs, impressed On bird, beast, air: air suddenly eclipsed,
After short blush of morn; nigh in her sight
The bird of Jove, stooped from his airy tour,
Two birds of gayest plume before him drove;
Down from a hill the beast that reigns in woods,
First hunter then, pursued a gentle brace,
Goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind;
Direct to the eastern gate was bent their flight.
Adam observed, and with his eye the chase
Pursuing, not unmoved, to Eve thus spake:

"O Eve! some further change awaits us nigh,
Which Heaven, by these mute signs of nature, shows
Forerunners of his purpose: or to warn
Us, haply to secure of our discharge
From penalty, because from death released
Some days: how long, and what till then our life,
Who knows? or more than this, that we are dust,
And thither must return, and be no more?
Why else this double object in our sight
Of flight pursued in the air, and o'er the ground,
One way the self-same hour? why in the east
Darkness ere day's mid-course, and morning-light
More orient in yon western cloud, that draws
O'er the blue firmament a radiant while,
And slow descends with something heavenly fraught?"

He erred not; for by this the heavenly bands
Down from the sky of jasper lighted now
In Paradise, and on a hill made halt,
A glorious apparition, had not doubt
And carnal fear that day dimmed Adam's eye.
Not that more glorious, when the angels met
Jacob in Mahanaim, where he saw
The field pavilioned with his guardians bright;
Nor that, which on the flaming mount appeared
In Dothan, covered with a camp of fire;
Against the Syrian king; who, to surprise
One man, assassion like, had levied war,
War unproclaimed. The princely hierarch
In their bright stand there left his powers, to seize

Possession of the garden: he alone, To find where Adam sheltered, took his way; Not unpercived of Adam, who to Eve, While the great visitant approached, thus spake:

"Eve, now expect great tidings, which perhaps Of us will soon determine, or impose New laws to be observed; for I descry, From yonder blazing cloud that veils the hill. One of the heavenly host, and, by his gait, None of the meanest; some great potentate, Or of the thrones above; such majesty Invests him coming! yet not terrible, That I should fear; nor sociably mild, As Raphaël, that I should much confide; But solemn and sublime; whom, not to offend, With reverence I must meet, and thou retire." He ended: and the archangel soon drew nigh. Nor in his shape celestial, but as man Clad to meet man; over his lucid arms A military vest of purple flowed, Livelier than Melibean, or the grain Of Sarra, worn by kings and heroes old In time of truce; Iris had dipped the woof: His starry helm unbuckled showed him prime In manhood where youth ended: by his side, As in a glistering zodiac, hung the sword, Satan's dire dread; and in his hand the spear. Adam bowed low: he, kingly, from his state Inclined not, but his coming thus declared:

"Adam! Heaven's high behest no preface needs Sufficient that thy prayers are heard; and Death, Then due by sentence when thou didst transgress, Defeated of his seizure: many days Given thee of grace, wherein thou mayest repent, And one bad act with many deeds well done Mayst cover: well may then thy Lord, appeased, Redeem thee quite from Death's rapacious claim; But longer in this Paradise to dwell Permits not: to move thee I am come, And send thee fromthe garden forth, to till

The ground whence thou wast taken; fitter soil."
He added not; for Adam at the news
Heart-struck with chilling gripe of sorrow stood,
That all his senses bound: Eve, who unseen
Yet all had heard, with audible lament
Discovered soon the place of her retire:

"Oh, unexpected stroke, worse than of death! Must I thus leave thee, Paradise? thus leave Thee, native soil, these happy walks and shades, Fit haunt of gods? where I had hope to spend, Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day That must be mortal to us both. O flowers. That never will in other climate grow, My early visitation, and my last At even, which I bred up with tender hand From the first opening bud, and gave ye names; Who now shall rear ve to the sun, or rank Your tribes, and water from the ambrosial fount? Thee lastly, nuptial bower, by me adorned, With what to sight or smell was sweet; from thee How shall I part, and whether wander down Into a lower world, to this obscure And wild? how shall we breathe in other air Less pure, accustomed to immortal fruits?" Whom thus the angel interrupted mild: "Lament not, Eve, but patiently resign What justly thou hast lost: nor set thy heart, Thus over-fond, in that which is not thine: Thy going is not lonely; with thee goes Thy husband; him to follow thou art bound; Where he abides, think there thy native soil.

Adam, by this from the cold sudden damp Recovering, and his scattered spirits returned, To Michael thus his humble words addressed:

"Celestial, whether among the thrones, or named Of them the highest, for such of shape may seem Prince above princes, gently hast thou told Thy message, which might else in telling wound, And in performing end us; what besides Of sorrow and dejection and despair

Our frailty can sustain, thy tidings bring, Departure from this happy place, our sweet Recess, and only consolation lift Familiar to our eyes; all places else Inhospitable appear and desolate, Nor knowing us nor known: and if by prayer Incessant I could hope to change the will Of him who all things can, I would not cease To weary him with my assiduous cries: But prayer against his absolute decree No more avails than breath against the wind, Blown stifling back on him that breathes it forth: Therefore to his great bidding I submit. This most afflicts me, that, departing hence, As from his face I shall be hid, deprived His blessed countenance; here I could frequent With worship place by place where he vouchsafed Presence divine, and to my sons relate, On this mount he appeared; under this tree Stood visible; among these pines his voice I heard; here with him at this fountain talked: So many grateful altars I would rear Of grassy turf, and pile up every stone Of lustre from the brook, in memory, Or monument to ages, and thereon Offer sweet smelling gums, and fruits, and flowers. In yonder nether world where shall I seek His bright appearances, or footsteps trace? For though I fled him angry, yet, recalled To life prolonged and promised race, I now Gladly beheld though but his utmost skirts Of glory, and far off his steps adore." To whom thus Michael with regard benign: "Adam, thou knowest Heaven his, and all the earth, Not this rock only; his omnipresence fills Land, sea, and air, and every kind that lives, Fomented by his virtual power and warmed: All the earth he gave thee to possess and rule, No despicable gift; surmise not then

His presence to these narrow bounds confined

Of Paradise or Eden: this had been Perhaps thy capital seat, from whence had spread All generations, and had hither come From all the ends of the earth, to celebrate And reverence thee their great progenitor. But this pre-eminence thou hast lost, brought down To dwell on even ground now with thy sons: Yet doubt not but in valley and in plain God is as here, and will be found alike Present, and of his presence many a sign Still following thee, still compassing thee round With goodness and paternal love, his face Express, and of his steps the track divine. Which that thou mayst believe, and be confirmed Ere thou from hence depart, know I am sent To show thee what shall come in future days To thee and to thy offspring; good with bad Expect to hear, supernal grace contending With sinfulness of men; thereby to learn True patience, and to temper joy with fear, And pious sorrow, equally inured By moderation either state to bear, Prosperous or adverse: so shalt thou lead Safest thy life, and best prepared endure Thy mortal passage when it comes. Ascend This hill; let Eve (for I have drenched her eyes) Here sleep below, while thou to foresight wakest; As once thou slept'st, while she to life was formed." To whom thus Adam gratefully replied: "Ascend; I follow thee, safe guide, the path Thou lead'st me, and to the hand of Heaven submit, However chastening; to the evil turn My obvious breast: arming to overcome By suffering, and earn rest from labour won, If so I may attain." So both ascend In the visions of God. It was a hill Of Paradise the highest, from whose top The hemisphere of earth in clearest ken Stretched out to the amplest reach of prospect lay. Not higher that hill nor wider looking round,

Whereon for different cause the tempter set Our second Adam in the wilderness, To show him all earth's kingdoms and their glory. His eye might there command wherever stood City of old or modern fame, the seat Of mightiest empire, from the destined walls Of Cambalu, seat of Cathaian Can, And Samarchand by Oxus, Temir's throne, To Paquin of Sinean kings; and thence To Agra and Lahor, of great Mogul, Down to the golden Chersonese; or where The Persian in Echatan sat, or since In Hispahan; or where the Russian Ksar In Mosco, or the Sultan in Bizance, Turchestan-born: nor could his eye not ken The empire of Negus to his utmost port, Ercoco, and the less maritime kings, Mombaza, and Quiloa, and Melind, And Sofala thought Ophir, to the realm Of Congo, and Angola farthest south: Or thence from Niger flood to Atlas Mount, The kingdoms of Almansor, Fez and Sus, Marocco, and Algiers, and Tremisen; On Europe thence, and where Rome was to sway The world: in spirit perhaps he also saw Rich Mexico, the seat of Montezume, And Cusco, in Peru, the richer seat Of Atabalipa, and yet unspoiled Guiana, whose great city Geryon's sons Call El Dorado; but to nobler sights Michael from Adam's eyes the film removed, Which that false fruit that promised clearer sight Had bred; then cleansed with euphrasy and rue The visual nerve, for he had much to see; And from the well of life three drops instilled So deep the power of these ingredients pierced, E'en to the inmost seat of mental sight, That Adam, now enforced to close his eyes, Sunk down, and all his spirit became entranced; But him the gentle angel by the hand

Soon raised, and his attention thus recalled:

"Adam, now ope thine eyes, and first behold The effects which thy original crime hath wrought In some to spring from thee, who never touched The excepted tree, nor with the snake conspired Nor sinned thy sin, yet from that sin derive Corruption to bring forth more violent deeds."

His eyes he opened, and beheld a field, Part arable and tilth, whereon were sheaves New reaped, the other part sheep-walks and folds; I' the midst an altar as the landmark stood. Rustic, of grassy sord; thither anon A sweaty reaper from his tillage brought First-fruits, the green ear, and the vellow sheaf, Unculled, as came to hand; a shepherd next, More meek, came with the firstlings of his flock. Choicest and best; then sacrificing, laid The inwards and their fat, with incense strewed. On the cleft wood, and all due rites performed: His offering soon propitious fire from Heaven Consumed with nimble glance and grateful steam; The other's not, for his was not sincere: Whereat he inly raged; and, as they talked. Smote him into the midriff with a stone That beat out life: he fell, and, deadly pale, Groaned out his soul with gushing blood effused. Much at that sight was Adam in his heart Dismayed; and thus, in haste, to the angel cried: "O teacher! some great mischief has befallen To that meek man, who well hath sacrificed!

Is piety thus and pure devotion paid?"
To whom Michael thus, he also moved, replied:
"These two are brethren, Adam, and to come
Out of thy loins; the unjust the just hath slain,
For envy that his brother's offering found
From Heaven acceptance; but the bloody fact
Will be avenged, and the other's faith, approved,
Lose no reward, though here thou see him die,
Rolling in dust and gore." To which our sire:
"Alas! both for the deed and for the cause!

But have I now seen death? Is this the way I must return to native dust? Oh, sight Of terror, foul and ugly to behold! Horrid to think! how horrible to feel!"

To whom thus Michael: "Death thou hast seen In his first shape on man; but many shapes Of Death, and many are the ways that lead To his grim cave, all dismal; yet to sense More terrible at the entrance than within. Some, as thou saw'st, by violent stroke shall die: By fire, flood, famine; by intemperance more In meats and drinks, which on the earth shall bring Diseases dire, of which a monstrous crew Before thee shall appear, that thou mayst know What misery the inabstinence of Eve Shall bring on men." Immediately a place Before his eyes appeared, sad, noisome, dark: A lazar-house it seemed, wherein were laid Numbers of all diseased, all maladies Of ghastly spasm, or racking torture, qualms Of heart-sick agony; all feverous kinds, Convulsions, epilepsies, fierce catarrhs, Intestine stone and ulcer, colic pangs, Demoniac frenzy, moping melancholy, And moon-struck madness, pining atrophy, Marasmus, and wide-wasting pestilence, Dropsies, and asthmas, and joint-racking rheums. Dire was the tossing, deep the groans; Despair Tended the sick busiest from couch to couch; And over them triumphant Death his dart Shook, but delayed to strike, though oft invoked With vows, as their chief good, and final hope. Sight so deform, what heart of rock could long Dry eye behold? Adam could not, but wept, Though not of woman born; compassion quelled His best of man, and gave him up to tears A space, till firmer thoughts restrained excess; And, scarce recovering words, his plaint renewed:

"Oh, miserable mankind! to what fall Degraded! to what wretched fate reserved!

Better end here unborn. Why is life given
To be thus wrested from us? rather why
Obtruded on us thus? who, if we knew
What we receive, would either not accept
Life offered, or soon beg to lay it down,
Glad to be so dismissed in peace. Can thus
The image of God, in man created once
So goodly and creet, though faulty since
To such unsightly sufferings be debased
Under inhuman pains? Why should not man,
Retaining still divine similitude
In part, from such deformities be free,
And for his Maker's image sake exempt?"

"Their Maker's image," answered Michael, "then Forsook them, when themselves they vilified To serve ungoverned appetite, and took His image whom they served, a brutish vice, Inductive mainly to the sin of Eve.

Therefore so abject is their punishment, Disfiguring not God's likeness, but their own; Or, if his likeness, by themselves defaced, While they prevert pure nature's healthful rules To loathsome sickness; worthily since they God's image did not reverence in themselves."

"I yield it just," said Adam, "and submit. But is there yet no other way, besides These painful passages, how we may come To death, and mix with our connatural dust?"

"There is," said Michael, "if thou well observe
The rule of not too much, by temperance taught,
In what thou eat'st and drink'st, seeking from thence
Due nourishment, not gluttonous delight,
Till many years over thy head return:
So mayst thou live, till like ripe fruit thou drop
Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gathered, not harshly plucked, for death mature:
This is old age; but then thou must outlive
Thy youth, thy strength, thy beauty, which will change
To withered, weak, and gray; thy senses then
Obtuse, all taste of pleasure must forego

To what thou hast; and for the air of youth, Hopeful and cheerful, in thy blood will reign A melancholy damp of cold and dry To weigh thy spirits down, and last consume The balm of life." To whom our ancestor:

"Henceforth I fly not death, nor would prolong Life much, bent rather how I may be quit, Fairest and easiest, of this cumbrous charge, Which I must keep till my appointed day Of rendering up, and patiently attend My dissolution." Michael replied:

"Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st Live well; how long or short, permit to Heaven:

And now prepare thee for another sight."

He looked, and saw a spacious plain, whereon Were tents of various hue; by some were herds Of cattle grazing; others, whence the sound Of instruments that made melodious chime Was heard, of harp and organ; and who moved Their stops and chords were seen: his volant touch Instinct through all proportions low and high Fled and pursued tranverse the resonant fugue. In other part stood one who at the forge Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass Had melted (whether found where casual fire . Had wasted woods on mountain or in vale, Down to the veins of earth, thence gliding hot To some cave's mouth, or whether washed by stream From under ground); the liquid ore he drained Into fit moulds prepared; from which he formed, First, his own tools; then, what might else be wrought Fusil or graven in metal. After these, But on the hither side, a different sort From the high neighbouring hills, which was their seat. Down to the plain descended: by their guise, Just men they seemed, and all their study bent To worship God aright, and know his works Not hid, nor those things last which might preserve Freedom and peace to men: they on the plain Long had not walked, when from the tents, behold!

A bevy of fair women, richly gay In gems and wanton dress; to the harp they sung Soft amorous ditties, and in dance came on: The men, though grave, eyed them, and let their eyes Rove without rein, till, in the amorous net, Fast caught, they liked, and each his liking chose; And now of love they treat, till the evening star, Love's harbinger appeared; then all in heat They light the nuptial torch, and bid invoke Hymen, then first to marriage rites invoked: With feast and music all the tents resound. Such happy interview and fair event Of love and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flowers, And charming symphonies, attached the heart Of Adam, soon inclined to admit delight, The bent of nature; which he thus expressed: "True opener of mine eyes! prime angel blest! Much better seems this vision, and more hope

Of peaceful days portends, than those two past:
Those were of hate and death, or pain much worse;

Here nature seems fulfilled in all her ends."

To whom thus Michael: "Judge not what is best By pleasure, though to nature seeming meet Created as thou art to nobler end. Holy and pure, conformity divine. Those tents thou saw'st so pleasant, were the tents Of wickedness, wherein shall dwell his race Who slew his brother; studious they appear Of arts that polish life, inventors rare, Unmindful of their Maker, though his Spirit Taught them; but they his gifts acknowledged none. Yet they a beauteous offspring shall beget; For that fair female troop thou saw'st, that seemed Of goddesses, so blithe, so smooth, so gay, Yet empty of all good, wherein consists Woman's domestic honour and chief praise, Bred only and completed to the taste Of lustful appetence, to sing, to dance, To dress, and troll the tongue, and roll the eye; To these that sober race of men, whose lives

Religious titled them the sons of God, Shall yield up all their virtue, all their fame, Ignobly, to the trains and to the smiles Of these fair atheists; and now swim in joy, Ere long to swim at large; and laugh, for which The world, ere long, a world of tears must weep."

To whom thus Adam, of short joy bereft:
"Oh, pity and shame, that they, who to live well
Entered so fair, should turn aside to tread
Paths indirect, or in the midway faint!
But still I see the tenor of man's woe
Holds on the same, from woman to begin."

"From man's effeminate slackness it begins," Said the angel, "who should better hold his place By wisdom, and superior gifts received. But now prepare thee for another scene."

He looked, and saw wide territory spread Before him; towns, and rural works between; Cities of men with lofty gates and towers, Concourse in arms, fierce faces threatening war, Giants of mighty bone, and bold emprise; Part wield their arms, part curb the foaming steed, Single, or in array of battle ranged, Both horse and foot; nor idly mustering stood: One way a band select from forage drives A herd of beeves, fair oxen and fair kine, From a fat meadow-ground; or fleecy flock, Ewes and their bleating lambs, over the plain, Their booty; scarce with life the shepherds fly, But call in aid, which makes a bloody fray: With cruel tournament the squadrons join; Where cattle pastured late, now scattered lies With carcasses and arms the ensanguined field, Deserted. Others to a city strong Lay siege, encamped, by battery, scale, and mine, Assaulting: others from the wall defend, With dart and javelin, stones, and sulphurous fire: On each hand slaughter, and gigantic deeds. In other part the sceptred heralds call To council, in the city gates: anon

Gray-headed men and grave, with warriors mixed,
Assemble, and harangues are heard; but soon,
In factious opposition; till at last
Of middle age one rising, eminent
In wise deport, spake much of right and wrong,
Of justice, of religion, truth, and peace,
And judgment from above: him old and young
Exploded, and had seized with violent hands,
Had not a cloud descending snatched him thence,
Unseen amid the throng: so violence
Proceeded, and oppression, and sword-law,
Through all the plain; and refuge none was found.

Adam was all in tears, and to his guide
Lamenting turned full sad: "Oh, what are these?
Death's ministers, not men! who thus deal death
Inhumanly to men, and multiply
Ten thousandfold the sin of him who slew
His brother; for of whom such massacre
Make they, but of their brethren, men of men?
But who was that just man, whom had not Heaven
Rescued, had in his righteousness been lost?"

To whom thus Michael: "These are the product Of those ill-mated marriages thou saw'st; Where good with bad were matched, who of themselves Abhor to join; and by imprudence mixed, Produce prodigious births of body or mind. Such were these giants, men of high renown; For in those days might only shall be admired, And valour and heroic virtue called: To overcome in battle, and subdue Nations, and bring home spoils with infinite Man-slaughter, shall be held the highest pitch Of human glory; and for glory done Of triumph, to be styled great conquerors, Patrons of mankind, gods, and sons of gods; Destroyers rightlier called, and plagues of men! Thus fame shall be achieved, renown on earth; And what most merits fame in silence hid. But he, the seventh from thee, whom thou beheld'st The only righteous in a world perverse,

And therefore hated, therefore so beset
With foes, for daring single to be just,
And utter odious truth that God would come
To judge them with his saints; him the Most High,
Rapt in a balmy cloud with wingéd steeds,
Did, as thou saw'st, receive, to walk with God
High in salvation and the climes of bliss,
Exempt from death, to show thee what reward
Awaits the good, the rest what punishment;
Which now direct thine eyes, and soon behold."

He looked, and saw the face of things quite changed: The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar: All now was turned to jollity and game, To luxury and riot, feast and dance, Marrying or prostituting, as befell, Rape or adultery, where passing fair Allured them; thence from cups to civil broils. At length a reverend sire among them came, And of their doings great dislike declared, And testified against their ways: he oft Frequented their assemblies, whereso met, Triumphs, or festivals; and to them preached Conversion and repentance, as to souls In prison, under judgments imminent; But all in vain! Which when he saw, he ceased Contending, and removed his tents far off: Then, from the mountain hewing timber tall, Began to build a vessel of huge bulk. Measured by cubit, length, and breadth, and height; Smeared round with pitch; and in the side a door Contrived; and of provisions laid in large, For man and beast: when lo! a wonder strange! Of every beast, and bird, and insect small, Came sevens, and pairs; and entered in, as taught Their order: last the sire, and his three sons With their four wives: and God made fast the door. Meanwhile the south-wind rose, and, with black wings Wide hovering, all the clouds together drove From under Heaven: the hills, to their supply, Vapour and exhalation, dusk and moist,

Sent up amain. And now the thickened sky Like a dark ceiling stood: down rushed the rain Impetuous; and continued, till the earth No more was seen: the floating vessel swum Uplifted, and secure with beaked prow Rode tilting o'er the waves: all dwellings else Flood overwhelmed, and them with all their pomp Deep under water rolled: sea covered sea, Sea without shore: and in their palaces, Where luxury late reigned, sea-monsters whelped And stabled: of mankind (so numerous late) All left, in one small bottom swum embarked.

How didst thou grieve then, Adam! to behold The end of all thy offspring; end so sad, Depopulation! Thee another flood, Of tears and sorrow a flood, thee also drowned, And sunk thee as thy sons; till, gently reared By the angel, on thy feet thou stood'st at last, Though comfortless; as when a father mourns His children, all in view destroyed at once; And scarce to the angel uttered'st thus thy plaint:

"Oh, visions ill foreseen! Better had I Lived ignorant of future! so had borne My part of evil only; each day's lot Enough to bear: those now, that were dispensed The burden of many ages, on me light At once, by my foreknowledge gaining birth Abortive, to torment me, ere their being, With thought that they must be. Let no man seek Henceforth to be foretold what shall befall Him or his children; evil he may be sure, Which neither his foreknowing can prevent; And he the future evil shall, no less In apprehension than in substance, feel, Grievous to bear. But that care now is past; Man is not whom to warn: those few escaped Famine and anguish will at last consume Wandering that watery desert: I had hope When violence was ceased, and war on earth, All would have then gone well, peace would have crowned With length of happy days the race of man; But I was far deceived; for now I see Peace to corrupt no less than war to waste. How comes it thus? unfold, celestial guide, And whether here the race of man will end."

To whom thus Michael: "Those whom last thou saw'st In triumph and luxurious wealth, are they First seen in acts of prowess eminent And great exploits, but of true virtue void; Who having spilt much blood, and done much waste, Subduing nations, and achieved thereby Fame in the world, high titles, and rich prev. Shall change their course to pleasure, ease, and sloth, Surfeit and lust, till wantonness and pride Raise out of friendship hostile deeds in peace. The conquered also, and enslaved by war, Shall with their freedom lost all virtue lose And fear of God, from whom their piety feigned In sharp contést of battle found no aid Against invaders; therefore cooled in zeal, Thenceforth shall practise how to live secure. Worldly or dissolute, on what their lords Shall leave them to enjoy; for the earth shall bear More than enough, that temperance may be tried: So all shall turn degenerate, all depraved; Justice and temperance, truth and faith, forgot; One man except, the only son of light In a dark age, against example good, Against allurement, custom, and a world Offended; fearless of reproach and scorn, Or violence, he of their wicked ways Shall them admonish, and before them set The paths of righteousness, how much more safe, And full of peace denouncing wrath to come On their impenitence; and shall return Of them derided, but of God observed, The one just man alive; by his command Shall build a wondrous ark, as thou beheld'st, To save himself and household from amidst A world devote to universal wreck.

No sooner he with them of man and beast-Select for life shall in the ark be lodged. And sheltered round, but all the cataracts Of Heaven set open on the earth shall pour Rain day and night; all fountains of the deep Broke up, shall heave the ocean to usurp Beyond all bounds, till inundation rise Above the highest hills: then shall this mount Of Paradise by might of waves be moved Out of his place, pushed by the hornéd flood, With all his verdure spoiled, and trees adrift, Down the great river to the opening gulf, And there take root an island salt and bare, The haunt of seals, and ores, and sea-mews' clang: To teach thee that God attributes to place No sanctity, if none be thither brought By men who there frequent, or therein dwell. And now what further shall ensue, behold." He looked, and saw the ark hull on the flood, Which now abated; for the clouds were fled, Driven by a keen north-wind, that blowing dry, Wrinkled the face of deluge, as decayed; And the clear sun on his wide watery glass Gazed hot, and of the fresh wave largely drew, As after thirst, which made their flowing shrink From standing lake to tripping ebb, that stole With soft foot towards the deep, who now had stopped His sluices, as the Heaven his windows shut. The ark no more now floats, but seems on ground, Fast on the top of some high mountain fixed. And now the tops of hills as rocks appear; With clamour thence the rapid currents drive Towards the retreating sea their furious tide. Forthwith from out the ark a raven flies, And, after him, the surer messenger, A dove sent forth once and again to spy Green tree or ground whereon his foot may light: The second time returning, in his bill An olive-leaf he brings, pacific sign: Anon dry ground appears, and from his ark

The ancient sire descends with all his train; Then with uplifted hands, and eyes devout, Grateful to Heaven, over his head beholds A dewy cloud, and in the cloud a bow Conspicuous with three listed colours gay, Betokening peace from God, and covenant new. Whereat the heart of Adam, erst so sad, Greatly rejoiced, and thus his joy broke forth:

"O thou who future things canst represent
As present! heavenly instructor! I revive
At this last sight, assured that man shall live
With all the creatures, and their seed preserve.
Far less I now lament for one whole world
Of wicked sons destroyed, than I rejoice
For one man found so perfect and so just,
That God vouchsafes to raise another world
From him, and all his anger to forget.
But say, what mean those coloured streaks in Heaven
Distended, as the brow of God appeased?
Or serve they as a flowery verge to bind
The fluid skirts of that same watery cloud,
Lest it again dissolve and shower the earth?"

To whom the archangel: "Dexterously thou aim'st; So willingly doth God remit his ire, Though late repenting him of man depraved, Grieved at his heart when looking down he saw The whole earth filled with violence, and all flesh Corrupting each their way; yet, those removed, Such grace shall one just man find in his sight, That he relents, not to blot out mankind, And makes a covenant never to destroy The earth again by flood, nor let the sea Surpass his bounds, nor rain to drown the world With man therein or beast; but when he brings Over the earth a cloud, will therein set His triple-coloured bow, whereon to look, And call to mind his covenant : day and night, Seed-time and harvest, heat and hoary frost, Shall hold their course, till fire purge all things new, Both Heaven and earth, wherein the just shall dwell."

BOOK XII.

THE ARGUMENT.

The angel Michael continues from the flood to relate what shall succeed; then, in the mention of Abraham, comes by degrees to explain who that seed of the woman shall be, which was promised Adam and Eve in the fall; his incarnation, death, resurrection, and ascension; the state of the church till his second coming. Adam, greatly satisfied and recomforted by these relations and promises, descends the hill with Michael; wakens Eve, who all this while had slept, but with gentle dreams composed to quietness of mind and submission. Michael in either hand leads them out of Paradise, the fiery sword waving behind them, and the cherubim taking their stations to guard the place.

As one who in his journey bates at noon, Though bent on speed, so here the archangel paused Betwixt the world destroyed and world restored, If Adam aught perhaps might interpose: Then with transition sweet new speech resumes: "Thus thou hast seen one world begin and end; And man as from a second stock proceed. Much thou hast yet to see, but I perceive Thy mortal sight to fail; objects divine Must needs impair and weary human sense: Henceforth what is to come I will relate, Thou, therefore, give due audience, and attend. This second source of men, while yet but few, And while the dread of judgment past remains Fresh in their minds, fearing the Deity, With some regard to what is just and right Shall lead their lives, and multiply apace, Labouring the soil, and reaping plenteous crop, Corn, wine, and oil; and from the herd or flock, Oft sacrificing bullock, lamb, or kid, With large wine-offerings poured, and sacred feast, Shall spend their days in joy unblamed, and dwell

Long time in peace by families and tribes Under paternal rule: till one shall rise Of proud ambitious heart, who, not content With fair equality, fraternal state, Will arrogate dominion undeserved Over his brethren, and quite dispossess Concord and law of nature from the earth, Hunting (and men, not beasts, shall be his game) With war and hostile snare such as refuse Subjection to his empire tyrannous: A mighty hunter thence he shall be styled Before the Lord, as in despite of Heaven. Or from Heaven claiming second sovranty; And from rebellion shall derive his name, Though of rebellion others he accuse. He with a crew, whom like ambition joins With him or under him to tyrannize, Marching from Eden towards the west, shall find The plain, wherein a black bituminous gurge Boils out from under ground, the mouth of Hell: Of brick, and of that stuff, they east to build A city and tower, whose top may reach to Heaven; And get themselves a name, lest, far dispersed In foreign lands, their memory be lost. Regardless whether good or evil fame. But God, who oft descends to visit men Unseen, and through their habitations walks To mark their doings, them beholding soon, Comes down to see their city, ere the tower Obstruct Heaven-towers, and in derision sets Upon their tongues a various spirit to rase Quite out their native language, and instead To sow a jangling noise of words unknown: Forthwith a hideous gabble rises loud Among the builders; each to other calls Not understood, till hoarse, and all in rage, As mocked they storm; great laughter was in Heaven, And looking down, to see the hubbub strange, And hear the din; thus was the building left Ridiculous, and the work Confusion named."

Whereto thus Adam, fatherly displeased: "O execrable son! so to aspire Above his brethren, to himself assuming Authority usurped, from God not given; He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl, Dominion absolute; that right we hold By his donation; but man over men He made not lord; such title to himself Reserving, human left from human free. But this usurper his encroachment proud Stays not on man; to God his tower intends Siege and defiance. Wretched man! what food Will he convey up thither to sustain Himself and his rash army, where thin air Above the clouds, will pine his entrails gross, And famish him of breath, if not of bread?" To whom thus Michael: "Justly thou abhorr'st That son, who on the quiet state of men Such trouble brought, affecting to subdue Rational liberty; yet know withal, Since thy original lapse, true liberty Is lost, which always with right reason dwells Twinned, and from her hath no dividual being: Reason in man obscured, or not obeyed, Immediately inordinate desires And upstart passions eatch the government From reason, and to servitude reduce Therefore, since he permits Man, till then free. Within himself unworthy powers to reign Over free reason, God, in judgment just, Subjects him from without to violent lords, Who oft as undeservedly enthral His outward freedom: tyranny must be, Though to the tyrant thereby no excuse. Yet sometimes nations will decline so low From virtue, which is reason, that no wrong, But justice, and some fatal curse annexed,

Deprives them of their outward liberty, Their inward lost: witness the irreverent son Of him who built the ark, who for the shame

Done to his father, heard this heavy curse, Servant of servants,' on his vicious race. Thus will this latter, as the former world, Still tend from bad to worse, till God at last, Wearied with their iniquities, withdraw His presence from among them, and avert His holy eyes; resolving from thenceforth To leave them to their own polluted ways; And one peculiar nation to select From all the rest, of whom to be invoked, A nation from one faithful man to spring. Him, on this side Euphrates vet residing, Bred up in idol worship (Oh, that men-Canst thou believe ?- should be so stupid grown, While yet the patriarch lived who 'scaped the flood, As to forsake the living God, and fall To worship their own work in wood and stone For gods!), yet him God the Most High vouchsafes To call by vision, from his father's house, His kindred, and false gods, into a land Which He will show him, and from him will raise A mighty nation; and upon him shower His benediction so, that in his seed All nations shall be blest: he straight obeys, Not knowing to what land, yet firm believes. I see him (but thon canst not), with what faith He leaves his gods, his friends, and native soil, Ur of Chaldea, passing now the ford To Haran; after him a cumbrous train Of herds, and flocks, and numerous servitude; Not wandering poor, but trusting all his wealth With God, who called him in a land unknown. Canaan he now attains: I see his tents Pitched about Sichem, and the neighbouring plain Of Moreh; there, by promise, he recieves Gift to his progeny of all that land, From Hamath northward to the desert south (Things by their names I call, though yet unnamed) From Hermon east to the great western sea; Mount Hermon, youder sea; each place behold

In prospect, as I point them; on the shore Mount Carmel; here the double-founted stream, Jordan, true limit eastward: but his sons Shall dwell to Senir, that long ridge of hills. This ponder, that all nations of the earth Shall in his seed be blessed: by that seed Is meant thy great Deliverer, who shall bruise The serpent's head; whereof to thee anon Plaintier shall be revealed. This patriarch blest. Whom faithful Abraham due time shall call, A son, and of his son a grandchild, leaves; Like him in faith, in wisdom, and renown. The grandchild, with twelve sons increased, departs From Canaan, to a land hereafter called Egypt, divided by the river Nile: See where it flows, disgorging at seven mouths -Into the sea. To sojourn in that land He comes, invited by a younger son In time of dearth; a son, whose worthy deeds Raise him to be the second in that realm Of Pharaoh: there he dies, and leaves his race Growing into a nation; and, now grown, Suspected to a sequent king, who seeks To stop their overgrowth, as inmate guests Too numerous; whence of guests he makes them slaves Inhospitably; and kills their infant males: Till by two brethren (these two brethren call Moses and Aaron) sent from God to claim His people from enthralment, they return With glory, and spoil, back to their promised land. But first the lawless tyrant, who denies To know their God, or message to regard, Must be compelled by signs, and judgments dire; To bised unshed the rivers must be turned; Frogs, lice, and flies, must all his palace fill With loathed intrusion, and fill all the land; His cattle must of rot and murrain die; Botches and blains must all his flesh emboss, And all his people; thunder mixed with hail, Hail mixed with fire, must rend the Egyptian sky,

And wheel on the earth, devouring where it rolls What it devours not, herb, or fruit, or grain, A darksome cloud of locusts swarming down Must eat, and on the ground leave nothing green; Darkness must overshadow all his bounds, Palpable darkness, and blot out three days: Last, with one midnight-stroke, all the first-born Of Egypt must lie dead. Thus with ten wounds The river-dragon tamed at length submits To let his sojourners depart, and oft Humbles his stubborn heart, but still, as ice More hardened after thaw: till in his rage Pursuing whom he late dismissed, the sea Swallows him with his host, but them lets pass, As on dry land, between two crystal walls, Awed by the rod of Moses so to stand Divided, till his rescued gain their shore: Such wondrous power God to his saint will lend. Though present in his angel, who shall go Before them in a cloud, and pillar of fire (By day a cloud, by night a pillar of fire), To guide them in their journey, and remove Behind them, while the obdurate king pursues. All night he will pursue; but his approach Darkness defends between, till morning watch; Then through the fiery pillar, and the cloud, God looking forth will trouble all his host, And craze their chariot-wheels: when, by command, Moses once more his potent rod extends Over the sea; the sea his rod obeys; On their embattled ranks the waves return, And overwhelm their war. The race elect, Safe towards Canaan, from the shore advance Through the wild desert; not the readiest way, Lest, entering on the Canaanite alarmed, War terrify them inexpert, and fear Return them back to Egypt, choosing rather Inglorious life with servitude; for life To noble and ignoble is more sweet Untrained in arms, where rashness leads not on.

This also shall they gain by their delay In the wide wilderness: there they shall found Their government, and their great senate choose Through the twelve tribes, to rule by laws ordained. God from the mount of Sinai (whose gray top Shall tremble, he descending) will himself In thunder, lightning, and loud trumpets' sound, Ordain them laws; part, such as appertain To civil justice, part, religious rites Of sacrifice; informing them, by types And shadows, of that destined Seed to bruise The serpent, by what means he shall achieve Mankind's deliverance: but the voice of God To mortal ear is dreadful; they beseech That Moses might report to them his will, And terror cease: he grants what they besought. Instructed that to God is no access Without Mediator, whose high office now Moses in figure bears, to introduce One greater, of whose day he shall foretell; And all the prophets in their age the times Of great Messiah shall sing. Thus laws and riter Established, such delight hath God in men Obedient to his will, that he vouchsafes Among them to set up his tabernacle, The Holy One with mortal men to dwell. By his prescript a sanctuary is framed Of cedar, overlaid with gold; therein An ark, and in the ark his testimony, The records of his covenant; over these A mercy-seat of gold, between the wings Of two bright cherubim; before him burn Seven lamps, as in a zodiac representing The heavenly fires; over the tent a cloud Shall rest by day, a fiery gleam by night, Save when they journey: and at length they come, Conducted by his angel, to the land Promised to Abraham and his seed. The rest Were long to tell; how many battles fought; How many kings destroyed, and kingdoms won;

Or how the sun shall in mid-heaven stand still A day entire, and night's due course adjourn, Man's voice commanding, 'Sun, in Gibeon stand, And thou, moon, in the vale of Ajalon, Till Israel overcome!' so called the third From Abraham, son of Isaae; and from him His whole descent, who thus shall Canaan win."

Here Adam interposed: "O sent from Heaven, Enlight'ner of my darkness! gracious things Thou hast revealed; those chiefly, which concern Just Abraham and his seed: now first I find Mine eyes true opening, and my heart much eased, Erewhile perplexed with thoughts what would become Of me and all mankind; but now I see His day, in whom all nations shall be blest, Favour unmerited by me, who sought Forbidden knowledge by forbidden means. This yet I apprehend not, why to those Among whom God will deign to dwell on earth So many and so various laws are given; So many laws argue so many sins Among them; how can God with such reside?"

To whom thus Michael: "Doubt not but that sin Will reign among them, as of thee begot; And therefore was law given them to evince Their natural pravity, by stirring up Sin against law to fight: that when they see Law can discover sin, but not remove, Save by those shadowy expiations weak, The blood of bulls and goats, they may conclude Some blood more precious must be paid for man, Just for unjust, that in such righteousness, To them by faith imputed, they may find Justification towards God, and peace Of conscience, which the law by ceremonies Cannot appease, nor man the moral part Perform; and, not performing, cannot live. So law appears imperfect, and but given With purpose to resign them in full time Up to a better covenant; disciplined

From shadowy types to truth; from flesh to spirit; From imposition of strict laws to free Acceptance of large grace; from servile fear To filial; works of law to works of faith. And therefore shall not Moses, though of God Highly beloved, being but the minister Of law, his people into Canaan lead; But Joshua, whom the Gentiles Jesus call. His name and office bearing, who shall quell The adversary serpent, and bring back Through the world's wilderness long-wandered man Safe to eternal Paradise of rest. Meanwhile they, in their earthly Canaan placed, Long time shall dwell and prosper, but when sins National interrupt their public peace, Provoking God to raise them enemies; From whom as oft he saves them penitent, By judges first, then under kings; of whom The second, both for piety renowned And puissant deeds, a promise shall receive Irrevocable, that his regal throne For ever shall endure; the like shall sing All prophecy, that of the royal stock Of David (so I name this king) shall rise A son, the woman's seed to thee foretold, Foretold to Abraham, as in whom shall trust All nations; and to kings foretold, of kings The last; for of his reign shall be no end. But first, a long succession must ensue, And his next son, for wealth and wisdom famed, The clouded ark of God, till then in tents Wandering, shall in a glorious temple enshrine. Such follow him as shall be registered, Part good, part bad, of bad the longer scroll, Whose foul idolatries, and other faults Heaped to the popular sum, will so incense God, as to leave them, and expose their land, Their city, his temple, and his holy ark, With all his sacred things, a scorn and prey To that proud city, whose high walls thou saw'st

Left in confusion, Babylon thence called. There in captivity he lets them dwell The space of seventy years, then brings them back, Remembering mercy, and his covenant sworn To David, 'stablished as the days of Heaven. Returned from Babylon by leave of kings, Their lords, whom God disposed, the house of God They first re-edify, and for a while In mean estate live moderate; till, grown In wealth and multitude, factious they grow; But first among the priests dissension springs; Men who attend the altar, and should most Endeavour peace: their strife pollution brings Upon the temple itself: at last they seize The sceptre, and regard not David's sons, Then lose it to a stranger, that the true Anointed King, Messiah, might be born Barred of his right; yet at his birth a star, Unseen before in Heaven, proclaims him come, And guides the eastern sages, who inquire His place, to offer incense, myrrh, and gold: His place of birth a solemn angel tells To simple shepherds, keeping watch by night; They gladly thither haste, and by a quire Of squadroned angels hear his carol sung. A virgin is his mother, but his sire The power of the Most High; he shall ascend The throne hereditary, and bound his reign With earth's wide bounds, his glory with the Heavens."

He ceased, discerning Adam with such joy Surcharged, as had like grief been dewed in tears, Without the vent of words, which these he breathed:

"O prophet of glad tidings! finisher
Of utmost hope! now clear I understand
What oft my steadiest thoughts have searched in vain;
Why our great expectation should be called
'The seed of woman.' Virgin mother, hail!
High in the love of Heaven! yet from my loins
Thou shalt proceed, and from thy womb the Son
Of God Most High; so God with man unites.

Needs must the serpent now his capital bruise Expect with mortal pain: say where and when Their fight, what stroke shall bruise the victor's heel."

To whom thus Michael: "Dream not of their fight As of a duel, or the local wounds Of head or heel: not therefore joins the Son Manhood to Godhead, with more strength to foil Thy enemy; nor so is overcome Satan, whose fall from Heaven, a deadlier bruise, Disabled not to give thee thy death's wound: Which he, who comes thy Saviour, shall re-cure, Not by destroying Satan, but his works In thee and in thy seed: nor can this be, But by fulfilling that which thou didst want. Obedience to the law of God, imposed On penalty of death, and suffering death, The penalty to thy transgression due, And due to theirs which out of thine will grow: So only can high justice rest appaid. The law of God exact he shall fulfil Both by obedience and by love, though love Alone fulfil the law; thy punishment He shall endure by coming in the flesh To a reproachful life and cursed death, Proclaiming life to all who shall believe In his redemption, and that his obedience Imputed becomes theirs by faith, his merits To save them, not their own, though legal, works. For this he shall live hated, be blasphemed, Seized on by force, judged, and to death condemned A shameful and accursed; nailed to the cross By his own nation; slain for bringing life: But to the cross he nails thy enemies, The law that is against thee, and the sins Of all mankind, with him there crucified, Never to hurt them more who rightly trust In this his satisfaction: so he dies, But soon revives; death over him no power Shall long usurp; ere the third dawning light Return, the stars of morn shall see him rise

Out of his grave, fresh as the dawning light, Thy ransom paid, which man from death redeems, His death for man, as many as offered life Neglect not, and the benefit embrace By faith not void of works: this God-like act Annuls thy doom, the death thou shouldst have died In sin for ever lost from life; this act Shall bruise the head of Satan, crush his strength, Defeating sin and death, his two main arms, And fix far deeper in his head their stings Than temporal death shall bruise the victor's heel, Or theirs whom he redeems, a death like sleep, A gentle wafting to immortal life. Nor after resurrection shall he stay Longer on earth than certain times to appear To his disciples, men who in his life Still followed him; to them shall leave in charge To teach all nations what of him they learned And his salvation, them who shall believe, Baptizing in the profluent stream, the sign Of washing them from guilt of sin to life Pure, and in mind prepared, if so befall, For death, like that which the Redeemer died. All nations they shall teach; for, from that day, Not only to the sons of Abraham's loins Salvation shall be preached, but to the sons Of Abraham's faith wherever through the world; So in his seed all nations shall be blest. Then to the Heaven of Heavens he shall ascend With victory, triumphing through the air Over his foes and thine; there shall surprise The serpent, prince of air, and drag in chains Through all his realm, and there confounded leave; Then enter into glory, and resume His seat at God's right hand, exalted high Above all names in Heaven; and thence shall come, When this world's dissolution shall be ripe, With glory and power to judge both quick and dead, To judge the unfaithful dead, but to reward His faithful, and receive them into bliss,

Whether in Heaven or earth; for then the earth Shall all be Paradise, far happier place Than this of Eden, and far happier days."

So spake the archangel Michael; then paused, As at the world's great period; and our sire, Replete with joy and wonder, thus replied:

"Oh, goodness infinite! goodness immense! That all this good of evil shall produce, And evil turn to good; more wonderful Than that which by creation first brought forth Light out of darkness; full of doubt I stand, Whether I should repent me now of sin By me done and occasioned, or rejoice Much more, that much more good thereof shall spring; To God more glory, more good-will to men From God, and over wrath grace shall abound. But say, if our Deliverer up to Heaven Must reascend, what will betide the few His faithful, left among the unfaithful herd, The enemies of truth? Who then shall guide His people? who defend? Will they not deal Worse with his followers than with him they dealt?"

"Be sure they will," said the angel; "but from Heaven He to his own a Comforter will send, The promise of the Father, who shall dwell His Spirit within them, and the law of faith Working through love, upon their hearts shall write, To guide them in all truth, and also arm With spiritual armour, able to resist Satan's assaults, and quench his fiery darts: What man can do against them, not afraid, Though to the death; against such cruelties With inward consolations recompensed, And oft supported so as shall amaze Their proudest persecutors; for the Spirit, Poured first on his apostles, whom he sends To evangelize the nations, then on all Baptized, shall them with wondrous gifts endue To speak all tongues, and do all miracles,

As did their Lord before them. Thus they win

Great numbers of each nation to receive With joy the tidings brought from Heaven: at length Their ministry performed, and race well run, Their doctrine and their story written left, They die; but in their room, as they forewarn, Wolves shall succeed for teachers, grievous wolves, Who all the sacred mysteries of Heaven To their own vile advantages shall turn Of lucre and ambition, and the truth With superstitions and traditions taint Left only in those written records pure, Though not but by the Spirit understood. Then shall they seek to avail themselves of names, Places, and titles, and with these to join Secular power, though feigning still to act By spiritual, to themselves appropriating The Spirit of God, promised alike and given To all believers; and from that pretence, Spiritual laws by carnal power shall force On every conscience; laws which none shall find Left them enrolled, or what the Spirit within Shall on the heart engrave. What will they then But force the Spirit of grace itself, and bind His consort liberty? what, but unbuild His living temples, built by faith to stand, Their own faith, not another's? for on earth Who against faith and conscience can be heard Infallible? yet many will presume: Whence heavy persecution shall arise On all who in the worship persevere Of spirit and truth; the rest, far greater part, Will deem in outward rites and specious forms Religion satisfied; truth shall retire Bestruck with slanderous darts, and works of faith Rarely be found: so shall the world go on, To good malignant, to bad men benign, Under her own weight groaning, till the day Appear of respiration to the just, And vengeance to the wicked, at return Of him so lately promised to thy aid.

The woman's Seed, obscurely then foretold, Now amplier known thy Saviour and thy Lord, Last in the clouds from Heaven to be revealed In glory of the Father, to dissolve Satan with his perverted world, then raise From the conflagrant mass, purged and refined, New heavens, new earth, ages of endless date Founded in righteousness and peace and love, To bring forth fruits, joy, and eternal bliss."

He ended; and thus Adam last replied: "How soon hath thy prediction, seer blest, Measured this transient world, the race of time, Till time stand fixed! Beyond is all abyss, Eternity, whose end no eye can reach. Greatly instructed, I shall hence depart, Greatly in peace of thought, and have my fill Of knowledge, what this vessel can contain; Beyond which was my folly to aspire. Henceforth I learn that to obey is best, And love with fear the only God, to walk As in his presence, ever to observe His providence, and on him sole depend, Merciful over all his works, with good Still overcoming evil, and by small Accomplishing great things; by things deemed weak Subverting worldly strong; and worldly wise By simply meek: that suffering for truth's sake Is fortitude to highest victory, And to the faithful death the gate of life: Taught this by his example, whom I now Acknowledge my Redcemer ever blest."

To whom thus also the angel last replied:
"This having learned, thou hast attained the sum
Of wisdom: hope no higher, though all the stars
Thou knew'st by name, and all the ethereal powers,
All secrets of the deep, all nature's works,
Or works of God in Heaven, air, earth, or sea,
And all the riches of this world enjoyedst,
And all the rule, one empire; only add
Deeds to thy knowledge answerable; add faith,

Add virtue, patience, temperance; add love, By name to come called charity, the soul Of all the rest: then wilt thou not be loth To leave this Paradise, but shalt possess A Paradise within thee, happier far. Let us descend now, therefore, from this top Of speculation; for the hour precise Exacts our parting hence; and see, the guards, By me encamped on yonder hill, expect Their motion, at whose front a flaming sword, In signal of remove, waves fiercely round; We may no longer stay: go, waken Eve; Her also I with gentle dreams have calmed Portending good, and all her spirits composed To meek submission: thou at season fit Let her with thee partake what thou hast heard. Chiefly what may concern her faith to know, The great deliverance by her seed to come (For by the woman's seed) on all mankind: That ye may live, which will be many days, Both in one faith unanimous, though sad, With cause, for evils past, yet much more cheered With meditation on the happy end."

He ended, and they both descend the hill; Descended, Adam to the bower where Eve Lay sleeping ran before, but found her waked; And thus with words not sad she him received:

And thus with words not sad she him received:

"Whence thou return'st, and whither went'st, I know;
For God is also in sleep; and dreams advise,
Which he hath sent propitious, some great good
Presaging, since, with sorrow and heart's distress,
Wearied I fell asleep: but now lead on;
In me is no delay; with thee to go,
Is to stay here; without thee here to stay,
Is to go hence unwilling; thou to me
Art all things under Heaven, all places thou,
Who for my wilful crime art banished hence.
This further consolation, yet secure,
I carry hence; though all by me is lost,
Such favour I unworthy am youchsafed.

By me the promised Seed shall all restore!" So spake our mother Eve, and Adam heard, Well pleased, but answered not; for now too nigh The archangel stood, and from the other hill To their fixed station, all in bright array, The cherubim descended; on the ground, Gliding metéorous, as evening mist, Risen from a river, o'er the marish glides, And gathers ground fast at the labourer's heel. Homeward returning. High in front advanced. The brandished sword of God before them blazed. Fierce as a comet, which with torrid heat, And vapour as the Lybian air adust, Began to parch that temperate clime; whereat, In either hand the hastening angel caught Our lingering parents, and to the eastern gate Led them direct, and down the cliff as fast To the subjected plain; then disappeared. They, looking back, all the eastern side beheld Of Paradise, so late their happy seat, Waved over by that flaming brand; the gate, With dreadful faces thronged, and fiery arms: Some natural tears they dropped, but wiped them soon: The world was all before them, where to choose Their place of rest, and Providence their guide; They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow. Through Eden took their solitary way.

PARADISE REGAINED.

BOOK I.

ARGUMENT.

THE subject proposed. Invocation of the Holy Spirit. John baptizing at the river Jordan. Jesus coming there, is baptized; and is attested by the descent of the Holy Ghost, and by a voice from heaven, to be the Son of God. Satan, who is present, flies up into the regions of the air; where, summoning his infernal council, he acquaints them with his apprehensions that Jesus is that seed of the woman destined to destroy all their power, and points out to them the necessity of bringing the matter to proof, and of attempting to counteract and defeat the person from whom they have so much to dread. This office he undertakes, and sets out on his enterprise. In the meantime, God, in the assembly of holy angels, declares that he has given up his Son to be tempted by Satan; but foretells that the tempter shall be completely defeated by him: upon which the angels sing a hymn of triumph. Jesus is led up by the Spirit into the wilderness, while he is meditating on the commencement of his great office of Saviour of mankind. He narrates, in a soliloquy, what divine and philanthropic impulses he had felt from his early youth, and how his mother, Mary, had acquainted him with the circumstances of his birth, and informed him that he was no less a person than the Son of God; to which he adds what his own reflections and inquiries had supplied, in confirmation of this great truth, and particularly dwells on the recent attestation of it at the river Jordan. Our lord passes forty days, fasting, in the wilderness; where the wild beasts become harmless in his presence. Satan now appears under the form of an old peasant, and enters into discourse with our Lord. Jesus replies. Satan rejoins with a description of the difficulty of supporting life in the wilderness; and entreats Jesus, if he be really the Son of God, to manifest his divine power by changing some of the stones into bread. Jesus reproves him, and, at the same time, tells him that he knows who he is. Satan avows himself, and offers an artful apology. Our blessed Lord severely reprimands him, and confutes every part of his justification. Satan still endeavours to justify himself; and, professing his admiration of Jesus, and his regard for virtue, requests to be permitted at a future time to hear more of his conversation; but is answered, that this must be as he shall find permission from above. Satan then disappears, and the book closes with a short description of night coming on in the desert.

I, who erewhile the happy garden sung, By one man's disobedience lost, now sing Recovered Paradise to all mankind, By one man's firm obedience fully tried Through all temptation, and the tempter foiled In all his wiles, defeated and repulsed, And Eden raised in the waste wilderness.

Thou Spirit, who ledst this glorious eremite
Into the desert, his victorious field,
Against the spiritual foe, and brought him thence,
By proof the undoubted Son of God, inspire,
As thou art wont, my prompted song, else mute,
And bear through height or depth of nature's bounds,
With prosperous wing full summed, to tell of deeds
Above heroic, though in secret done,

And unrecorded left through many an age; Worthy to have not remained so long unsung.

Now had the great proclaimer, with a voice More awful than the sound of trumpet, cried Repentance, and Heaven's kingdom nigh at hand, To all baptized: to his great baptism flocked With awe the regions round, and with them came From Nazareth the son of Joseph deemed To the flood Jordan, came as then obscure, Unmarked, unknown; but him the Baptist soon Descried, divinely warned, and witness bore As to his worthier, and would have resigned To him his heavenly office, nor was long His witness unconfirmed: on him baptized Heaven opened, and, in likeness of a dove, The Spirit descended, while the Father's voice From Heaven pronounced him his beloved Son. That heard the adversary, who, roving still About the world, at that assembly famed Would not be last; and with the voice divine Nigh thunder-struck, the exalted Man, to whom Such high attest was given, a while surveyed With wonder; then, with envy fraught and rage, Flies to his place, nor rests, but in mid air To council summons all his mighty peers, Within thick clouds, and dark, tenfold involved. A gloomy consistory; and them amidst, With looks aghast and sad, he thus bespake:

"O ancient powers of air and this wide world, For much more willingly I mention air, This our old conquest, than remember Hell, Our hated habitation; well ye know How many ages, as the years of men, This universe we have possessed, and ruled, In manner at our will, the affairs of earth, Since Adam and his facile consort Eve Lost Paradise, deceived by me, though since With dread attending when that fatal wound Shall be inflicted by the seed of Eve Upon my head: long the decrees of Heaven Delay, for longest time to him is short; And now, too soon for us, the circling hours This dreaded time have compassed, wherein we Must bide the stroke of that long-threatened wound, At least, if so we can, and by the head Broken be not intended all our power To be infringed, our freedom and our being, In this fair empire won of earth and air: For this ill news I bring, the woman's seed Destined to this, is late of woman born: His birth to our just fear gave no small cause, But his growth now to youth's full flower, displaying All virtue, grace, and wisdom to achieve Things highest, greatest, multiplies my fear. Before him a great prophet, to proclaim His coming, is sent harbinger, who all Invites, and in the consecrated stream Pretends to wash off sin, and fit them so Purified to receive him pure, or, rather, To do him honour as their king; all come, And he himself among them was baptized, Not thence to be more pure, but to receive The testimony of Heaven, that who he is Thenceforth the nations may not doubt; I saw The prophet do him reverence; on him rising Out of the water, Heaven above the clouds Unfold her crystal doors; thence on his head A perfect dove descend, whate'er it meant;

And out of Heaven the sovran voice I heard, 'This is my Son beloved, in him am pleased.' His mother then is mortal, but his Sire He who obtains the monarchy of Heaven, And what will he not do to advance his Son? His first-begot we know, and sore have felt, When his fierce thunder drove us to the deep; Who this is we must learn, for man he seems In all his lineaments, though in his face The glimpses of his Father's glory shine. Ye see our danger on the utmost edge Of hazard, which admits no long debate, But must with something sudden be opposed (Not force, but well-couched fraud, well woven snares) Ere in the head of nations he appear, Their king, their leader, and supreme on earth. I, when no other durst, sole undertook The dismal expedition to find out And ruin Adam, and the exploit performed Successfully; a calmer voyage now Will waft me; and the way found prosperous once. Induces best to hope of like success."

He ended; and his words impression left Of much amazement to the infernal crew, Distracted and surprised with deep dismay At these sad tidings; but no time was then For long indulgence to their fears or grief: Unanimous they all commit the care And management of this main enterprise To him their great dictator, whose attempt At first against mankind so well had thrived In Adam's overthrow, and led their march From Hell's deep-vaulted den to dwell in light. Regents, and potentates, and kings, yea gods, Of many a pleasant realm and province wide. So to the coast of Jordan he directs His easy steps, girded with snaky wiles. Where he might likeliest find this new-declared. This man of men, attested Son of God, Temptation and all guile on him to try:

So to subvert whom he suspected raised To end his reign on earth, so long enjoyed; But, contrary, unweeting he fulfilled The purposed counsel pre-ordained and fixed Of the Most High, who, in full frequence bright Of angels, thus to Gabriel smiling spake:

"Gabriel, this day by proof thou shalt behold, Thou and all angels conversant on earth With man or men's affairs, how I begin To verify that solemn message, late On which I sent thee to the virgin pure In Galilee, that she should bear a Son Great in renown, and called the Son of God; Then told'st her, doubting how these things could be To her a virgin, that on her should come The Holy Ghost, and the power of the Highest O'ershadow her: this man born and now up-grown, To show him worthy of his birth divine And high prediction, henceforth I expose To Satan; let him tempt and now assay His utmost subtlety, because he boasts And vaunts of his great cunning to the throng Of his apostacy: he might have learned Less overweening, since he failed in Job, Whose constant perseverance overcame Whate'er his cruel malice could invent. He now shall know I can produce a man Of female seed, far abler to resist All his solicitations, and at length All his vast force, and drive him back to Hell, Winning by conquest what the first man lost By fallacy surprised. But first I mean To exercise him in the wilderness; There he shall first lay down the rudiments Of his great warfare, ere I send him forth To conquer Sin and Death, the two grand foes, By humiliation and strong sufferance: His weakness shall o'ercome Satanic strength, And all the world, and mass of sinful flesh; That all the angels and ethereal powers,

They now, and men hereafter, may discern, From what consummate virtue I have chose This perfect man, by merit called my Son, To earn salvation for the sons of men."

So spake the eternal Father, and all Heaven Admiring stood a space; then into hymns Burst forth, and in celestial measures moved, Circling the throne and singing, while the hand Sung with the voice; and this the argument:

"Victory and triumph to the Son of God Now entering his great duel, not of arms, But to vanquish by wisdom hellish wiles. The father knows the Son; therefore secure Ventures his filial virtue, though untried, Against whate'er may tempt, whate'er seduce, Allure, or terrify, or undermine.

Be frustrate, all ye stratagems of Hell, And devilish machinations come to nought."

So they in Heaven their odes and vigils tuned:
Meanwhile the Son of God, who yet some days
Lodged in Bethabara where John baptized,
Musing, and much revolving in his breast,
How best the mighty work he might begin
Of Saviour to mankind, and which way first
Publish his Godlike office now mature,
One day forth walked alone, the Spirit leading,
And his deep thoughts, the better to converse
With solitude, till far from track of men,
Thought following thought, and step by step led on,
He entered now the bordering desert wild,
And, with dark shades and rocks environed round,
His holy meditations thus pursued:

"Oh, what a multitude of thoughts at once Awakened in me swarm, while I consider What from within I feel myself, and hear What from without comes often to my ears, Ill sorting with my present state compared! When I was yet a child, no childish play To me was pleasing: all my mind was set Serious to learn and know, and thence to do

What might be public good; myself I thought Born to that end, born to promote all truth, All righteous things: therefore, above my years, The law of God I read, and found it sweet; Made it my whole delight; and in it grew To such perfection, that ere yet my age Had measured twice six years, at our great feast I went into the temple, there to hear The teachers of our law, and to propose What might improve my knowledge or their own, And was admired by all. Yet this not all To which my spirit aspired: victorious deeds Flamed in my heart, heroic acts; one while To rescue Israel from the Roman yoke, Then to subdue and quell o'er all the earth Brute violence and proud tyrannic power, Till truth were freed, and equity restored; Yet held it more humane, more heavenly, first By winning words to conquer willing hearts, And make persuasion do the work of fear; At least to try, and teach the erring soul, Not wilfully misdoing, but unaware Misled; the stubborn only to subdue. These growing thoughts my mother soon perceiving, By words at times cast forth, inly rejoiced, And said to me apart, 'High are thy thoughts, O Son, but nourish them, and let them soar To what height sacred virtue and true worth Can raise them, though above example high; By matchless deeds express thy matchless sire. For know, thou art no son of mortal man; Though men esteem thee low of parentage, Thy father is the eternal king, who rules All heaven and earth, angels and sons of men: A messenger from God foretold thy birth Conceived in me a virgin; he foretold Thou shouldst be great, and sit on David's throne, And of thy kingdom there should be no end. At thy nativity, a glorious quire Of angels, in the fields of Bethlehem, sung

To shepherds, watching at their folds by night, And told them the Messiah now was born, Where they might see him, and to thee they came. Directed to the manger where thou lay'st, For in the inn was left no better room: A star, not seen before, in heaven appearing, Guided the wise men thither from the east, To honour thee with incense, myrrh, and gold; By whose bright course led on they found the place, Affirming it thy star, new-graven in heaven, By which they knew the King of Israel born. Just Simeon and prophetic Anna, warn'd By vision, found thee in the temple, and spake, Before the altar and the vested priest, Like things of thee to all that present stood.' "This having heard, straight I again revolved The law and prophets, searching what was writ Concerning the Messiah, to our scribes Known partly, and soon found of whom they spake I am; this chiefly, that my way must lie Through many a hard assay, even to the death, Ere I the promised kingdom can attain, Or work redemption for mankind, whose sins Full weight must be transferr'd upon my head, Yet, neither thus dishearten'd, nor dismay'd, The time prefix'd I waited; when, behold The Baptist, (of whose birth I oft had heard, Not knew by sight,) now come, who was to come Before Messiah, and his way prepare! I, as all others, to his baptism came, Which I believed was from above; but he Straight knew me, and with loudest voice proclaim'd Me him, (for it was shewn him so from heaven,) Me him, whose harbinger he was; and first Refused on me his baptism to confer, As much his greater, and was hardly won: But, as I rose out of the laving stream, Heaven open'd her eternal doors, from whence The Spirit descended on me like a dove;

And last, the sum of all, my Father's voice,

Audibly heard from heaven, pronounced me his. Me his beloved Son, in whom alone He was well pleased; by which I knew the time Now full, that I no more should live obscure; But openly begin, as best becomes The authority which I derived from heaven. And now by some strong motion I am led Into this wilderness, to what intent I learn not yet; perhaps I need not know, For what concerns my knowledge God reveals."

So spake our Morning Star, then in his rise, And, looking round, on every side beheld A pathless desert, dusk with horrid shades; The way he came not having mark'd return Was difficult, by human steps untrod; And he still on was led, but with such thoughts Accompanied of things past and to come Lodged in his breast, as well might recommend Such solitude before choicest society. Full forty days he pass'd, whether on hill Sometimes, anon in shady vale, each night Under the covert of some ancient oak, Or cedar, to defend him from the dew, Or harbour'd in one cave, is not reveal'd; Nor tasted human food nor hunger felt, Till those days ended; hunger'd then, at last, Among wild beasts: they at his sight grew mild, Nor sleeping him, nor waking, harm'd his walk. The fiery serpent fled, and noxious worm, The lion and fierce tiger glared aloof. But now an aged man in rural weeds, Following, as seemed, the quest of some stray ewe. Or withered sticks to gather, which might serve Against a winter's day when winds blow keen, To warm him wet returned from field at eve, He saw approach, who first with curious eye Perused him, then with words thus uttered spake:

"Sir, what ill chance hath brought thee to this place, So far from path or road of men, who pass In troop or caravan? for single none

Durst ever, who returned, and dropped not here His carcass, pined with hunger and with drouth. I ask the rather, and the more admire, For that to me thou seem'st the man, whom late Our new baptizing prophet at the ford Of Jordan honoured so, and called thee Son Of God; I saw and heard, for we sometimes Who dwell this wild, constrained by want, come forth To town or village nigh (nighest is far) Where aught we hear, and curious are to hear, What happens new; fame also finds us out."

To whom the Son of God: "Who brought me hither,

Will bring me hence; no other guide I seek."

"By miracle he may," replied the swain,

"What other way I see not, for we here
Live on tough roots and stubs, to thirst inured

More than the camel, and to drink go far,

Men to much misery and hardship born:
But if thou be the Son of God, command

That out of these hard stones be made thee bread;
So shalt thou save thyself and us relieve

With food, whereof we wretched seldom taste."

He ended, and the Son of God replied:
"Think'st thou such force in bread? Is it not written
(For I discern thee other than thou seem'st)
Man lives not by bread only, but each word
Proceeding from the mouth of God, who fed
Our fathers here with manna? In the mount
Moses was forty days, nor ate nor drank;
And forty days Elijah without food
Wandered this barren waste; the same I now:

Why dost thou then suggest to me distrust, Knowing who I am, as I know who thou art?"

Whom thus answered the arch-fiend now undisguised:
"Tis true, I am that spirit unfortunate,
Who, leagued with millions more in rash revolt,
Kept not my happy station, but was driven
With them from bliss to the bottomless deep;
Yet to that hideous place not so confined
By rigour unconniving, but that oft

Leaving my dolorous prison I enjoy Large liberty to round this globe of earth, Or range in the air, nor from the Heaven of Heavens Hath he excluded my resort sometimes. I came among the sons of God, when he Gave up into my hands Uzzéan Job To prove him, and illustrate his high worth; And when to all his angels he proposed To draw the proud king Ahab into fraud That he might fall in Ramoth, they demurring, I undertook that office, and the tongues Of all his flattering prophets glibbed with lies To his destruction, as I had in charge; For what he bids I do. Though I have lost Much lustre of my native brightness, lost To be beloved of God. I have not lost To love, at least contemplate and admire What I see excellent in good, or fair, Or virtuous, I should so have lost all sense. What can be then less in me than desire To see thee and approach thee, whom I know Declared the Son of God, to hear attent Thy wisdom, and behold thy Godlike deeds? Men generally think me such a foe To all mankind: why should I? they to me Never did wrong or violence; by them I lost not what I lost, rather by them I gained what I have gained, and with them dwell Copartner in these regions of the world, If not disposer; lend them oft my aid, Oft my advice by presages and signs, And answers, oracles, portents, and dreams, Whereby they may direct their future life. Envy they say excites me thus to gain Companions of my misery and woe. At first it may be; but long since with woe Nearer acquainted, now I feel by proof, That fellowship in pain divides not smart, Nor lightens aught each man's peculiar load. Small consolation then, were men adjoined:

This wounds me most (what can it less?) that man, Man fallen shall be restored; I never more." To whom our Saviour sternly thus replied: "Deservedly thou griev'st, composed of lies From the beginning, and in lies wilt end; Who boast'st release from Hell, and leave to come Into the Heaven of Heavens. Thou com'st indeed, As a poor miserable captive thrall Comes to the place where he before had sat Among the prime in splendour, now deposed, Ejected, emptied, gazed, unpited, shunned, A spectacle of ruin or of scorn To all the host of Heaven: the happy place Imparts to thee no happiness, no joy, Rather inflames thy torment, representing Lost bliss to thee no more communicable. So never more in Hell than when in Heaven. But thou art serviceable to Heaven's King. Wilt thou impute to obedience what thy fear Extorts, or pleasure to do ill excites? What but thy malice moved thee to misdeem Of righteous Job, then cruelly to afflict him With all inflictions? but his patience won. The other service was thy chosen task, To be a liar in four hundred mouths: For lying is thy sustenance, thy food. Yet thou pretend'st to truth; all oracles By thee are given, and what confessed more true Among the nations? that hath been thy craft, By mixing somewhat true to vent more lies. But what have been thy answers, what but dark, Ambiguous, and with double sense deluding, Which they who asked have seldom understood, And not well understood as good not known? Whoever, by consulting at thy shrine, Returned the wiser, or the more instruct To fly or follow, what concerned him most, And run not sooner to his fatal snare? For God hath justly given the nations up To thy delusions; justly, since they fell

Idolatrous: but when his purpose is Among them to declare his providence To thee not known, whence hast thou then thy truth But from him or his angels president In every province? who, themselves disdaining To approach thy temples, give thee in command What to the smallest tittle thou shalt say To thy adorers; thou with trembling fear, Or like a fawning parasite, obey'st; Then to thyself ascrib'st the truth foretold. But this thy glory shall be soon retrenched; No more shalt thou by oracling abuse The Gentiles: henceforth oracles are ceased, And thou no more with pomp and sacrifice Shalt be inquired at Delphos or elsewhere, At least in vain, for they shall find thee mute. God hath now sent his living oracle Into the world to teach his final will, And sends his Spirit of truth henceforth to dwell In pious hearts, an inward oracle To all truth requisite for men to know."

So spake our Saviour; but the subtle fiend, Though inly stung with anger and disdain, Dissembled, and this answer smooth returned:

"Sharply thou hast insisted on rebuke, And urged me hard with doings, which not will But misery hath wrested from me: where Easily canst thou find one miserable, And not enforced oft-times to part fromt ruth; If it may stand him more in stead to lie, Say and unsay, feign, flatter, or abjure? But thou art placed above me, thou art Lord; From thee I can and must submiss endure Check or reproof, and glad to 'scape so quit. Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk, Smooth on the tongue discoursed, pleasing to the ear, And tuneable as sylvan pipe or song; What wonder then if I delight to hear Her dictates from thy mouth? Most men admire Virtue, who follow not her lore: permit me

To hear thee when I come (since no man comes),
And talk at least, though I despair to attain.
Thy Father, who is holy, wise, and pure,
Suffers the hypocrite or atheous priest
To tread his sacred courts, and minister
About his altar, handling holy things,
Praying or vowing, and vouchsafed his voice
To Balaam reprobate, a prophet yet
Inspired; disdain not such access to me."

To whom our Saviour with unaltered brow:
"Thy coming hither, though I know thy scope,
I bid not or forbid; do as thou find'st
Permission from above; thou canst not more."

He added not; and Satan, bowing low
His gray dissimulation, disappeared
Into thin air diffused: for now began
Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
The desert; fowls in their clay nests were couched;
And now wild beasts came forth the woods to roam

BOOK II.

ARGUMENT.

THE disciples of Jesus, uneasy at his long absence, reason amongst themselves concerning it Mary also gives vent to her maternal anxiety; in the expression of which she recapitulates many circumstances respecting the birth and early life of her Son. Satan again meets his infernal council, reports the bad success of his first temptation of our blessed Lord, and calls upon them for counsel and assistance. Belial proposes the tempting of Jesus with women. Satan rebukes Belial for his dissoluteness, charging on him all the profligacy of that kind ascribed by the poets to the heathen gods, and rejects his proposal as in no respect likely to succeed. Satan then suggests other modes of temptation, particularly proposing to avail himself of the circumstance of our Lord's hungering: and, taking a band of chosen spirits with him, returns to resume his enterprise. Jesus hungers in the desert. Night comes on; the manner in which our Saviour passes the night is described. Morning advances. Satan again appears to Jesus, and, after expressing wonder that he should be so entirely neglected in the wilderness, where others had been miraculously fed, tempts him with a sumptuous banquet of the most luxurious kind. This he rejects, and the banquet vanishes. Satan, finding our Lord not to be assailed on the ground of appetite, tempts Him again by offering him riches, as the means of acquiring power: this Jesus also rejects, producing many instances of great actions performed by persons under virtuous poverty, and specifying the danger of riches, and the cares and pains inseparable from power and greatness.

MEANWHILE the new-baptized, who yet remained At Jordan with the Baptist, and had seen Him whom they heard so late expressly called Jesus Messiah, Son of God declared, And on that high authority had believed, And with him talked, and with him lodged, I mean Andrew and Simon, famous after known, With others, though in holy writ not named, Now missing him their joy so lately found, So lately found, and so abruptly gone, Began to doubt, and doubted many days, And as the days increased, increased their doubt: Sometimes they thought he might be only shown,

And for a time caught up to God, as once Moses was in the mount, and missing long; And the great Thisbite, who on fiery wheels Rode up to Heaven, yet once again to come. Therefore as those young prophets then with care Sought lost Elijah, so in each place these Nigh to Bethabara; in Jericho The city of palms, Ænon, and Salem old, Machærus, and each town or city walled On this side the broad lake Genezaret, Or in Peræa; but returned in vain. Then on the bank of Jordan, by a creek, Where winds with reeds and osiers whispering play Plain fishermen, no greater men them call, Close in a cottage low together got, Their unexpected loss and plaints out-breathed:

"Alas, from what high hope to what relapse Unlooked for are we fallen! our eyes beheld Messiah certainly now come, so long Expected of our fathers; we have heard His words, his wisdom full of grace and truth; Now, now, for sure, deliverance is at hand, The kingdom shall to Israel be restored: Thus we rejoiced, but soon our joy is turned Into perplexity and new amaze: For whither is he gone? what accident Hath rapt him from us? will he now retire After appearance, and again prolong Our expectation? God of Israel, Send thy Messiah forth, the time is come; Behold the kings of the earth how they oppress Thy chosen, to what height their power unjust They have exalted, and behind them cast All fear of thee; arise and vindicate Thy glory, free thy people from their yoke. But let us wait; thus far he hath performed, Sent his Anointed, and to us revealed him, By his great prophet, pointed at and shown In public, and with him we have conversed; Let us be glad of this, and all our fears

Lay on his providence; he will not fail,
Nor will withdraw him now, nor will recall,
Mock us with his blest sight, then snatch him hence.
Soon we shall see our hope, our joy return."

Thus they out of their plaints new hope resume
To find whom at the first they found unsought:
But to his mother, Mary, when she saw
Others returned from baptism, not her son,
Nor left at Jordan, tidings of him none,
Within her breast though calm, her breast though pure,
Motherly cares and fears got head, and raised
Some troubled thoughts, which she in sighs thus clad:

"Oh what avails me now that honour high To have conceived of God, or that salute, 'Hail, highly favoured, among women blest!' While I to sorrows am no less advanced, And fears as eminent, above the lot Of other women, by the birth I bore, In such a season born when scarce a shed Could be obtained to shelter him or me From the bleak air; a stable was our warmth, A manger his; yet soon enforced to fly Thence into Egypt, till the murderous king Were dead, who sought his life, and missing filled With infant blood the streets of Bethlehem; From Egypt home returned, in Nazareth Hath been our dwelling many years; his life Private, unactive, calm, contemplative, Little suspicious to any king; but now Full grown to man, acknowledged, as I hear, By John the Baptist, and in public shown, Son owned from Heaven by his Father's voice; I looked for some great change; to honour? no. But trouble, as old Simeon plain foretold, That to the fall and rising he should be Of many in Israel, and to a sign Spoken against, that through my very soul A sword shall pierce: this is my favoured lot, My exaltation to affections high. Afflicted I may be, it seems, and blest;

I will not argue that, nor will repine.
But where delays he now? some great intent
Conceals him: when twelve years he scarce had seen,
I lost him, but so found, as well I saw
He could not lose himself; but went about
His Father's business; what he meant I mused,
Since understand; much more his absence now
Thus long to some great purpose he obscures.
But I to wait with patience am inured:
My heart hath been a storehouse long of things
And sayings laid up, portending strange events."

Thus Mary pondering oft, and oft to mind Recalling what remarkably had passed Since first her salutation heard, with thoughts Meekly composed awaited the fulfilling: The while her son tracing the desert wild. Sole but with holiest meditations fed, Into himself descended, and at once All his great work to come before him set; How to begin, how to accomplish best His end of being on earth, and mission high: For Satan, with sly preface to return, Had left him vacant, and with speed was gone Up to the middle region of thick air, Where all his potentates in council sat; There without sign of boast, or sign of joy, Solicitous and blank he thus began:

"Princes, Heaven's ancient sons, ethereal thrones, Demonian spirits now, from the element Each of his reign allotted, rightlier called Powers of fire, air, water, and earth beneath, So may we hold our place, and these mild seats Without new trouble; such an enemy Is risen to invade us, who no less Threatens than our expulsion down to Hell; I, as I undertook, and with the vote Consenting in full frequence was empowered, Have found him, viewed him, tasted him, but find Far other labour to be undergone Than when I dealt with Adam first of men,

Though Adam by his wife's allurement fell,
However to this man inferior far,
If he be man by mother's side at least,
With more than human gifts from Heaven adorned,
Perfections absolute, graces divine,
And amplitude of mind to greatest deeds.
Therefore I am returned, lest confidence
Of my success with Eve in Paradise
Deceive ye to persuasion over-sure
Of like succeeding here: I summon all
Rather to be in readiness, with hand
Or counsel to assist; lest I who erst
Thought none my equal, now be over-matched."
So spake the old serpent doubting, and from all

So spake the old serpent doubting, and from all With clamour was assured their utmost aid At his command; when from amidst them rose Belial, the dissolutest spirit that fell, The sensualest, and, after Asmodai, The fleshliest incubus, and thus advised:

"Set women in his eye, and in his walk, Among daughters of men the fairest found; Many are in each region passing fair As the noon sky; more like to goddesses Than mortal creatures, graceful and discreet, Expert in amorous arts, enchanting tongues Persuasive, virgin majesty with mild And sweet allayed, yet terrible to approach, Skilled to retire, and in retiring draw Hearts after them tangled in amorous nets. Such object hath the power to soften and tame Severest temper, smooth the rugged'st brow, Enerve, and with voluptuous hope dissolve, Draw out with credulous desire, and lead At will the manliest, resolutest breast, As the magnetic hardest iron draws. Women, when nothing else, beguiled the heart Of wisest Solomon, and made him build, And reade him bow to the gods of his wives."

To whom quick answer Satan thus returned: Behal, in much uneven scale thou weigh'st

All others by thyself; because of old Thou thyself doat'dst on womankind, admiring Their shape, their colour, and attractive grace; None are, thou think'st, but taken with such toys. Before the flood, thou, with thy lusty crew, False titled sons of God, roaming the earth, Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men, And coupled with them, and begot a race. Have we not seen, or by relation heard, In courts and regal chambers how thou lurk'st, In wood or grove by mossy fountain side, In valley or green meadow, to waylay Some beauty rare, Calisto, Clymene, Daphne, or Semele, Antiopa, Or Amymone, Syrinx, many more Too long, then lay'st thy 'scapes on names adored; Apollo, Neptune, Jupiter, or Pan, Satyr, or Faun, or Sylvan? But these haunts Delight not all; among the sons of men, How many have with a smile made small account Of beauty and her lures, easily scorned All her assaults, on worthier things intent! Remember that Pellean conqueror, A youth, how all the beauties of the east He slightly viewed, and slightly overpassed; How he surnamed of Africa dismissed In his prime youth the fair Iberian maid For Solomon, he lived at ease, and full Of honour, wealth, high fare, aimed not beyond Higher design than to enjoy his state; Thence to the bait of women lay exposed: But he whom weattempt is wiser far Than Solomon, of more exalted mind, Made and set wholly on the accomplishment Of greatest things: what woman will you find, Though of this age the wonder and the fame, On whom his leisure will vouchsafe an eye Of fond desire? or should she confident, As sitting queen adored on beauty's throne, Descend with all her winning charms begirt

To enamour, as the zone of Venus once Wrought that effect on Jove, so fables tell; How would one look from his majestic brow Seated as on the top of virtue's hill, Discountenance her despised, and put to rout All her array; her female pride deject, Or turn to reverent awe! for beauty stands In the admiration only of weak minds Led captive; cease to admire, and all her plumes Fall flat and shrink into a trivial toy, At every sudden slighting quite abashed; Therefore, with manlier objects we must try His constancy, with such as have more show Of worth, of honour, glory, and popular praise; Rocks whereon greatest men have oftest wrecked: Or that which only seems to satisfy Lawful desires of nature, not beyond; And now I know he hungers where no food Is to be found, in the wide wilderness: The rest commit to me; I shall let pass No advantage, and his strength as oft assay." He ceased; and heard their grant in loud acclaim;

He ceased; and heard their grant in loud acclaim;
Then forthwith to him takes a chosen band
Of spirits likest to himself in guile
To be at hand, and at his beek appear,
If cause were to unfold some active scene
Of various persons, each to know his part;
Then to the desert takes with these his flight;
Where still from shade to shade the Son of God,
After forty days' fasting had remained,

Now hungering first, and to himself thus said:

"Where will this end? Four times ten days I've passed

Wandering this woody maze, and human food Nor tasted, nor had appetite; that fast To virtue I impute not, or count part Of what I suffer here: if nature need not, Or God support nature without repast, Though needing, what praise is it to endure? But now I feel I hunger, which declares

Nature hath need of what she asks; yet God Can satisfy that need some other way, Though hunger still remain: so it remain Without this body's wasting, I content me, And from the sting of famine fear no harm: Nor mind it, fed with better thoughts that feed Me hungering more to do my Father's will."

It was the hour of night, when thus the Son Communed in silent walk, then laid him down Under the hospitable covert nigh Of trees thick interwoven; there he slept, And dreamed as appetite is wont to dream, Of meats and drinks, nature's refreshment sweet; Him thought, he by the brook of Cherith stood, And saw the ravens with their horny beaks Food to Elijah bringing even and morn,

Though ravenous, taught to abstain from what they brought:

He saw the prophet also how he fled Into the desert, and how there he slept Under a juniper; then how, awaked, He found his supper on the coals prepared, And by the angel was bid rise and eat, And eat the second time after repose, The strength whereof sufficed him forty days: Sometimes that with Elijah he partook, Or as a guest with Daniel at his pulse. Thus wore out night; and now the herald lark Left his ground-nest, high towering to descry The morn's approach, and greet her with his song: As lightly from his grassy couch up rose Our Saviour, and found all was but a dream; Fasting he went to sleep, and fasting waked. Up to a hill anon his steps he reared, From whose high top to ken the prospect round. If cottage were in view, sheep-cote, or herd; But cottage, herd, or sheep-cote none he saw. Only in a bottom saw a pleasant grove, With chaunt of tuneful birds resounding loud: Thither he bent his way, determined there

To rest at noon, and entered soon the shade
High roofed, and walks beneath, and alleys brown,
That opened in the midst a woody scene;
Nature's own work it seemed (nature taught art),
And to a superstitious eye the haunt
Of wood-gods and wood-nymphs; he viewed it round,
When suddenly a man before him stood,
Not rustic as before, but seemlier clad,
As one in city, or court, or palace bred,
And with fair speech these words to him addressed:

"With granted leave officious I return,
But much more wonder that the Son of God
In this wild solitude so long should bide
Of all things destitute, and well I know,
Not without hunger. Others of some note,
As story tells, have trod this wilderness:
The fugitive bond-woman with her son,
Outcast Nebaioth, yet found here relief
By a providing angel; all the race
Of Israel here had famished, had not God
Rained from Heaven manna: and that prophet bold,
Native of Thebez, wandering here was fed
Twice by a voice inviting him to eat:
Of thee these forty days none hath regard,
Forty and more deserted here indeed."

To whom thus Jesus: "What conclud'st thou hence?

They all had need; I, as thou seest, have none."

"How hast thou hunger then?" Satan replied.

"Tell me, if food were now before thee set,
Wouldst thou not eat?" "Thereafter as I like
The giver," answered Jesus. "Why should that Cause thy refusal?" said the subtle fiend.

"Hast thou not right to all created things?
Owe not all creatures by just right to thee
Duty and service, not to stay till bid,
But tender all their power? Nor mention I
Neats by the law unclean, or offered first
To idols, those young Daniel could refuse;
Nor proffered by an enemy, though who
Would scruple that, with want oppressed? Behold,

Nature ashamed, or better to express, Troubled that thou shouldst hunger, hath purveyed From all the elements her choicest store To treat thee as beseems, and as her Lord With honour; only deign to sit and eat."

He spake no dream, for as his words had end, Our Saviour lifting up his eyes, beheld In ample space, under the broadest shade. A table richly spread, in regal mode, With dishes piled, and meats of noblest sort And savour, beasts of chase, or fowl of game, In pastry built, or from the spit, or boiled, Gris-amber-steamed; all fish from sea or shore, Freshet, or purling brook, of shell or fin, And exquisitest name, for which was drained Pontus, and Lucrine Bay, and Afric coast. Alas! how simple, to these cates compared. Was that crude apple that diverted Eve, And at a stately sideboard by the wine That fragrant smell diffused, in order stood Tall stripking youths rich clad, of fairer hue Than Ganymed or Hylas; distant more Under the trees now tripped, now solemn stood, Nymphs of Diana's train, and Naiades With fruits and flowers from Amalthea's horn, And ladies of the Hesperides, that seemed Fairer than feigned of old, or fabled since Of fairy damsels met in forest wide By knights of Logres, or of Lyones, Lancelot, or Pelleas, or Pellenore: And all the while harmonious airs were heard Of chiming strings, or charming pipes, and winds Of gentlest gale Arabian odours fanned From their soft wings, and Flora's earliest smells. Such was the splendour; and the tempter now His invitation earnestly renewed:

"What doubts the Son of God to sit and eat? These are not fruits forbidden; no interdict Defends the touching of these viands pure; Their taste no knowledge works, at least of evil,

But life preserves, destroys life's enemy, Hunger, with sweet restorative delight. All these are spirits of air, and woods, and springs, Thy gentle ministers, who come to pay Thee homage, and acknowledge thee their Lord: What doubt'st thou, Son of God? Sit down and eat."

To whom thus Jesus temperately replied:
"Said'st thou not that to all things I had right?
And who withholds my power that right to use?
Shall I receive by gift what of my own,
When and where likes me best, I can command?
I can at will, doubt not, as soon as thou,
Command a table in this wilderness,
And call swift flights of angels ministrant
Arrayed in glory on my cup to attend:
Why shouldst thou then obtrude this diligence
In vain, where no acceptance it can find?
And with my hunger what hast thou to do?
Thy pompous delicacies I contemn,
And count thy specious gifts no gifts, but guiles."

To whom thus answered Satan malcontent:

"That I have also power to give thou seest;
If of that power I bring thee voluntary
What I might have bestowed on whom I pleased,
And rather opportunely in this place
Chose to impart to thy apparent need;
Why shouldst thou not accept it? But I see
What I can do or offer is suspect;
Of these things others quickly will dispose,
Whose pains have earned the far fet spoil." With that Both table and provision vanished quite
With sound of harpies' wings, and talons heard;
Only the importune tempter still remained,
And with these words his temptation pursued:

"By hunger, that each other creature tames,

Thou art not to be harmed, therefore not moved; Thy temperance invincible besides, For no allurement yields to appetite, And all thy heart is set on high designs, High actions; but wherewith to be achieved?

Great acts require great means of enterprise; Thou art unknown, unfriended, low of birth, A carpenter thy father known, thyself Bred up in poverty and straits at home, Lost in a desert here, and hunger-bit: Which way or from what hope dost thou aspire To greatness? whence authority deriv'st? What followers, what retinue canst thou gain, Or at thy heels the dizzy multitude, Longer than thou canst feed them on thy cost? Money brings honour, friends, conquest, and realms: What raised Antipater the Edomite, And his son Herod placed on Judah's throne (Thy throne), but gold that got him puissant friends? Therefore, if at great things thou wouldst arrive, Get riches first, get wealth, and treasure heap, Not difficult, if thou hearken to me: Riches are mine; fortune is in my hand; They whom I favour thrive in wealth amain, While virtue, valour, wisdom, sit in want." To whom thus Jesus patiently replied: "Yet wealth without these three is impotent To gain dominion, or to keep it gained. Witness those ancient empires of the earth, In height of all their flowing wealth dissolved: But men endued with these have oft attained In lowest poverty to highest deeds: Gideon and Jephtha, and the shepherd lad, Whose offspring on the throne of Judah sat So many ages, and shall yet regain That seat, and reign in Israel without end. Among the heathen (for throughout the world To me is not unknown what hath been done Worthy of memorial), canst thou not remember Quintius, Fabricius, Curius, Regulus? For I esteem those names of men so poor Who could do mighty things, and could contemn Riches though offered from the hand of kings. And what in me seems wanting, but that I May also in this poverty as soon Accomplish what they did, perhaps, and more? Extol not riches, then, the toil of fools, The wise man's cumbrance if not snare, more apt To slacken virtue, and abate her edge, Than prompt her to do aught may merit praise. What if with like aversion I reject Riches and realms; yet not for that a crown, Golden in show, is but a wreath of thorns, Brings dangers, troubles, cares, and sleepless nights To him who wears the regal diadem, When on his shoulders each man's burden lies; For therein stands the office of a king, His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise, That for the public all this weight he bears. Yet he who reigns within himself, and rules Passions, desires, and fears, is more a king; Which every wise and virtuous man attains: And who attains not, ill aspires to rule Cities of men, or headstrong multitudes, Subject himself to anarchy within, Or lawless passions in him which he serves. But to guide nations in the way of truth By saving doctrine, and from error lead To know, and knowing worship God aright, Is yet more kingly; this attracts the soul. Governs the inner man, the nobler part; That other o'er the body only reigns, And oft by force, which to a generous mind So reigning can be no sincere delight. Besides, to give a kingdom hath been thought Greater and nobler done, and to lay down Far more magnanimous than to assume. Riches are needless, then, both for themselves, And for thy reason why they should be sought, To gain a sceptre, oftest better missed."

BOOK III.

ARGUMENT.

SATAN endeavours to awaken in Jesus a passion for glory, by particularising various great actions performed by persons at an early period of life. Our Lord replies, by shewing the vanity of worldly fame, and contrasts with it the true glory of religious patience and virtuous wisdom. Satan justifies the love of glory from the example of God himself, who requires it from all his creatures. Jesus detects the fallacy of this argument, by shewing that, as goodness is the true ground on which glory is due to the great Creator, sinful man can have no right to it. Satan then urges our Lord respecting his claim to the throne of David; he tells him, that the kingdom of Judea, being at that time a province of Rome. cannot be got possession of without much personal exertion on his part, and presses him to lose no time in beginning to reign. Jesus refers him to the time allotted for this, as for all other things; and, after intimating somewhat respecting his own previous sufferings, asks Satan why he should be solicitous for the exaltation of one whose rising was destined to be his fall. Satan replies, that his own desperate state, by excluding all hope, leaves little room for fear; and that, as his own punishment was equally doomed, he is not interested in preventing the reign of one, from whose apparent benevolence he might rather hope for some interference in his favour. Satan, still supposing that the seeming reluctance of Jesus to be thus advanced, might arise from his being unacquainted with the world and its glories, conveys him to the summit of a high mountain, and from thence shews him most of the kingdoms of Asia, pointing out to his notice some extraordinary military preparations of the Parthians to resist the incursions of the Scythians. He then informs our Lord, that he shewed him this purposely, that he might see how necessary military exertions are to retain the possession of kingdoms, as well as to subdue them at first; and advises him to consider how impossible it was to maintain Judea against two such powerful neighbours as the Romans and Parthians, and how necessary it would be to form an alliance with one or other of them. At the same time, he recommends, and engages to secure to him that of the Parthians; and tells him, that by this means his power will be defended from anything that Rome or Cæsar might attempt against it; and that he will be able to extend his glory wide, and especially to accomplish what was particularly necessary to make the throne of Judea really the throne of David, the deliverance and restoration of the ten tribes, still in a state of captivity. Jesus, having briefly noticed the vanity of military efforts, and the weakness of the arm of flesh, says that, when the time comes for ascending his allotted throne, he shall not be slack : he remarks on Satan's extraordinary zeal for the deliverance of the Israelites, to whom he had always shewn himself an enemy, and declares their servitude to be the consequence of their idolatry; but adds, that, at a future time, it may perhaps please God to recall them, and restore them to their liberty and native land.

So spake the Son of God, and Satan stood A while as mute, confounded what to say, What to reply, confuted and convinced Of his weak arguing, all fallacious drift; At length, collecting all his serpent wiles, With soothing words renewed, him thus accosts:

"I see thou know'st what is of use to know, What best to say canst say, to do canst do; Thy actions to thy words accord, thy words To thy large heart give utterance due, thy heart Contains of good, wise, just, the perfect shape. Should kings and nations from thy mouth consult. Thy council would be as the oracle Urim and Thummim, those oraculous gems On Aaron's breast; or tongue of seers old Infallible: or wert thou sought to deeds That might require the array of war, thy skill Of conduct would be such, that all the world Could not sustain thy prowess, or subsist In battle, though against thy few in arms. These godlike virtues wherefore dost thou hide, Affecting private life, or more obscure In savage wilderness? Wherefore deprive All earth her wonder at thy acts, thyself The fame and glory, glory the reward That sole excites to high attempts, the flame Of most erected spirits, most tempered pure Ethereal, who all pleasures else despise, All treasures and all gain esteem as dross, And dignities and powers all but the highest? Thy years are ripe, and over-ripe; the son Of Macedonian Philip had ere these Won Asia, and the throne of Cyrus held At his dispose; young Scipio had brought down The Carthaginian pride; young Pompey quelled The Pontic king, and in triumph had rode. Yet years, and to ripe years judgment mature, Quench not the thirst of glory, but augment. Great Julius, whom now all the world admires, The more he grew in years, the more inflamed

With glory, wept that he had lived so long Inglorious: but thou yet art not too late." To whom our Saviour calmly thus replied: "Thou neither dost persuade me to seek wealth For empire's sake, nor empire to affect For glory's sake, by all thy argument. For what is glory but the blaze of fame, The people's praise, if always praise unmixed? And what the people but a herd confused, A miscellaneous rabble, who extol Things vulgar and, well weighed, scarce worth the praise? They praise, and they admire they know not what, And know not whom, but as one leads the other; And what delight to be by such extolled, To live upon their tongues and be their talk, Of whom to be dispraised were no small praise, His lot who dares be singularly good? The intelligent among them and the wise Are few, and glory scarce of few is raised. This is true glory and renown, when God, Looking on the earth, with approbation marks The just man, and divulges him through Heaven To all his angels, who with true applause Recount his praises: thus he did to Job, When, to extend his fame through Heaven and earth, As thou to thy reproach mayst well remember, He asked thee, 'Hast thou seen my servant Job?' Famous he was in Heaven, on earth less known; Where glory is false glory, attributed To things not glorious, men not worthy of fame. They err who count it glorious to subdue By conquest far and wide, to over-run Large countries, and in fields gr at battles win, Great cities by assault: what do these worthies. But rob and spoil, burn, slaughter, and enslave Peacable nations, neighbouring, or remote, Made captive, yet deserving freedom more Than those their conquerors, who leave behind Nothing but ruin wheresoe'er they rove, And all the flourishing works of peace destroy,

Then swell with pride, and must be titled gods, Great benefactors of mankind, deliverers, Worshipped with temple, priest, and sacrifice One is the son of Jove, of Mars the other; Till conqueror Death discover them scarce men, Rolling in brutish vices, and deformed, Violent or shameful death their due reward. But if there be in glory aught of good, It may by means far different be attained Without ambition, war, or violence; By deeds of peace, by wisdom eminent, By patience, temperance: I mention still Him whom thy wrongs with saintly patience borne Made famous in a land and times obscure; Who names not now with honour patient Job? Poor Socrates (who next more memorable?) By what he taught and suffered for so doing, For truth's sake suffering death unjust, lives now Equal in fame to proudest conquerors. Yet if for fame and glory aught be done, Aught suffered; if young African for fame His wasted country freed from Punic rage, The deed becomes unpraised, the man at least, And loses, though but verbal, his reward. Shall I seek glory, then, as vain men seek, Oft not deserved? I seek not mine, but his Who sent me, and thereby witness whence I am.'

To whom the tempter murmuring thus replied:
"Think not so slight of glory; therein least
Resembling thy great Father: he seeks glory,
And for his glory all things made, all things
Orders and governs; nor content in Heaven
By all his angels glorified, requires
Glory from men, from all men, good or bad,
Wise or unwise, no difference, no exemption;
Above all sacrifice or hallowed gift
Glory he requires, and glory he receives
Promiscuous from all nations, Jew, or Greek,
Or barbarous, nor exception hath declared;
From us, his foes pronounced, glory he exacts."

To whom our Saviour fervently replied: "And reason; since his word all things produced, Though chiefly not for glory as prime end, But to show forth his goodness, and impart His good communicable to every soul Freely; of whom what could be less expect Than glory and benediction, that is, thanks, The slightest, easiest, readiest recompense From them who could return him nothing else, And, not returning that, would likeliest render Contempt instead, dishonour, obloquy? Hard recompense, unsuitable return For so much good, so much beneficence. But why should man seek glory, who of his own Hath nothing, and to whom nothing belongs But condemnation, ignominy, and shame? Who for so many benefits received Turned recreant to God, ingrate and false, And so of all true good himself despoiled; Yet, sacrilegious, to himself would take That which to God alone of right belongs; Yet so much bounty is in God, such grace, That who advance his glory, not their own, Them he himself to glory will advance."

So spake the son of God: and here again Satan had not to answer, but stood struck With guilt of his own sin, for he himself

Insatiable of glory had lost all;

Yet of another plea bethought him soon:

"Of glory, as thou wilt," said he, "so deem,
Worth or not worth the seeking, let it pass:
But to a kingdom thou art born, ordained
To sit upon thy father David's throne;
By mother's side thy father; though thy right
Be now in powerful hands, that will not part
Easily from possession won with arms:
Judea now, and all the promised land,
Reduced a province under Roman yoke,
Obeys Tiberius; nor is always ruled
With temperate sway; oft have they violated

The temple, oft the law with foul affronts, Abominations rather, as did once Antiochus: and think'st thou to regain Thy right by sitting still or thus retiring? So did not Maccabeus: he indeed Retired unto the desert, but with arms: And o'er a mighty king so oft prevailed, That, by strong hand, his family obtained, Though priests, the crown, and David's throne usurped. With Modin and her suburbs once content. If kingdom move thee not, let move thee zeal And duty; zeal and duty are not slow; But on occasion's forelock watchful wait. They themselves rather are occasion best, Zeal of thy Father's house, duty to free Thy country from her heathen servitude; So shalt thou best fulfil, best verify The prophets old, who sung thy endless reign; The happier reign the sooner it begins: Reign then; what canst thou better do the while?" To whom our Saviour answer thus returned: "All things are best fulfilled in their due time, And time there is for all things, Truth hath said: If of my reign prophetic writ hath told, That it shall never end, so when begin The father in his purpose hath decreed, He in whose hand all times and seasons roll. What if he hath decreed that I shall first Be tried in humble state, and things adverse, By tribulations, injuries, insults, Contempts, and scorns, and snares, and violence Suffering, abstaining, quietly expecting, Without distrust or doubt, that he may know What I can suffer, how obey? Who best Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first Well hath obeyed; just trial ere I merit My exaltation without change or end. But what concerns it thee when I begin My everlasting kingdom? why art thou Solicitous? what moves thy inquisition?

Know'st thou not that my rising is thy fall, And my promotion will be thy destruction?" To whom the tempter, inly racked, replied: "Let that come when it comes; all hope is lost Of my reception into grace; what worse? For where no hope is left is left no fear: If there be worse, the expectation more Of worse torments me than the feeling can. I would be at the worst; worst is my port, My harbour, and my ultimate repose, The end I would attain, my final good. My error was my error, and my crime My crime; whatever for itself condemned, And will alike be punished, whether thou Reign or reign not; though to that gentle brow Willingly I could fly, and hope thy reign, From that placid aspéct and meek regard, Rather than aggravate my evil state, Would stand between me and thy Father's ire (Whose ire I dread more than the fire of Hell), A shelter and a kind of shading cool Interposition, as a summer's cloud. If I then to the worst that can be haste, Why move thy feet so slow to what is best, Happiest both to thyself and all the world, That thou who worthiest art shouldst be their king? Perhaps thou linger'st in deep thoughts detained Of the enterprise so hazardous and high; No wonder, for though in thee be united What of perfection can in man be found, Or human nature can receive, consider Thy life hath yet been private, most part spent At home, scarce viewed the Galilean towns, And once a year Jerusalem, few days' Short sojourn; and what thence couldst thou observe? The world thou hast not seen, much less her glory, Empires, and monarchies, and their radiant courts, Best school of best experience, quickest insight In all things that to greatest actions lead. The wisest, unexperienced, will be ever

Timorous and loth, with novice modesty (As he who, seeking asses, found a kingdom). Irresolute, unhardy, unadventurous:
But I will bring thee where thou soon shalt quit Those rudiments, and see before thine eyes
The monarchies of the earth, their pomp and state, Sufficient introduction to inform
Thee, of thyself so apt, in regal arts,
And regal mysteries, that thou mayst know
How best their opposition to withstand."

With that (such power was given him then) he took The Son of God up to a mountain high. It was a mountain at whose verdant feet A spacious plain, out-stretched in circuit wide, Lay pleasant; from his side two rivers flowed. The one winding, the other straight, and left between Fair champain, with less rivers interveined, Then meeting, joined their tribute to the sea: Fertile of corn the glebe, of oil, and wine; With herds the pastures thronged, with flocks the hills: Huge cities and high-towered, that well might seen The seat of mightiest monarchs, and so large The prospect was, that here and there was room For barren desert fountainless and dry. To this high mountain-top the tempter brought Our Saviour, and new train of words began:

"Well have we speeded, and o'er hill and dale, Forest, and field, and flood, temples and towers, Cut shorter many a league; here thou behold'st Assyria and her empire's ancient bounds, Araxes and the Caspian lake, thence on As far as Indus east, Euphrates west, And oft beyond; to south the Persian bay, And inaccessible the Arabian drouth: Here Nineveh, of length within her wall Several days' journey, built by Ninus old, Of that first golden monarchy the seat, And seat of Salmanassar, whose success Israel in long captivity still mourns; There Babylon, the wonder of all tongues,

As ancient, but rebuilt by him who twice Judah and all thy father David's house Led captive, and Jerusalem laid waste, Till Cyrus set them free; Persepolis His city there thou seest, and Bactra there; Ecbatana her structure vast there shows, And Hecatompylos her hundred gates: There Susa by Choaspes, amber stream, The drink of none but kings; of later fame Built by Emathian or by Parthian hands, The great Seleucia, Nisibis, and there Artaxata, Teredon, Ctesiphon, Turning with easy eye thou mayst behold. All these the Parthian, now some ages past, By great Arsaces led, who founded first That empire, under his dominion holds, From the luxurious kings of Antioch won. And just in time thou com'st to have a view Of his great power; for now the Parthian king In Ctesiphon hath gathered all his host Against the Seythian, whose incursions wild Have wasted Sogdiana; to her aid He marches now in haste: see, though from far, His thousands, in what martial equipage They issue forth, steel bows and shafts theirs arms, Of equal dread in flight or in pursuit; All horsemen, in which fight they most excel: See how in warlike muster they appear, In rhombs and wedges, and half-moons, and wings."

He looked, and saw what numbers numberless
The city gates out-poured, light arméd troops
In coats of mail and military pride;
In mail their horses clad, yet fleet and strong,
Prancing theirs riders bore, the flower and choice
Of many provinces from bound to bound;
From Arachosia, from Candaor east,
And Margiana to the Hyrcanian cliffs
Of Caucasus, and dark İberian dales,
From Atropatia and the neighbouring plains
Of Adiabene, Media, and the south

Of Susiana, to Balsara's haven. He saw them in their forms of battle ranged, How quick they wheeled, and flying behind them shot Sharp sleet of arrowy showers against the face Of their pursuers, and overcame by flight; The field all iron cast a gleaming brown: Nor wanted clouds of foot, nor on each horn Cuirassiers all in steel for standing fight. Chariots or elephants indorsed with towers Of archers, nor of labouring pioneers A multitude with spades and axes armed, To lay hills plain, fell woods, or valleys fill. Or where plain was raise hill, or overlay With bridges rivers proud, as with a yoke; Mules after these, camels and dromedaries, And waggons fraught with utensils of war. Such forces met not, nor so wide a camp, When Agrican, with all his northern powers. Besieged Albracca, as romances tell, The city of Gallaphrone, from thence to win The fairest of her sex, Angelica His daughter, sought by many prowest knights. Both Paynim, and the peers of Charlemain. Such and so numerous was their chivalry: At sight whereof the fiend yet more presumed. And to our Saviour thus his words renewed: "That thou mayst know I seek not to engage Thy virtue, and not every way secure On no slight grounds thy safety; hear, and mark To what end I have brought thee hither, and shown All this fair sight: thy kingdom, though foretold By prophet or by angel, unless thou Endeavor, as thy father David did, Thou never shalt obtain: prediction still In all things, and all men, supposes means; Without means used, what it predicts revokes. But say thou wert possessed of David's throne. By free consent of all, none opposite, Samaritan or Jew; how couldst thou hope Long to enjoy it quiet and secure,

Between two such enclosing enemies.

Roman and Parthian? Therefore one of these Thou must make sure thy own: the Parthian first, By my advice, as nearer, and of late Found able by invasion to annoy Thy country, and captive lead away her kings, Antigonus and old Hyrcanus, bound, Maugre the Roman: it shall be my task To render thee the Parthian at dispose; Choose which thou wilt, by conquest or by league. By him thou shalt regain, without him not, That which alone can truly reinstal thee In David's royal seat, his true successor, Deliverance of thy brethren, those ten tribes Whose offspring in his territory yet serve, In Habor, and among the Medes dispersed; Ten sons of Jacob, two of Joseph, lost Thus long from Israel, serving as of old Their fathers in the land of Egypt served, This offer sets before thee to deliver. These if from servitude thou shalt restore To their inheritance, then, nor till then, Thou on the throne of David in full glory, From Egypt to Euphrates, and beyond, Shalt reign, and Rome or Casar not need fear." To whom our Saviour answered thus unmoved: "Much ostentation vain of fleshy arm, And fragile arms, much instrument of war Long in preparing, soon to nothing brought, Before mine eyes thou hast set; and in my ear Vented much policy, and projects deep Of enemies, of aids, battles, and leagues, Plausible to the world, to me worth naught. Means I must use, thou say'st, prediction else Will unpredict and fail me of the throne: My time, I told thee (and that time for thee Were better farthest off), is not yet come; When that comes, think not thou to find me slack On my part aught endeavouring, or to need Thy politic maxims, or that cumbersome Luggage of war there shown me, argument

Of human weakness rather than of strength.

My brethren, as thou call'st them, those ten tribes I must deliver, if I mean to reign David's true heir, and his full sceptre sway To just extent over all Israel's sons. But whence to thee this zeal? Where was it then For Israel, or for David, or his throne, When thou stood'st up his tempter to the pride Of numbering Israel, which cost the lives Of threescore and ten thousand Israelites By three days' pestilence? Such was thy zeal To Israe! then, the same that now to me. As for those captive tribes, themselves were they Who wrought their own captivity; fell off From God to worship calves, the deities Of Egypt; Baal next, and Ashtaroth, And all the idolatries of heathen round, Besides their other worse than heathenish crimes; Nor in the land of their captivity Humbled themselves, or penitent besought The God of their forefathers; but so died Impenitent, and left a race behind Like to themselves, distinguishable scarce From Gentiles, but by circumcision vain. And God with idols in their worship joined. Should I of these the liberty regard, Who, freed, as to their ancient patrimony, Unhumbled, unrepentant, unreformed, Headlong would follow; and to their gods, perhaps. Of Bethel and of Dan? No, let them serve Their enemies, who serve idols with God. Yet he at length, time to himself best known. Remembering Abraham, by some wondrous call May bring them back repentant and sincere, And at their passing cleave the Assyrian flood. While to their native land with joy they haste, As to the Red Sea and Jordan once he cleft, When to the promised land their fathers passed: To his due time and providence I leave them." So spake Israel's true king, and to the fiend

Made answer meet, that made void all his wiles. So fares it when with truth falsehood contends.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

SATAN, persisting in the temptation of our Lord, shews him imperial Rome in its greatest splendour, and tells him that he might, with the greatest ease, expel Tiberius, restore the Romans to their liberty, and make himself master not only of the Roman empire, but, by so doing, of the whole world, and inclusively of the throne of David. Our Lord, in reply, expresses his contempt of grandeur and worldly power, and notices the luxury, vanity, and profligacy of the Romans, declaring how little they merited to be restored to that liberty which they had lost by their misconduct. Satan, now desperate, to enhance the value of his proffered gifts, professes that the only terms on which he will bestow them, are our Saviour's falling down and worshipping him. Our Lord expresses a firm but temperate indignation at such a proposition, and rebukes the tempter. Satan then assumes a new ground of temptation, and, proposing to Jesus the intellectual gratifications of wisdom and knowledge, points out to him the celebrated seat of ancient learning, Athens, its schools, and other various resorts of learned teachers and their disciples. Jesus replies, by shewing the vanity and insufficiency of the boasted heathen philosophy. Satan, irritated at the failure of all his attempts, upbraids the indiscretion of our Saviour in rejecting his offers: and, having foretold the sufferings that our Lord was to undergo, carries him back into the wilderness, and leaves him there. Night comes on: Satan raises a tremendous storm, and attempts farther to alarm Jesus with frightful dreams, and terrific threatening spectres. A calm, bright, beautiful morning succeeds to the horrors of the night. Satan again presents himself to our blessed Lord; and takes occasion, once more, to insult him with an account of the sufferings which he was certainly to undergo This only draws from our Lord a brief rebuke. Satan, now at the height of his desperation, confesses that he had frequently watched Jesus from his birth, purposely to discover if he was the Messiah, and assiduously followed him, in hopes of gaining some advantage over him, which would most effectually prove that he was not really that Divine Person destined to be his "fatal enemy." In this he acknowledges that he has hitherto failed; but still determines to make one more trial. Accordingly he conveys him to the temple at Jerusa 'm; and, placing him on a pointed eminence, requires lim to prove his divinity either by standing there, or easting himself down with safety. Our Lord reproves the tempter, and manifests his own divinity by standing on this dangerous point. Satan, amazed and terrified, instrutly fa'ls, and repairs to his internal compeers to relate the had success of his enterprise Angels convey our blessed Lord to a beautiful valley, and, while they minister to him a repast of celestial food, celebrate his victory in a triumphant hymn.

Perplexed and troubled at his bad success, The tempter stood, nor had what to reply; Discovered in his fraud, thrown from his hope So oft, and the persuasive rhetoric That sleeked his tongue, and won so much on Eve, So little here, nay lost; but Eve was Eve, This far his over-match, who, self-deceived And rash, beforehand had no better weighed The strength he was to cope with, or his own; But as a man who had been matchless held In cunning, over-reached where least he thought, To salve his credit, and for very spite, Still will be tempting him who foils him still, And never cease, though to his shaine the more; Or as a swarm of flies in vintage time, About the wine-press where sweet must is poured, Beat off, returns as oft with humming sound; Or surging waves against a solid rock, Though all to shivers dashed, the assault renew, Vain battery, and in froth or bubbles end; So Satan, whom repulse upon repulse Met ever, and to shameful silence brought, Yet gives not o'er, though desperate of success, And his vain importunity pursues. He brought our Saviour to the western side Of that high mountain, whence he might behold Another plain, long, but in breadth not wide, Washed by the southern sea, and on the north To equal length backed with a ridge of hills, That screened the fruits of the earth and seats of men From cold septentrion blasts; thence in the midst Divided by a river, of whose banks On each side an imperial city stood, With towers and temples proudly elevate On seven small hills, with palaces adorned, Porches and theatres, baths, aqueducts, Statues and trophies, and triumphal arcs, Gardens and groves, presented to his eyes, Above the height of mountains interposed; By what strange parallax, or optic skill

Of vision multiplied through air, or glass Of telescope, were curious to inquire; And now the tempter thus his silence broke: "The city which thou seest no other deem Than great and glorious Rome, queen of the earth So far renowned, and with the spoils enriched Of nations; there the capitol thou seest Above the rest lifting his stately head On the Tarpeian rock, her citadel Impregnable, and there Mount Palatine, The imperial palace, compass huge, and high The structure, skill of noblest architects, With gilded battlements, conspicuous far, Turrets and terraces, and glittering spires. Many a fair edifice besides, more like Houses of gods (so well I have disposed My airy microscope), thou mayst behold Outside and inside both, pillars and roofs, Carved work, the hand of famed artificers In cedar, marble, ivory, or gold. Thence to the gates cast round thine eye, and see What conflux issuing forth, or entering in: Prætors, proconsuls to their provinces Hasting, or on return, in robes of state; Lictors and rods, the ensigns of their power, Legions and cohorts, turms of horse and wings: Or embassies from regions far remote In various habits on the Appian road, Or on the Emilian, some from farthest south; Syene, and where the shadow both way falls, Meroe, Nilotic isle, and more to west, The realm of Bocchus to the Black-moor sea; From the Asian kings, and Parthian among these, From India and the golden Chersonese, And utmost Indian isle, Taprobane, Dusk faces with white silken turbans wreathed. From Gallia, Gades, and the British west, Germans and Scythians, and Sarmatians north Beyond Danubius to the Tauric pool. All nations now to Rome obedience pay,

To Rome's great emperor, whose wide domain In ample territory, wealth and power, Civility of manners, arts and arms, And long renown, thou justly mayst prefer Before the Parthian; these two thrones except, The rest are barbarous, and scarce worth the sight, Shared among petty kings too far removed; These having shown thee, I have shown thee all The kingdoms of the world, and all their glory. This emperor hath no son, and now is old, Old and lascivious, and from Rome retired To Capreæ, an island small but strong On the Campanian shore, with purpose there His horrid lusts in private to enjoy, Committing to a wicked favourite All public cares, and yet of him suspicious, Hated of all, and hating; with what ease, Endued with regal virtues as thou art, Appearing, and beginning noble deeds, Mightst thou expel this monster from his throne Now made a sty, and, in his place ascending, A victor people free from servile yoke? And with my help thou mayst; to me the power Is given, and by that right I give it thee. Aim therefore at no less than all the world. Aim at the highest, without the highest attained Will be for thee no sitting, or not long, On David's throne, be prophesied what will." To whom the Son of God unmoved replied: "Nor doth this grandeur and majestic show Of luxury, though called magnificence, More than of arms before, allure mine eye, Much less my mind; though thou shouldst add to tel Their sumptuous gluttonies, and gorgeous feasts On citron tables, or Atlantic stone (For I have also heard, perhaps have read), Their wines of Setia, Cales, and Falerne, Chios, and Crete, and how they quaff in gold, Crystal, and myrrhine cups, embossed with gems And studs of pearl, to me shouldst tell who thirst

And hunger still. Then embassies thou show'st From a nations far and nigh: what honour that, But tedious waste of time to sit and hear So many hollow compliments and lies. Outlandish flatteries? Then proceed st to talk Of the emperor, how easily subdued, How gloriously; I shall, thou say'st, expel A brutish monster: what if I withal Expel a devil who first made him such? Let his tormentor conscience find him out; For him I was not sent, nor yet to free That people victor once, now vile and base, Deservedly made vassal, who once just, Frugal, and mild, and temperate, conquered well, But govern ill the nations under yoke, Peeling their provinces, exhausted all By lust and rapine; first ambitious grown Of triumph, that insulting vanity; Then cruel, by their sports to blood inured Of fighting beasts, and man to beasts exposed, Luxurious by their wealth, and greedier still, And from the daily scene effeminate. What wise and valiant man would seek to free These thus degenerate, by themselves enslaved, Or could of inward slaves make outward free? Know, therefore, when my season comes to sit On David's throne, it shall be like a tree Spreading and overshadowing all the earth, Or as a stone that shall to pieces dash All monarchies besides throughout the world, And of my kingdom there shall be no end: Means there shall be to this, but what the means, Is not for thee to know, nor me to tell." To whom the tempter impudent replied:

To whom the tempter impudent replied:

I see all offers made by me how slight
Thou valuest, because offered, and reject'st:
Nothing will please the difficult and nice,
Or nothing more than still to contradict:
On the other side know also thou, that I
On what I offer set as high esteem,

Nor what I part with mean to give for nought; All these which in a moment thou behold'st, The kingdoms of the world to thee I give; For given to me, I give to whom I please, No trifle; yet with this reserve, not else, On this condition, if thou wilt fall down, And worship me as thy superior lord, Easily done, and hold them all of me; For what can less so great a gift deserve?"

Whom thus our Saviour answered with disdain: "I never liked thy talk, thy offers less, Now both abhor, since thou hast dared to utter The abominable terms, impious condition; But I endure the time, till which expired, Thou hast permission on me. It is written The first of all commandments, 'Thou shalt worship The Lord thy God, and only him shalt serve; And dar'st thou to the Son of God propound To worship thee, accursed, now more accursed For this attempt bolder than that on Eve, And more blasphémous? which expect to rue. The kingdoms of the world to thee were given, Permitted rather, and by thee usurped; Other donation none thou caust produce: If given, by whom but by the King of Kings, God over all supreme? If given to thee, By thee how fairly is the giver now Repaid? But gratitude in thee is lost Long since. Wert thou so void of fear or shame, As offer them to me, the Son of God, To me my own on such abhorréd pact, That I fall down and worship thee as God? Get thee behind me; plain thou now appear'st That evil one, Satan for ever damned."

To whom the fiend with fear abashed replied: "Be not so sore offended, Son of God, Though sons of God both angels are and men, If I to try whether in higher sort Than these thou bear'st that title, have proposed What both from men and angels I "eccive,"

Tetrarchs of fire, air, flood, and on the earth Nations besides from all the quartered winds, God of this world invoked and world beneath; Who then thou art, whose coming is foretold To me so fatal, me it most concerns. The trial hath endamaged thee no way, Rather more honour left and more esteem; Me nought advantaged, missing what I aimed. Therefore let pass, as they are transitory, The kingdoms of this world; I shall no more Advise thee; gain them as thou canst, or not. And thou thyself seem'st otherwise inclined Than to a worldly crown, addicted more To contemplation and profound dispute, As by that early action may be judged, When slipping from thy mother's eye thou went'st Alone into the temple, there wast found Among the gravest rabbis disputant On points and questions fitting Moses' chair, Teaching, not taught; the childhood shows the man, As morning shows the day. Be famous then By wisdom; as thy empire must extend, So let extend thy mind o'er all the world In knowledge, all things in it comprehend: All knowledge is not couched in Moses' law, The Pentateuch, or what the prophets wrote: The Gentiles also know, and write and teach To admiration, led by nature's light; And with the Gentiles much thou must converse, Ruling them by persuasion as thou mean'st; Without their learning how wilt thou with them, Or they with thee, hold conversation meet? How wilt thou reason with them, how refute Their idolisms, traditions, paradoxes? Error by his own arms is best evinced. Look once more ere we leave this specular mount Westward, much nearer by south-west, behold Where on the Ægean shore a city stands Built nobly, pure the air, and light the soil; Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts

And eloquence, native to famous wits Or hospitable, in her sweet recess, City or suburban, studious walks and shades; See there the olive grove of Academe, Plato's retirement, where the Attic bird Trills her thick-warbled notes the summer long; There flowery hill Hymettus, with the sound Of bees' industrious murmur, oft invites To studious musing; there Ilissus rolls His whispering stream: within the walls then view The schools of ancient sages; his who bred Great Alexander to subdue the world, Lyceum there, and painted Stoa next: There thou shalt hear and learn the secret power Of harmony in tones and numbers hit By voice or hand, and various-measured verse; Æolian charms and Dorian lyric odes, And his who gave them breath, but higher sung, Blind Melesigenes, thence Homer called, Whose poem Phæbus challenged for his own. Thence what the lofty grave tragedians taught In chorus or iambic, teachers best Of moral prudence, with delight received In brief sententious precepts, while they treat Of fate and chance, and change in human life; High actions and high passions best describing. Thence to the famous orators repair, Those ancient, whose resistless eloquence Wielded at will that fierce democratie, Shook the arsenal, and fulmined over Greece To Macedon and Artaxerxes' throne. To sage philosophy next lend thine ear, From Heaven descended to the low-roofed house Of Socrates; see there his tenement, Whom well inspired the oracle pronounced Wisest of men; from whose mouth issued forth Mellifluous streams that watered all the schools Of academics old and new, with those Surnamed Peripatetics, and the sect Epicuréan, and the Stoic severe:

These here revolve, or, as thou lik'st, at home, Till time mature thee to a kingdom's weight. These rules will render thee a king complete Within thyself, much more with empire joined." To whom our Saviour sagely thus replied: "Think not but that I know these things, or think I know them not; not therefore am I short Of knowing what I ought: he who receives Light from above, from the fountain of light, No other doctrine needs, though granted true; But these are false, or little else but dreams, Conjectures, fancies, built on nothing firm. The first and wisest of them all professed To know this only, that he nothing knew; The next to fabling fell and smooth conceits; A third sort doubted all things, though plain sense: Others in virtue placed felicity, But virtue joined with riches and long life; In corporal pleasure he, and careless ease; The Stoic last, in philosophic pride, By him called virtue; and his virtuous man, Wise, perfect in himself, and all possessing, Equals to God, oft shames not to prefer, As fearing God nor man, contemning all Wealth, pleasure, pain, or torment, death and life, Which when he lists he leaves, or boasts he can, For all his tedious talk is but vain boast, Or subtle shifts conviction to evade. Alas! what can they teach and not mislead, Ignorant of themselves, of God much more, And how the world began, and how man fell Degraded by himself, on grace depending? Much of the soul they talk, but all awry, And in themselves seek virtue, and to themselves All glory arrogate, to God give none, Rather accuse him under usual names, Fortune and Fate, as one regardless quite Of mortal things. Who therefore seeks in these True wisdom, finds her not, or by delusion,

Far worse, her false resemblance only meets,

An empty cloud. However, many books, Wise men have said, are wearisome: who reads Incessantly, and to his reading brings not A spirit and judgment equal or superior (And what he brings, what needs he elsewhere seek?). Uncertain and unsettled still remains, Deep versed in books and shallow in himself. Crude or intoxicate, collecting toys, And trifles for choice matters, worth a sponge; As children gathering pebbles on the shore. Or if I would delight my private hours With music or with poem, where so soon As in our native language can I find That solace? All our law and story strewed With hymns, our psalms with artful terms inscribed. Our Hebrew songs and harps in Babylon, That pleased so well our victors' ear, declare That rather Greece from us these arts derived: Ill imitated, while they loudest sing The vices of their deities, and their own In fable, hymn, or song, so personating Their gods ridiculous, and themselves past shame. Remove their swelling epithets, thick laid As varnish on a harlot's cheek, the rest. Thin sown with aught of profit or delight, Will far be found unworthy to compare With Sion's songs, to all true tastes excelling, Where God is praised aright, and god-like men, The Holiest of Holies, and his saints; Such are from God inspired, not such from thee, Unless where moral virtue is expressed By light of nature not in all quite lost. Their orators thou then extoll'st, as those The top of eloquence; statists indeed, And lovers of their country, as may seem; But herein to our prophets far beneath, As men divinely taught, and better teaching The solid rules of civil government, In their majestic, unaffected style, Than all the oratory of Greece and Rome.

In them is plainest taught, and easiest learnt, What makes a nation happy, and keeps it so, What ruins kingdoms, and lays cities flat; These only with our law best form a king."

So spake the Son of God: but Satan now Quite at a loss, for all his darts were spent, Thus to our Saviour with stern brow replied:

"Since neither wealth, nor honour, arms nor arts, Kingdom nor empire, pleases thee, nor aught By me proposed in life contemplative, Or active, tended on by glory or fame, What dost thou in this world? The wilderness For thee is fittest place; I found thee there, And thither will return thee; yet remember What I foretell thee: soon thou shalt have cause To wish thou never hadst rejected thus Nicely or cautiously my offered aid, Which would have set thee in short time with ease On David's throne, or throne of all the world, Now at full age, fullness of time, thy season, When prophecies of thee are best fulfilled. Now contrary, if I read aught in Heaven, Or Heaven write aught of fate, by what the stars Voluminous, or single characters, In their conjunction met, give me to spell, Sorrows, and labours, opposition, hate, Attends thee, scorns, reproaches, injuries, Violence and stripes, and lastly cruel death; A kingdom they portend thee, but what kingdom, Real or allegoric, I discern not, Nor when, eternal sure, as without end, Without beginning; for no date prefixed Directs me in the starry rubric set." So saying he took (for still he knew his power

Not yet expired), and to the wilderness
Brought back the Son of God, and left him there,
Feigning to disappear. Darkness now rose,
As daylight sunk, and brought in louring night,
Her shadowy offspring, unsubstantial both,
Privation mere of light and absent day.

Our Saviour meek, and with untroubled mind After his airy jaunt, though hurried sore, Hungry and cold, betook him to his rest, Wherever, under some concourse of shades, Whose branching arms, thick intertwined, might shield From dews and damps of night his sheltered head, But sheltered slept in vain, for at his head The tempter watched, and soon with ugly dreams Disturbed his sleep; and either tropic now 'Gan thunder, and both ends of Heaven, the clouds From many a horrid rift abortive poured Fierce rain with lightning mixed, water with fire In ruin reconciled: nor slept the winds Within their stony caves, but rushed abroad From the four hinges of the world, and fell On the vexed wilderness, whose tallest pines, Though rooted deep as high, and sturdiest oaks Bowed their stiff necks, loaden with stormy blasts, Or torn up sheer; ill wast thou shrouded then, O patient Son of God, yet only stood'st Unshaken; nor yet stayed the terror there, Infernal ghosts, and hellish furies, round Environed thee, some howled, some yelled, some shrieked, Some bent at thee their fiery darts, while thou Sat'st unappalled in calm and sinless peace. Thus passed the night so foul, till morning fair Came forth with pilgrim steps in amice gray, Who with her radiant finger stilled the roar Of thunder, chased the clouds, and laid the winds And grisly spectres, which the fiend had raised To tempt the Son of God with terrors dire. And now the sun, with more effectual beams, Had cheered the face of earth, and dried the wet From drooping plant, or dropping tree; the birds, Who all things now behold more fresh and green, After a night of storm so ruinous, Cleared up their choicest notes in bush and spray To gratulate the sweet return of morn; Nor yet amidst this joy and brightest morn Was absent, after all his mischief done,

The prince of darkness, glad would also seem Of this fair change, and to our Saviour came, Yet with no new device, they all were spent, Rather by this his last affront resolved, Desperate of better course, to vent his rage, And mad despite to be so oft repelled. Him walking on a sunny hill he found, Backed on the north and west by a thick wood: Out of the wood he starts in wonted shape, And in a careless mood thus to him said: "Fair morning yet betides thee, Son of God. After a dismal night; I heard the wrack As earth and sky would mingle; but myself Was distant; and these flaws, though mortals fear them As dangerous to the pillared frame of Heaven. Or to the earth's dark basis underneath, Are to the main as inconsiderable, And harmless, if not wholesome, as a sneeze To man's less universe, and soon are gone; Yet as being oft-times noxious where they light On man, beast, plant, wasteful and turbulent, Like turbulencies in the affairs of men, Over whose heads they roar, and seem to point. They oft fore-signify and threaten ill: This tempest at this desert most was bent; Of men at thee, for only thou here dwell'st. Did I not tell thee, if thou didst reject The perfect season offered with my aid To win thy destined seat, but wilt prolong All to the push of fate, pursue thy way Of gaining David's throne no man knows when, For both the when and how is no where told, Thou shalt be what thou art ordained, no doubt; For angels have proclaimed it, but concealing The time and means: each act is rightliest done, Not when it must, but when it may be best. If thou observe not this, be sure to find, What I foretold thee, many a hard assay Of dangers, and adversities, and pains, Ere thou of Israel's sceptre get fast hold;

Whereof this ominous night that closed thee round, So many terrors, voices, prodigies, May warn thee, as a sure foregoing sign."

So talked he; while the Son of God went on And stayed not, but in brief him answered thus:

"Me worse than wet thou find'st not; other harm Those terrors which thou speak'st of did me none; I never feared they could, though noising loud And threatening nigh; what they can do as signs Betokening, or ill boding, I contemn As false portents, not sent from God, but thee; Who knowing I shall reign past thy preventing, Obtrud'st thy offered aid, that I accepting, At least might seem to hold all power of thee, Ambitious spirit, and wouldst be thought my God, And storm'st refused, thinking to terrify Me to thy will. Desist, thou art discerned, And toil'st in vain, nor me in vain molest."

To whom the fiend, now swollen with rage, replied: "Then hear, O Son of David, virgin-born; For Son of God to me is yet in doubt: Of the Messiah I have heard foretold By all the prophets; of thy birth at length Announced by Gabriel with the first I knew. And of the angelic song in Bethlehem field, On thy birth-night, that sung thee Saviour born. From that time seldom have I ceased to eye Thy infancy, thy childhood, and thy youth, Thy manhood last, though yet in private bred; Till at the ford of Jordan, whither all Flocked to the Baptist, I among the rest, Though not to be baptized, by voice from Heaven Heard thee pronounced the Son of God beloved. Thenceforth I thought thee worth my nearer view And narrower scrutiny, that I might learn In what degree or meaning thou art called The Son of God, which bears no single sense; The Son of God I also am, or was, And if I was, I am; relation stands; All men are sons of God; yet thee I thought

In some respect far higher so declared. Therefore I watched thy footsteps from that hour, And followed thee still on to this waste wild: Where by all best conjectures I collect Thou art to be my fatal enemy. Good reason then, if I beforehand seek To understand my adversary, who And what he is; his wisdom, power, intent: By parle, or composition, truce, or league To win him, or win from him what I can. And opportunity I here have had To try thee, sift thee, and confess have found thee Proof against all temptation, as a rock Of adamant, and as a centre, firm, " To the utmost of mere man both wise and good, Not more: for honors, riches, kingdoms, glory, Have been before contemned, and may again; Therefore to know what more thou art than man, Worth naming Son of God by voice from Heaven, Another method I must now begin."

So saying, he caught him up, and, without wing Of hippogrif, bore through the air sublime Over the wilderness and o'er the plain; Till underneath them fair Jerusalem,

The holy city, lifted high her towers, And higher yet the glorious temple reared Her pile, far off appearing like a mount Of alabaster, topped with golden spires:

There on the highest pinacle he set

The Son of God, and added thus in scorn:

"There stand, if thou wilt stand; to stand upright Will ask thee skill; I to thy Father's house Have brought thee, and highest placed, highest is best; Now show thy progeny; if not to stand, Cast thyself down; safely, if Son of God; For it is written, 'He will give command Concerning thee to his angels, in their hands They shall up-lift thee, lest at any time Thou chance to dash thy foot against a stone." To whom thus Jesus: "Also it is written,

Tempt not the Lord thy God:" he said and stood: But Satan, smitten with amazement, fell. As when earth's son, Antæus (to compare Small things with greatest) in Irassa strove With Jove's Alcides, and oft foiled still rose, Receiving from his mother earth new strength, Fresh from his fall, and fiercer grapple joined, Throttled at length in the air, expired and fell; So after many a foil the tempter proud, Renewing fresh assaults amidst his pride Fell whence he stood to see his victor fall. And as that Theban monster that proposed Her riddle, and him who solved it not devoured, That once found out and solved, for grief and spite Cast herself headlong from the Ismenian steep; So struck with dread and anguish fell the fiend, And to his crew, that sat consulting, brought Joyless triumphs of his hoped success, Ruin, and desperation, and dismay, Who durst so proudly tempt the Son of God. So Satan fell; and straight a fiery globe Of angels on full sail of wing flew nigh, Who on their plumy vans received him soft From his uneasy station, and upbore, As on a floating couch, through the blithe air. Then in a flowery valley set him down On a green bank, and set before him spread A table of celestial food, divine, Ambrosial fruits, fetched from the tree of life. And from the fount of life ambrossial drink, That soon refreshed him wearied, and repaired What hunger, if aught hunger had impaired, Or thirst; and as he fed, angelic quires Sung heavenly anthems of his victory Over temptation, and the tempter proud. "True image of the Father, whether throned In the bosom of bliss, and light of light

Conceiving, or remote from Heaven, enshrined In fleshly tabernacle, and human form, Wandering the wilderness, whatever place,

Habit, or state, or motion, still expressing The Son of God, with godlike force endued Against the attempter of thy Father's throne, And thief of Paradise; him long of old Thou didst debel, and down from Heaven cast With all his army; now thou hast avenged Supplanted Adam, and by vanquishing Temptation, hast regained lost Paradise, And frustrated the conquest fraudulent: He never more henceforth will dare set foot In Paradise to tempt; his snares are broke: For though that seat of earthly bliss be failed, A fairer Paradise is founded now For Adam and his chosen sons, whom thou A Saviour art come down to reinstal Where they shall dwell secure, when time shall be, Of tempter and temptation without fear. But thou, infernal serpent, shalt not long Rule in the clouds; like an autumnal star Or lightning thou shalt fall from Heaven, trod down Under his feet; for proof, ere this thou feel'st Thy wound, yet not thy last and deadliest wound, By this repulse received, and hold'st in Hell No triumph; in all her gates Abaddon rues Thy bold attempt; hereafter learn with awe To dread the Son of God: he all unarmed Shall chase thee with the terror of his voice From thy demoniac holds, possession foul, Thee and thy legions; yelling they shall fly, And beg to hide them in a herd of swine, Lest he command them down into the deep Bound, and to torment sent before their time. Hail! Son of the Most High, heir of both worlds. Queller of Satan, on thy glorious work Now enter, and begin to save mankind."

Thus they the Son of God, our Saviour meek, Sung victor, and from heavenly feast refreshed Brought on his way with joy; he unobserved Home to his mother's private house returned.

Samson Agonistes.

A DRAMATIC POEM.

Τραγφδία μιμησις πράξεως σπουδαίας.—x. τ. λ.
Απιστοτ. Poet., cap. vi.

Tragoedia est imitatio actionis seriæ, &c., per misericordiam et metum perficiens talium affectuum instrationem.

OF THAT SORT OF DRAMATIC POEM WHICH IS CALLED TRAGEDY.

Tragedy, as it was anciently composed, hath been ever held the gravest, moralest, and most profitable of all other poems; therefore said by Aristotle to be of power, by raising pity and fear, or terror, to purge the mind of those and such like passions, that is, to temper and reduce them to just measure with a kind of delight, stirred up by reading or seeing those passions well imitated. Nor is nature wanting in her own effects to make good his assertion: for so in physic, things of melancholic hue and quality are used against melancholy, sour against sour; salt to remove salt humours. Hence, philosophers and other gravest writers, as Cicero, Plutarch, and others, frequently cite out of tragic poets, both to adorn and illustrate their discourse. The Apostle Paul himself thought it not unworthy to insert a verse of Euripides into the text of Holy Scripture, 1 Cor. xv. 33; and Paræus, commenting on the (348)

Revelation, divides the whole book as a tragedy, into acts distinguished each by a chorus of heavenly harpings and song between. Heretofore, men in highest dignity have laboured not a little to be thought able to compose a tracedy. Of that honour Dionysius the elder was no less ambitious, than before of his attaining to the tyranny. Augustus Cæsar also begun his Ajax, but unable to please his own judgment with what he had begun, left it unfinished. Seneca, the philosopher, is by somethought the author of those tragedies (at least the best of them) that go under that name. Gregory Nazianzen, a father of the church, thought it not unbesceming the sanctity of his person to write a tragedy, which is entitled "Christ Suffering." This is mentioned to vindicate tragedy from the small esteem, or rather infamy, which, in the account of many, it undergoes at this day with other common interludes; happening through the poets' error of intermixing comic stuff with tragic sadness and gravity; or introducing trivial and vulgar persons, which by all judicious hath been counted absurd; and brought in without discretion, corruptly to gratify the people. And though ancient tragedy use no prologue, yet using sometimes, in case of self-defence or explanation, that which Martial calls an epistle; in behalf of this tragedy coming forth after the ancient manner, much different from what among us passes for best, thus much beforehand may be epistled; that chorus is here introduced after the Greek manner, not ancient only but modern, and still in use among the Italians. In the modelling, therefore, of this poem, with good reason, the ancients and Italians are rather followed, as of much more authority and fame. The measure of verse used in the chorus is of all sorts, called by the Greeks Monostrophic, or rather Apolelymenon, without regard had to Strophe, Antistrophe, or Epode, which were a kind of stanzas framed only for the music then used with the chorus that sung; not essential to the poem, and therefore not material; or being divided into stanzas or pauses, they may be called Allœostropha. Division into act and scene referring chiefly to the stage (to which this work never was intended), is here omitted. It suffices if the whole drama be found not produced beyond the fifth act. Of the style and uniformity, and that commonly called the plot, whether intricate or explicit, which is nothing, indeed, but such accommy or disposition of the fable as may stand best with verisimilitude and decorum; they only will best judge who are not unacquainted with Æschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides, the three tragic poets unequalled yet by any, and the best rule to all who endeavour to write tragedy. The circumscription of time, wherein the whole drama begins and ends, is, according to ancient rule and best example, within the space of twenty-four hours.

The Scene before the Prison in Gaza.

THE ARGUMENT.

Samson made captive, blind, and now in the prison at Gaza, there to labour as in a common workhouse, on a festival day, in the general cessation from lahour, comes forth into the open air to a place nigh, somewhat retired, there to sit awhile and bemoan his condition; where he happens at length to be visited by certain friends and equals of his tribe, which make the Chorus, who seek to comfort him what they can; then by his old father. Manoah, who endeavours the like, and withat tells him his purpose to procure his liberty by ransom; lastly, that this feast was proclaimed by the Philistines as a day of thanksgiving for their deliverance from the hands of Samson, which yet more troubles him. Manoah then departs to prosecute his endeavour with the Philistian lords for Samson's redemption; who in the mean while is visited by other persons, and lastly by a public officer, to require his coming to the feast before the lords and people, to play or show his strength in their presence: he at first refuses, dismissing the public officer with absolute denial to come; at length, persuaded inwardly that this was from God, he yields to go along with him, who came now the second time with great threatenings to fetch him. The Chorus yet remaining on the place, Manoah returns, full of joyful hope, to procure ere long his son's deliverance; in the midst of which discourse an Hebrew comes in haste, a nefusedly at first, and afterward more distinctly, relating the catastrophe, what Samson had done to the Philistines, and by accident to himself; where with the tragedy ends.

SAMSON.

A LITTLE onward lend thy guiding hand To these dark steps, a little further on; For yonder bank hath choice of sun or shade: There I am wont to sit when any chance Relieves me from my task of servile toil, Daily in the common prison else enjoined me, Where I a prisoner chained, scarce freely draw The air imprisoned also, close and damp, Unwholesome draught: but here I feel amends, The breath of Heaven fresh blowing, pure and sweet, With day-spring born; here leave me to respire. This day a solemn feast the people hold To Dagon their sea idol, and forbid Laborious works; unwillingly this rest Their superstition yields me; hence with leave Retiring from the popular noise, I seek This unfrequented place to find some ease, Ease to the body some, none to the mind From restless thoughts, that like a deadly swarm Of hornets armed, no sooner found alone, But rush upon me thronging, and present Times past, what once I was, and what am now. Oh, wherefore was my birth from Heaven foretold Twice by an angel, who at last in sight Of both my parents all in flames ascended From off the altar, where an offering burned, As in a fiery column charioting His god-like presence, and from some great act Or benefit revealed to Abraham's race?

Why was my breeding ordered and prescribed As of a person separate to God, Designed for great exploits; if I must die Betrayed, captived, and both my eyes put out, Made of my enemies the scorn and gaze; To grind in brazen fetters under task With this Heaven-gifted strength? O glorious strength Put to the labour of a beast, debased Lower than bondslave! Promise was that I Should Israel from Philistian yoke deliver; Ask for this great deliverer now, and find him Eveless in Gaza, at the mill with slaves, Himself in bonds under Philistian voke: Yet stay, let me not rashly call in doubt Divine prediction; what if all foretold Had been fulfilled but through mine own default, Whom have I to complain of but myself? Who this high gift of strength committed to me, In what part lodged, how easily bereft me, Under the seal of silence could not keep, But weakly to a woman must reveal it, O'ercome with importunity and tears. O impotence of mind, in body strong! But what is strength without a double share Of wisdom? vast, unwieldly, burdensome, Proudly secure, yet liable to fall By weakest subtleties, not made to rule, But to subserve where wisdom bears command! God, when he gave me strength, to show withal How slight the gift was, hung it in my hair. But peace! I must not quarrel with the will Of highest dispensation, which herein Haply had ends above my reach to know: Suffices that to me strength is my bane, And proves the source of all my miseries; So many and so huge, that each apart Would ask a life to wail; but chief of all, O loss of sight, of thee I most complain! Blind among enemies, O worse than chains, Dungeon or beggary, or decrepit age!

Light, the prime work of God, to me is extinct, And all her various objects of delight Annulled, which might in part my grief have eased Inferior to the vilest now become Of man or worm; the vilest here excel me: They creep, yet see; I, dark in light, exposed To daily fraud, contempt, abuse, and wrong, Within doors, or without, still as a fool, In power of others, never in my own; Scarce half I seem to live, dead more than half. Oh, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon, Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse, Without all hope of day! O first created beam, and thou great Word, " Let there be light!" and light was over all; Why am I thus bereaved thy prime decree? The sun to me is dark And silent as the moon, When she deserts the night, Hid in her vacant interlunar cave. Since light so necessary is to life, And almost life itself, if it be true That light is in the soul, She all in every part: why was the sight To such a tender ball as the eye confined, So obvious and so easy to be quenched? And not as feeling through all parts diffused, That she might look at will through every pore? Then had I not been thus exiled from light. As in the land of darkness, yet in light, To live a life half dead, a living death, And buried; but, oh, yet more miserable! Myself, my sepulchre, a moving grave, Buried, yet not exempt By privilege of death and burial From worst of other evils, pains and wrongs, But made hereby obnoxious more To all the miseries of life, Life in captivity Among inhuman foes.

But who are these? for with joint pace I hear The tread of many feet steering this way; Perhaps my enemies, who come to stare At my affliction, and perhaps to insult, Their daily practice to afflict me more.

CHORUS.

This, this is he; softly awhile, Let us not break in upon him: Oh, change beyond report, thought, or belief! See how he lies at random, carelessly diffused, With languished head unpropped, As one past hope, abandoned, And by himself given over; In slavish habit, ill-fitted weeds O'er-worn and soiled; Or do my eyes misrepresent? Can this be he, That heroic, that renowned, Irresistible Samson? whom unarmed No strength of man, or fiercest wild beast could withstand; Who tore the lion, as the lion tears the kid; Ran on embattled armies clad in iron, And weaponless himself; Made arms ridiculous, useless the forgery Of brazen shield and spear, the hammered cuirass, Chalybean tempered steel, and frock of mail, Adamantean proof; But safest he who stood aloof, When insupportably his foot advanced, In scorn of their proud arms and warlike tools, Spurned them to death by troops. The bold Ascalonite Fled from his lion ramp, old warriors turned Their plated backs under his heel; Or grovelling soiled their crested helmets in the dust. Then with what trivial weapon came to hand, The jaw of a dead ass, his sword of bone. A thousand foreskins fell, the flower of Palestine, In Ramath-lechi famous to this day. Then by main force pulled up, and on his shoulders bore The gates of Azza, post, and massy bar, Up to the hill by Hebron, seat of giants old,

No journey of a sabbath-day, and loaded so; Like whom the Gentiles feign to bear up Heaven. Which shall I first bewail, Thy bondage or lost sight, Prison within prison, Inseparably dark? Thou art become (oh, worst imprisonment!) The dungeon of thyself; thy soul (Which men enjoying sight oft without cause complain) Imprisoned now indeed, In real darkness of the body dwells, Shut up from outward light To incorporate with gloomy night; For inward light, alas! Puts forth no visual beam. O mirror of our fickle state, Since man on earth unparalleled! The rarer thy example stands, By how much from the top of wondrous glory, Strongest of mortal men, To lowest pitch of abject fortune thou art fallen. For him I reckon not in high estate Whom long descent of birth Or the sphere of fortune raises; But thee whose strength, while virtue was her mate,

Universally crowned with highest praises.

I hear the sound of words, their sense the air Dissolves unjointed ere it reach my ear.

Might have subdued the earth,

CHORUS

He speaks, let us draw nigh. Matchless in might, The glory late of Israel, now the grief; We come, thy friends and neighbours not unknown, From Eshtaol and Zora's fruitful vale To visit or bewail thee; or, if better, Counsel or consolation we may bring, Salve to thy sores; apt words have power to swage The tumours of a troubled mind, And are as balm to festered wounds.

SAMSON.

Your coming, friends, revives me, for I learn Now of my own experience, not by talk, How counterfeit a coin they are who friends Bear in their superscription (of the most I would be understood): in prosperous days They swarm, but in adverse withdraw their head, Not to be found, though sought. Ye see, O friends, How many evils have enclosed me round; Yet that which was the worst now least afflicts me. Blindness, for had I sight, confused with shame. How could I once look up, or heave the head, Who like a foolish pilot have shipwrecked My vessel trusted to me from above, Gloriously rigged; and for a word, a tear, Fool! have divulged the secret gift of God To a deceitful woman? Tell me, friends, Am I not sung and proverbed for a fool In every street? Do they not say, How well Are come upon him his deserts? Yet why? Immeasurable strength they might behold In me, of wisdom nothing more than mean: This with the other should, at least, have paired, These two proportioned ill drove me transverse.

Tax not divine disposal; wisest men Have erred, and by bad women been deceived; And shall again, pretend they ne'er so wise. Deject not then so overmuch thyself, Who hast of sorrow thy full load besides; Yet truth to say, I oft have heard men wonder Why thou shouldst wed Philistian women rather Than of thine own tribe fairer, or as fair, At least of thy own nation, and as noble.

CHORUS.

The first I saw at Timpa, and she pleased Me, not my parents, that I sought to wed The daughter of an infidel: they knew not That what I motioned was of God; I knew From intimate impulse, and therefore urged

The marriage on; that by occasion hence I might begin Israel's deliverance,
The work to which I was divinely called.
She proving false, the next I took to wife
(Oh that I never had! fond wish too late)
Was in the vale of Sorec, Dalila,
That specious monster, my accomplished snare.
I thought it lawful from my former act,
And the same end; still watching to oppress
Israel's oppressors: of what now I suffer
She was not the prime cause, but I myself,
Who vanquished with a peal of words (Oh weakness!)
Gave up my fort of silence to a woman.

CHORUS.

In seeking just occasion to provoke
The Philistine, thy country's enemy,
Thou never wast remiss, I bear thee witness:
Yet Israël still serves with all his sons.

SAMSON.

That fault I take not on me, but transfer On Israel's governors, and heads of tribes, Who seeing those great acts, which God had done Singly by me against their conquerors, Acknowledged not, or not at all considered Deliverance offered: I, on the other side, Used no ambition to commend my deeds, The deeds themselves, though mute, spoke loud the doer, But they persisted deaf, and would not seem To count them things worth notice, till at length Their lords, the Philistines, with gathered powers, Entered Judea seeking me, who then Safe to the rock of Etham was retired, Not flying, but forecasting in what place To set upon them, what advantaged best: Meanwhile the men of Judah, to prevent The harass of their land, beset me round; I willingly on some conditions came Into their hands, and they as gladly yield me To the uncircumcised a welcome prey, Bound with two cords; but cords to me were threads Touched with the flame: on their whole host I flew Unarmed, and with a trivial weapon felled Their choicest youth; they only lived who fled. Had Judah that day joined, or one whole tribe, They had by this possessed the towers of Gath, And lorded over them whom now they serve. But what more oft in nations grown corrupt, And by their vices brought to servitude, Than to love bondage more than liberty, Bondage with ease than strenuous liberty; And to despise, or envy, or suspect Whom God hath of his special favour raised As their deliverer; if he aught begin, How frequent to desert him, and at last To heap ingratitude on worthiest deeds?

CHORUS.

Thy words to my remembrance bring How Succoth and the fort of Penuel Their great deliverer contemned, The matchless Gideon in pursuit Of Madian and her vanquished kings: And how ingrateful Ephraim Had dealt with Jephtha, who by argument, Not worse than by his shield and spear, Defended Israel from the Ammonite, Had not his prowess quelled their pride In that sore battle, when so many died Without reprieve, adjudged to death For want of well pronouncing Shibboleth.

SAMSON.

Of such examples add me to the roll, Me easily indeed mine may neglect, But God's proposed deliverance not so.

CHORUS.

Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men;
Unless there be who think not God at all:
If any be, they walk obscure;
For of such doctrine never was there school,
But the heart of the fool,
And no man therein doctor but himself.

Yet more there be who doubt his ways not just, As to his own edicts found contradicting, Then give the reins to wandering thought, Regardless of his glory's diminution; Till by their own perplexities involved They revel more, still less resolved, But never find self-satisfying solution.

As if they would confine the Interminable, And tie him to his own prescript,
Who made our laws to bind us, not himself,
And hath full right to exempt
Whom so it pleases him by choice
From national obstriction, without taint
Of sin, or legal debt;

For with his own laws he can best dispense.

He would not else who never wanted means,
Nor in respect of the enemy just cause
To set his people free,
Have prempted this heroic Nazarite,
Against his vow of strictest purity,
To seek in marriage that fallacious bride,
Unclean, unchaste.

Down reason then, at least vain reasonings down,

Though reason here aver

That moral verdict quits her of unclean: Unchaste was subsequent—her stain, not his.

But see, here comes thy reverend sire With careful step, locks white as down, Old Manoah: advise

Forthwith how thou oughtst to receive him.

Ay me! another inward grief awaked With mention of that name renews the assault.

Brethren and men of Dan, for such ye seem, Though in this uncouth place; if old respect, As I suppose, towards your once gloried friend, My son now captive, hither hath informed Your younger feet; while mine, cast back with age, Came lagging after; say if he be here.

CHORUS.

As signal now in low dejected state, As erst in highest, behold him where he lies.

MANOAH.

Oh, miserable change! is this the man, That invincible Samson, far renowned, The dread of Israel's foes, who with a strength Equivalent to angels walked their streets, None offering fight; who single combatant Duelled their armies ranked in proud array, Himself an army, now unequal match To save himself against a coward armed At one spear's length. Oh, ever-failing trust In mortal strength! and oh, what not in man Deceivable and vain? Nay, what thing good Prayed for, but often proves our woe, our bane? I prayed for children, and thought barrenness In wedlock a reproach; I gained a son, And such a son as all men hailed me happy; Who would be now a father in my stead? Oh, wherefore did God grant me my request, And, as a blessing, with such pomp adorned? Why are his gifts desirable, to tempt Our earnest prayers, then given with solemn hand As graces, draw a scorpion's tail behind? For this did the angel twice descend? for this Ordained thy nurture holy, as of a plant Select, and sacred, glorious for a while, The miracle of men; then in an hour Ensnared, assulted, overcome, led bound, Thy foes' derision, captive, poor, and blind, Into a dungeon thrust, to work with slaves? Alas! methinks whom God hath chosen once To worthiest deeds, if he through frailty err, He should not so o'erwhelm, and as a thrall Subject him to so foul indignities, Be it but for honour's sake of former deeds.

SAMSON.

Appoint not heavenly disposition, father; Nothing of all these evils hath befallen me

But justly; I myself have brought them on, Sole author I, sole cause: if aught seem vile, As vile hath been my folly, who have profaned The mystery of God given me under pledge Of yow, and have betrayed it to a woman, A Canaanite, my faithless enemy. This well I knew, nor was at all surprised, But warned by oft experience: did not she Of Timna first betray me, and reveal The secret wrested from me in her height Of nuptial love professed, carrying it straight To them who had corrupted her, my spies, And rivals? In this other was there found More faith, who also in her prime of love, Spousal embraces, vitiated with gold, Though offered only, by the scent conceived Her spurious first-born, treason against me? Thrice she assayed with flattering prayers and sighs, And amorous reproaches, to win from me My capital secret, in what part my strength Lay stored, in what part summed, that she might klow; Thrice I deluded her, and turned to sport Her importunity, each time perceiving How openly, and with what impudence She purposed to betray me, and (which was worse Than undissembled hate) with what contempt She sought to make me traitor to myself; Yet the fourth time, when mustering all her wiles, With blandished parleys, feminine assaults, Tongue-batteries, she surceased not day nor night To storm me over-watched, and wearied out, At times when men seek most repose and rest, I vielded, and unlocked her all my heart, Who with a grain of manhood well resolved Might easily have shook off all her snares: But foul effeminacy held me yoked Her bond-slave; oh, indignity! oh, blot To honour and religion! servile mind Rewarded well with servile punishment!

The base degree to which I now am fallen, These rags, this grinding, is not yet so base As was my former servitude, ignoble, Unmanly, ignominious, infamous, True slavery, and that blindness worse than this, That saw not how degenerately I served.

MANOAH.

I cannot praise thy marriage choices, son; Rather approved them not; but thou didst plead Divine impulsion prompting how thou might'st Find some occasion to infest our foes. I state not that; this I am sure, our foes Found soon occasion thereby to make thee Their captive, and their triumph; thou the sooner Temptation found'st, or over-potent charms To violate the sacred trust of silence Deposited within thee; which, to have kept Tacit, was in thy power: true, and thou bear'st Enough, and more, the burden of that fault; Bitterly hast thou paid, and still art paying That rigid score. A worse thing yet remains; This day the Philistines a popular feast Here celebrate in Gaza; and proclaim Great pomp, and sacrifice, and praises loud To Dagon, as their god who hath delivered Thee, Samson, bound and blind into their hands, Them out of thine, who slew'st them many a slain. So Dagon shall be magnified, and God, Besides whom is no God, compared with idols, Disglorified, blasphemed, and had in scorn By the idolatrous rout amidst their wine; Which to have come to pass by means of thee, Samson, of all thy sufferings think the heaviest, Of all reproach the most with shame that ever Could have befallen thee and thy father's house.

Father, I do acknowledge and confess
That I this honour, I this pomp have brought
To Dagon, and advanced his praises high
Among the heathen round; to God have brought

Dishonour, obloguy, and ored the mouths Of idolists and atheists; have brought scandal To Israel, diffidence of God, and doubt In feeble hearts, propense enough before To waver, or fall off and join with idols; Which is my chief affliction, shame, and sorrow. The anguish of my soul, that suffers not Mine eye to harbour sleep, or thoughts to rest. This only hope relieves me, that the strife With me hath end; all the contest is now 'Twixt God and Dagon; Dagon hath presumed. Me overthrown, to enter lists with God, His deity comparing and preferring Before the God of Abraham. He, be sure, Will not connive, or linger, thus provoked, But will arise and his great name assert: Dagon must stoop, and shall ere long receive Such a discomfit, as shall quite despoil him Of all these boasted trophies won on me, And with confusion blank his worshippers.

MANOAH.

With cause this hope relieves thee, and these words I as a prophecy receive; for God, Nothing more certain, will not long defer To vindicate the glory of his name Against all competition, nor will long Endure it doubtful whether God be Lord, Or Dagon. But for thee what shall be done? Thou must not in the mean while here forgot Lie in this miserable loathsome plight, Neglected. I already have made way To some Philistian lords, with whom to treat About thy ransom: well they may by this Have satisfied their utmost of revenge By pains and slaveries, worse than death, inflicted On thee, who now no more canst do them harm. SAMSON.

Spare that proposal, father, spare the trouble Of that solicitation; let me here, As I deserve, pay on my punishment;

And expiate, if possible, my crime,
Shameful garrulity. To have revealed
Secrets of men, the secrets of a friend,
How heinous had the fact been, how deserving
Contempt and scorn of all, to be excluded
All friendship, and avoided as a blab,
The mark of fool set on his front! But I
God's counsel have not kept, his holy secret
Presumptuously have published, impiously,
Weakly at least, and shamefully; a sin
That Gentiles in their parables condemn
To their abyss and horrid pains confined.

MANOAH. Be penitent and for thy fault contrite, But act not in thy own affliction, son; Repent the sin, but if the punishment Thou canst avoid, self-preservation bids: Or the execution leave to high disposal, And let another hand, not thine, exact Thy penal forfeit from thyself; perhaps God will relent, and quit thee all his debt; Who ever more approves and more accepts (Best pleased with humble and filial submission) Him who imploring mercy sues for life, Than who self-rigorous chooses death as due; Which argues over-just, and self-displeased For self-offence, more than for God offended. Reject not then what offered means; who knows But God hath set before us, to return thee Home to thy country and his sacred house, Where thou mayst bring thy offerings, to avert His further ire, with prayers and vows renewed? SAMSON.

His pardon I implore; but as for life,
To what end should I seek it? when in strength
All mortals I excelled, and great in hopes
With youthful courage and magnanimous thoughts
Of birth from Heaven foretold and high exploits,
Full of divine instinct, after some proof
Of acts indeed heroic, far beyond

The sons of Anak, famous now and blazed, Fearless of danger, like a petty god I walked about admired of all, and dreaded On hostile ground, none daring my affront. Then swollen with pride into the snare I fell Of fair fallacious looks, venereal trains, Softened with pleasure and voluptuous life; At length to lay my head and hallowed pledge Of all my strength in the lascivious lap Of a deceitful concubine, who shore me Like a tame wether, all my precious fleece, Then turned me out ridiculous, despoiled, Shaven, and disarmed among mine enemies.

Desire of wine and all delicious drinks, Which many a famous warrior overturns, Thou couldst repress, nor did the dancing ruby Sparkling, out-poured, the flavour, or the smell, Or taste that cheers the heart of gods and men, Allure thee from the cool crystalline stream.

SAMSON.

Wherever fountain or fresh current flowed Against the eastern ray, translucent, pure, With touch ethereal of Heaven's fiery rod, I drank, from the clear milky juice allaying Thirst, and refreshed: nor envied them the grape Whose heads that turbulent liquor fills with fumes.

Oh! madness, to think use of strongest wines And strongest drinks our chief support of health,

When God with these forbidden made choice to rear His mighty champion, strong above compare, Whose drink was only from the liquid brook.

SAMSON.

But what availed this temperance, not complete Against another object more enticing? What boots it at one gate to make defence, And at another to let in the foe, Effeminately vanquished? by which means, Now blind, disheartened, shamed, dishonoured, quelled,

To what can I be useful, wherein serve My nation, and the work from Heaven imposed, But to sit idle on the household hearth, A burdenous drone; to visitants a gaze, Or pitied object, these redundant locks Robustious to no purpose clustering down, Vain monument of strength; till length of years And sedentary numbness craze my limbs To a contemptible old age obscure? Here rather let me drudge and earn my bread, Till vermin or the draff of servile food Consume me, and oft-invocated death Hasten the welcome end of all my pains.

Wilt thou then serve the Philistines with that gift Which was expressly given thee to annoy them? Better at home lie bed-rid, not only idle, Inglorious, unemployed, with age outworn. But God, who caused a fountain at thy prayer From the dry ground to spring, thy thirst to allay After the brunt of battle, can as easy Cause light again within thy eyes to spring, Wherewith to serve him better than thou hast; And I persuade me so; why else this strength Miraculous yet remaining in those locks? His might continues in thee not for nought, Nor shall his wondrous gifts be frustrate thus.

All otherwise to me my thoughts portend,
That these dark orbs no more shall treat with light,
Nor the other light of life continue long,
But yield to double darkness nigh at hand:
So much I feel my genial spirits droop,
My hopes all flat, nature within me seems
In all her functions weary of herself,
My race of glory run, and race of shame,
And I shall shortly be with them that rest.

MANOAH.

Believe not these suggestions, which proceed From anguish of the mind and humours black, That mingle with thy fancy. I, however, Must not omit a father's timely care
To prosecute the means of thy deliverance
By ransom, or how else: meanwhile be calm,
And healing words from these thy friends admit.

Oh, that torment should not be confined To the body's wounds and sores, With maladies innumerable In heart, head, breast, and reins; But must secret passage find To the inmost mind, There exercise all his fierce accidents, And on her purest spirits prey, As on entrails, joints and limbs, With answerable pains, but more intense, Though void of corporal sense!

My griefs not only pain me As a lingering disease, But, finding no redress, ferment and rage, Nor less than wounds immedicable Rankle, and fester, and gangrene, To black mortification. Thoughts my termenters armed with deadly stings Mangle my apprehensive tenderest parts, Exasperate, exulcerate, and raise Dire inflammation, which no cooling herb Or medicinal liquor can assuage, Nor breath of vernal air from snowy Alp. Sleep hath forsook and given me o'er To death's benumbing opium as my only cure: These faintings, swoonings of despair, And sense of Heaven's desertion.

I was his nurseling once, and choice delight; His destined from the womb, Promised by heavenly message twice descending, Under his special eye Abstemious I grew up and thrived amain; He led me on to mightiest deeds Above the nerve of mortal arm

Against the uncircumcised, our enemies;
But now hath cast me off as never known,
And to those cruel enemies,
Whom I by his appointment had provoked,
Left me all helpless with the irreparable loss
Of sight, reserved alive to be repeated
The subject of their cruelty or scorn.
Nor am I in the list of them that hope;
Hopeless are all my evils, all remediless;
This one prayer yet remains, might I be heard,
No long petition, speedy death,
The close of all my miseries, and the balm.

Many are the sayings of the wise
In ancient and in modern books enrolled,
Extolling patience as the truest fortitude;
And to the bearing well of all calamities,
All chances incident to man's frail life,
Consolatories writ

With studied argument, and much persuasion sought Lenient of grief and anxious thought:
But with the afflicted in his pangs their sound Little prevails, or rather seems a tune Harsh, and of dissonant mood from his complaint; Unless he feel within Some source of consolation from above.

Secret refreshings, that repair his strength, And fainting spirits uphold.

God of our fathers! what is man,
That thou towards him with hand so various,
Or might I say contrarious,
Temperest thy providence through his short course,
Not evenly, as thou rul'st
The angelic orders and inferior creatures mute,
Irrational and brute.
Nor do I name of men the common rout,
That wandering loose about
Grow up and perish, as the summer fly,
Heads without name no more remembered,
But such as thou hast solemnly elected.

With gifts and graces eminently adorned,
To some great work, thy glory,
And people's safety, which in part they effect:
Yet toward these thus dignified, thou oft,
Amidst their height of noon,
Changest thy countenance, and thy hand with no regard
Of highest favours past

From thee on them, or them to thee of service.

Nor only dost degrade them, or remit

To life obscured, which were a fair dismission,
But throw'st them lower than thou didst exalt them high,
Unseemly falls in human eye,
Too grievous for the trespass or omission;
Oft leav'st them to the hostile sword
Of heathen and profane, their careases
To dogs and fowls a prey, or else captived;
Or to the unjust tribunals, under change of times,
And condemnation of the ungrateful multitude.
If these they 'seape, perhaps in poverty

With sickness and disease thou bow'st them down, Painful diseases and deformed,

In crude old age;

Though not disordinate, yet causeless suffering
The punishment of dissolute days: in fine,
Just or unjust alike seem miserable,
For oft alike both come to evil end.

So deal not with this once thy glorious champion, The image of thy strength, and mighty minister. What do I beg? How hast thou dealt already? Behold him in this state calamitous, and turn His labours, for thou canst, to peaceful end.

But who is this? what thing of sea or land? Female of sex it seems,
That so bedecked, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for the isles
Of Javan or Gadire,
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails filled, and streamers waving,

24

Courted by all the winds that hold them play, An amber scent of odorous perfume Her harbinger, a damsel train behind; Some rich Philistian matron she may seem, And new, at nearer view, no other certain Than Dalila thy wife.

SAMSON.

My wife, my traitress! let her not come near me.

Yet on she moves, now stands and eyes thee fixed, About to have spoke, but now, with head declined Like a fair flower surcharged with dew, she weeps, And words addressed seem into tears dissolved, Wetting the borders of her silken veil: But now again she makes address to speak.

DALILA.

With doubtful feet and wavering resolution I came, still dreading thy displeasure, Samson, Which to have merited, without excuse, I cannot but acknowledge; yet if tears May expiate (though the fact more evil drew In the perverse event than I foresaw), My penance hath not slackened, though my pardon No way assured. But conjugal affection, Prevailing over fear and timorous doubt, Hath led me on, desirous to behold Once more thy face, and know of thy estate, If aught in my ability may serve To lighten what thou sufferest, and appease Thy mind with what amends is in my power, Though late, yet in some part to recompense My rash but more unfortunate misdeed.

SAMSON.

Out, out, hyena! these are thy wonted arts, And arts of every woman false like thee, To break all faith, all vows, deceive, betray, Then as repentant to submit, beseech, And reconcilement move with feigned remorse; Confess, and promise wonders in her change, Not truly penitent, but chief to try

Her husband, how far urged his patience bears, His virtue or weakness which way to assaid: Then with more cautious and instructed skill Again transgresses, and again submits; That wisest and best men full oft beguiled, With goodness principled not to reject The penitent, but ever to forgive, Are drawn to wear out miserable days, Intangled with a poisonous bosom snake, If not by quick destruction soon cut off As I by thee, to ages an example.

DALILA.

Yet hear me, Samson; not that I endeavour To lessen or extenuate my offence; But that on the other side, if it be weighed By itself, with aggravations not surcharged, Or else with just allowance counterpoised, I may, if possible, thy pardon find The easier towards me, or thy hatred less. First granting, as I do, it was a weakness In me, but incident to all our sex, Curiosity, inquisitive, importune Of secrets, then, with like infirmity To publish them, both common female faults: Was it not weakness also to make known For importunity, that is for nought, Wherein consisted all thy strength and safety? To what I did thou show'dst me first the way. But I to enemies revealed, and should not: Nor shouldst thou have trusted that to woman's frailty: Ere I to thee, thou to thyself wast cruel. Let weakness then with weakness come to parle, So near related, or the same of kind, Thine forgive mine; that men may censure thine The gentler, if severely thou exact not More strength from me, than in thyself was found. And what if love, which thou interpret'st hate. The jealousy of love, powerful of sway In human hearts, nor less in mine towards thee. Caused what I did? I saw thee mutable

Of fancy; feared lest one day thou wouldst leave me As her at Timna, sought by all means therefore How to endear, and hold thee to me firmest: No better way I saw than by importuning To learn thy secrets, get into my power Thy key of strength and safety: thou wilt say, Why then revealed? I was assured by those Who tempted me, that nothing was designed Against thee but safe custody, and hold: That made for me; I knew that liberty Would draw thee forth to perilous enterprises, While I at home sat full of cares and fears, Wailing thy absence in my widowed bed; Here I should still enjoy thee day and night, Mine and love's prisoner, not the Philistines: Whole to myself, unhazarded abroad, Fearless at home of partners in my love. These reasons in love's law have passed for good, Though fond and reasonless to some, perhaps; And love hath oft, well meaning, wrought much woe, Yet always pity or pardon hath obtained. Be not unlike all others, not austere As thou art strong, inflexible as steel. If thou in strength all mortals dost exceed, In uncompassionate anger do not so.

SAMSON.

How cunningly the sorceress displays
Her own transgressions, to upbraid me mine!
That malice, not repentance, brought thee hither,
By this appears: I gave, thou say'st, the example;
I led the way; bitter reproach, but true;
I to myself was false ere thou to me;
Such pardon therefore as I give my folly,
Take to thy wicked deed; which when thou seest
Impartial, self-severe, inexorable,
Thou wilt renounce thy seeking, and much rather
Confess it feigned: weakness is thy excuse,
And I believe it; weakness to resist
Philistian gold: if weakness may excuse,
What murderer, what traitor, parricide,

Incestuous, sacrilegious, but may plead it?
All wickedness is weakness: that plea, therefore,
With God or man will gain thee no remission.
But love constrained thee; call it furious rage
To satisfy thy lust: love seeks to have love:
My love how couldst thou hope, who took'st the way
To raise in me inexpiable hate,
Knowing, as needs I must, by thee betrayed?
In vain thou striv'st to cover shame with shame,
Or by evasions thy crime uncover'st more.

ALILA.

Since thou determin'st weakness for no plea In man or woman, though to thy own condemning, Hear what assaults I had, what snares besides, What sieges girt me round, ere I consented; Which might have awed the best resolved of men, The constantest, to have yielded without blame. It was not gold, as to my charge thou lay'st, That wrought with me: thou know'st the magistrates And princes of my country came in person, Solicited, commanded, threatened, urged, Adjured by all the bonds of civil duty And of religion; pressed how just it was, How honourable, how glorious to entrap A common enemy, who had destroyed Such numbers of our nation: and the priest Was not behind, but ever at my ear, Preaching how meritorious with the gods It would be to ensuare an irreligious Dishonourer of Dagon: what had I To oppose against such powerful arguments? Only my love of thee held long debate, And combated in silence all these reasons With hard contest: at length that grounded maxim So rife and celebrated in the mouths Of wisest men, that to the public good Private respects must yield, with grave authority Took full possession of me and prevailed; Virtue, as I thought, truth, duty, so enjoining.

SAMSON.

I thought where all thy circling wiles would end, In feigned religion, smooth hypocrisy. But had thy love, still odiously pretended, Been, as it ought, sincere, it would have taught thee Far other reasonings, brought forth other deeds. I, before all the daughters of my tribe, And of my nation, chose thee from among My enemies, loved thee, as too well thou knew'st. Too well, unbosomed all my secrets to thee,. Not out of levity, but overpowered By thy request, who could deny thee nothing; Yet now am judged an enemy. Why then Didst thou at first receive me for thy husband, Then, as since then, thy country's foe professed? Being once a wife, for me thou wast to leave Parents and country; nor was I their subject, Nor under their protection, but my own, Thou mine, not theirs: if aught against my life Thy country sought of thee, it sought unjustly, Against the law of nature, law of nations, No more thy country, but an impious crew Of men conspiring to uphold their state By worse than hostile deeds, violating the ends For which our country is a name so dear; Not therefore to be obeyed. But zeal moved thee; To please thy gods thou didst it: gods unable To acquit themselves, and prosecute their foes But by ungodly deeds, the contradiction Of their own deity, gods cannot be: Less therefore to be pleased, obeyed, or feared. These false pretexts and varnished colours failing, Bare in thy guilt how foul must thou appear!

DALILA.

In argument with men a woman ever Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.

SAMSON.

For want of words, no doubt, or lack of breath; Witness when I was worried with thy peals.

DALILA.

I was a fool, too rash, and quite mistaken In what I thought would have succeeded best. Let me obtain forgiveness of thee, Samson; Afford me place to show what recompense Towards thee I intend for what I have misdone, Misguided; only what remains past cure Bear not too sensibly, nor still insist To afflict thyself in vain : though sight be lost, Life yet hath many solaces, enjoyed Where other senses want not their delights At home in leisure and domestic ease, Exempt from many a care and chance to which Eyesight exposes daily men abroad. I to the lords will intercede, not, doubting Their favourable ear, that I may fetch thee From forth this loathsome prison-house, to abide With me, where my redoubled love and care With nursing diligence, to me glad office, May ever tend about thee to old age With all things grateful cheered, and so supplied, That what by me thou hast lost thou least shalt miss.

SAMSON.

No, no, of my condition take no care ; It fits not; thou and I long since are twain; Nor think me so unwary or accursed, To bring my feet again into the snare Where once I have been caught; I know thy trains Though dearly to my cost, thy gins, and toils; Thy fair enchanted cup and warbling charms No more on me have power; their force is nulled, So much of adder's wisdom I have learned To fence my ear against thy sorceries. If in my flower of youth and strength, when all men Loved, honoured, feared me, thou alone couldst hate me Thy husband, slight me, sell me, and forego me, How wouldst thou use me now, blind, and thereby Deceivable in most things as a child Helpless, thence easily contemned, and scorned, And last neglected! How wouldst thou insult,

When I must live uxorious to thy will In perfect thraldom; how again betray me, Bearing my words and doings to the lords To gloss upon, and, censuring, frown or smile? This jail I count the house of liberty To thine, whose doors my fect shall never enter.

DALILA.

Let me approach at least, and touch thy hand.

SAMSON.

Not for thy life, lest fierce remembraned wake My sudden rage to tear thee joint by joint. At distance I forgive thee, go with that; Bewail thy falsehood, and the pious works It hath brought forth to make thee memorable Among illustrious women, faithful wives; Cherish thy hastened widowhood with the gold Of matrimonial treason: so farewell.

DALILA.

I see thou art implacable, more deaf To prayers than winds and seas; yet winds to seas Are reconciled at length, and sea to shore: Thy anger, unappeasable, still rages, Eternal tempest never to be calmed. Why do I humble thus myself, and, suing For peace, reap nothing but repulse and hate? Bid go with evil omen, and the brand Of infamy upon my name denounced? To mix with thy concernments I desist Henceforth, nor too much disapprove my own. Fame, if not double-faced, is double-mouthed, And with contrary blast proclaims most deeds: On both his wings, one black, the other white. Bears greatest names in his wild airy flight. My name perhaps among the circumcised In Dan, in Judah, and the bordering tribes To all posterity may stand defamed, With malediction mentioned, and the blot Of falsehood most unconjugal traduced. But in my country where I most desire (In Ecron, Gaza, Asdod, and in Gath),

I shall be named among the famousest Of women, sung at solemn festivals, Living and dead recorded, who, to save Her country from a fierce destroyer, chose Above the faith of wedlock bands; my tomb With odours visited and annual flowers; Not less renowned than in Mount Ephraim Jael, who with inhospitable guile Smote Sisera sleeping through the temples nailed. Nor shall I count it heinous to enjoy The public marks of honour and reward Conferred upon me, for the piety Which to my country I was judged to have shown. At this who ever envies or repines, I leave him to his lot, and like my own.

CHORUS.

She's gone, a manifest serpent by her sting Discovered in the end, till now concealed.

SAMSON.

So let her go; God sent her to debase me, And aggravate my folly, who committed To such a viper his most sacred trust Of secresy, my safety, and my life. CHORUS.

Yet beauty, though injurious, hath strange power, After offence returning, to regain Love once possessed, nor can be easily Repulsed without much inward passion felt, And secret sting of amorous remorse.

SAMSON.

Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end, Not wedlock-treachery endangering life. CHORUS.

It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit, Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest merit, That woman's love can win or long inherit; But what it is, hard is to say, Harder to hit (Which way soever men refer it); Much like thy riddle, Samson, in one day Or seven, though one should musing sit.

If any of these, or all, the Timnian bride Had not so soon preferred Thy paranymph, worthless to thee compared, Successor in thy bed, Nor both so loosely disallied Their nuptials, nor this last so treacherously Had shorn the fatal harvest of thy head. Is it for that such outward ornament Was lavished on their sex, that inward gifts Were left for haste unfinished, judgment scant, Capacity not raised to apprehend Or value what is best In choice, but oftest to affect the wrong? Or was too much of self-love mixed. Of constancy no root infixed, That either they love nothing, or not long? Whate'er it be, to wisest men and best

Seeming at first all heavenly under virgin veil,
Soft, modest, meek, demure,
Once joined, the contrary she proves, a thorn
Intestine, far within defensive arms
A cleaving mischief, in his way to virtue
Adverse and turbulent, or by her charms
Draws him awry enslaved
With dotage, and his sense depraved
To folly and shameful deeds which ruin ends.
What pilot so expert but needs must wreck
Embarked with such a steers-mate at the helm?

Favoured of Heaven who finds
One virtuous rarely found,
That in domestic good combines;
Happy that house! his way to peace is smooth:
But virtue, which breaks through all opposition,
And all temptation can remove,
Most shines, and most is acceptable above.

Therefore God's universal law Gave to the man despotic power Over his female in due awe, Nor from that right to part an hour, Smile she or lour; So shall he least confusion draw On his whole life, not swayed

By female usurpation, or dismayed.

But had we best retire? I see a storm.

SAMSON.

Fair days have oft contracted wind and rain.

CHORUS.

But this another kind of tempest brings.

SAMSON.

Be less abstruse: my riddling days are past.

Look now for no enchanting voice, nor fear
The bait of honeyed words: a rougher tongue
Draws hitherward; I know him by his stride;
The gaint Harapha of Gath; his look
Haughty as is his pile high-built and proud.
Comes he in peace? What wind hath blown him hither
I less conjecture than when first I saw
The sumptuous Dalila floating this way:
His habit carries peace, his brown defiance.

SAMSON.

Or peace or not, alike to me he comes.

His fraught we soon shall know: he now arrives.

I come not, Samson, to condole thy chance, As these perhaps, yet wish it had not been, Though for no friendly intent. I am of Gath; Men call me Harapha, of stock renowned As Og or Anak, and the Emims old That Kiriathaim held: thou know'st me now, If thou at all art known. Much I have heard Of thy prodigious might, and feats performed Incredible to me; in this displeased, That I was never present on the place Of those encounters, where we might have tried Each other's force in camp or listed field; And now am come to see of whom such noise Hath walked about, and each limb to survey, If thy appearance answer loud report.

SAMSON.

The way to know were not to see but taste.

Dost thou already single me? I thought Gyves and the mill had tamed thee. Oh, that fortune Had brought me to the field, where thou art famed To have wrought such wonders with an ass's jaw! I should have forced thee soon with other arms, Or left thy careass where the ass lay thrown: So had the glory of prowess been recovered To Palestine, won by a Philistine From the unforeskinned race, of whom thou bear'st The highest name for valiant acts; that honour Certain to have won by mortal duel from thee, I lose, prevented by thy eyes put out.

SAMSON.

Boast not of what thou wouldst have done, but do What then thou wouldst; thou seest it in thy hand.

HARAPHA.

To combat with a blind man I disdain, And thou hast need much washing to be touched. SAMSON.

Such usage as your honourable lords Afford me, assassinated and betrayed, Who durst not with their whole united powers In fight withstand me single and unarmed, Nor in the house with chamber ambushes Close-banded durst attack me, no, not sleeping, Till they had hired a woman with their gold, Breaking her marriage faith to circumvent me. Therefore, without feigned shifts, let be assigned Some narrow place enclosed, where sight may give the Or rather flight, no great advantage on me; Then put on all thy gorgeous arms, thy helmet And brigandine of brass, thy broad habergeon, Vant-brass and greaves, and gauntlet, add thy spear, A weaver's beam, and seven-times-folded shield, I only with an oaken staff will meet thee, And raise such outcries on thy clattered iron. Which long shall not withhold me from thy head.

That in a little time while breath remains thee, Thou oft shalt wish thyself at Gath, to boast Again in safety what thou wouldst have done To Samson, but shalt never see Gath more.

HARAPHA.

Thou durst not thus disparage glorious arms,
Which greatest heroes have in battle worn,
Their ornament and safety, had not spells
And black enchantments, some magician's art,
Armed thee, or charmed thee strong, which thou from Heaven

Feign'dst at thy birth was given thee in thy hair, Where strength can least abide, though all thy hairs Were bristles, ranged like those that ridge the back Of chafed wild boars, or ruffled porcupines.

SAMSON.

I know no spells, use no forbidden arts; My trust is in the living God, who gave me At my nativity this strength, diffused No less through all my sinews, joints, and bones, Than thine, while I preserved these locks unshorn, The pledge of my unviolated vow. For proof hereof, if Dagon be thy god, Go to his temple, invocate his aid With solemnest devotion, spread before him How highly it concerns his glory now To frustrate and dissolve these magic spells, Which I to be the power of Israel's God Avow, and challenge Dagon to the test, Offering to combat thee his champion bold, With the utmost of his godhead seconded: Then thou shalt see, or rather to thy sorrow Soon feel, whose God is strongest, thine or mine.

HARAPHA.

Presume not on thy God, whate'er he be; Thee he regards not, owns not, hath cut off Quite from his people, and delivered up Into thy enemies' hand, permitted them To put out both thine eyes, and fettered send thee Into the common prison, there to grind Among the slaves and asses, thy comrades,

As good for nothing else, no better service With those thy boisterous locks, no worthy match For valor to assail, nor by the sword Of noble warrior, so to stain his honour, But by the barber's razor best subdued.

SAMSON.

All these indignities, for such they are From thine, these evils I deserve and more, Acknowledge them from God inflicted on me Justly, yet despair not of his final pardon Whose ear is ever open, and his eye Gracious to re-admit the suppliant; In confidence whereof I once again Defy thee to the trial of mortal fight, By combat to decide whose God is God, Thine or whom I with Israel's sons adore.

HARAPHA.

Fair honour that thou dost thy God, in trusting He will accept thee to defend his cause, A murderer, a revolter, and a robber.

SAMSON.

Tongue-doughty giant, how dost thou prove me these?

HARAPHA.

Is not thy nation subject to our lords? Their magistrates confessed it, when they took thee As a league-breaker, and delivered bound Into our hands: for hadst thou not committed Notorious murder on those thirty men At Ascalon, who never did thee harm, Then, like a robber, stripp'dst them of their robes? The Philistines, when thou hadst broke the league, Went up with arméd power thee only seeking, To others did no violence nor spoil.

SAMSON.

Among the daughters of the Philistines I chose a wife, which argued me no foe; And in your city held my nuptial feast: But your ill-meaning politician lords, Under pretence of bridal friends and guests, Appointed to await me thirty spies,

1+75;

Who threatening cruel death constrained the bride To wring from me and tell to them my secret, That solved the riddle which I had proposed. When I perceived all set on enmity, As on my enemies, wherever chanced, I used hostility, and took their spoil To pay my underminers in their coin. My nation was subjected to your lords; It was the force of conquest; force with force Is well ejected when the conquered can. But I, a private person, whom my country As a league-breaker gave up bound, presumed Single rebellion, and did hostile acts. I was no private, but a person raised With strength sufficient and command from Heaven To free my country; if their servile minds Me their deliverer sent would not receive, But to their masters gave me up for nought, The unworthier they; whence to this day they serve. I was to do my part from Heaven assigned, And had performed it, if my known offence Had not disabled me, not all your force: These shifts refuted, answer thy appellant Though by his blindness maimed for high attempts, Who now defies thee thrice to single fight, As a petty enterprise of small enforce.

HARAPHA.

With thee! a man condemned, a slave enrolled, Due by the law to capital punishment? To fight with thee no man of arms will deign.

SAMSON.

Cam'st thou for this, vain boaster, to survey me, To descant on my strength, and give thy verdiet? Come nearer, part not hence so slight informed; But take good heed my hand survey not thee.

HARAPHA.

O Baal-zebub! can my ears unused Hear these dishonours, and not render death?

SAMSON.

No man withholds thee, nothing from thy hand

Fear I incurable; bring up thy van, My heels are fettered, but my fist is free.

HARAPHA.

This in-olence other kind of answer fits.

SAMSON.

Go, baffled coward! lest I run upon thee, Though in these chains, bulk without spirit vast, And with one buffet lay thy structure low, Or swing thee in the air, then dash thee down To the hazard of thy brains and shattered sides.

HARAPHA.

By Astaroth! ere long thou shalt lament These braveries in irons loaden on thee.

CHORUS

His giantship is gone somewhat crest-fallen, Stalking with less unconscionable strides, And lower looks, but in a sultry chafe.

SAMSON.

I dread him not, nor all his giant brood, Though fame divulge him father of five sons, All of gigantic size, Goliah chief.

CHORUS.

He will directly to the lords, I fear, And with malicious counsel stir them up Some way or other yet further to afflict thee.

SAMSON.

He must allege some cause, and offered fight Will not dare mention, lest a question rise Whether he durst accept the offer or not, And that he durst not plain enough appeared. Much more affliction than already felt They cannot well impose, nor I sustain; If they intend advantage of my labors, The work of many hands, which earns my keeping With no small profit daily to my owners. But come what will, my deadliest foe will prove My speediest friend, by death to rid me hence: The worst that he can give, to me the best. Yet so it may fall out, because their end Is hate, not help to me, it may with mine Draw their own ruin who attempt the deed.

CHORUS.

Oh, how comely it is, and how reviving To the spirits of just men long oppressed! When God into the hands of their deliverer Puts invincible might To quell the mighty of the earth, the oppressor. The brute and boisterous force of violent men Hardy and industrious to support Tyrannic power, but raging to pursue The righteous and all such as honour truth; He all their ammunition And feats of war defeats With plain heroic magnitude of mind And celestial vigour armed, Their armouries and magazines contemns, Renders them useless, while With winged expedition, Swift as the lightning glance, he executes His errand on the wicked, who, surprised, Lose their defence, distracted and amazed. But patience is more oft the exercise

Of saints, the trial of their fortitude, Making them each his own deliverer, And victor over all That tyranny or fortune can inflict. Either of these is in thy lot, Samson, with might endued Above the sons of men; but sight bereaved May chance to number thee with those Whom patience finally must crown.

This idol's day hath been to thee no day of rest, Labouring thy mind More than the working day thy hands. And yet, perhaps, more trouble is behind, For I descry this way Some other tending, in his hand

A sceptre or quaint staff he bears, Comes on amain, speed in his look.

By his habit I discern him now

A public officer, and now at hand. His message will be short and voluble.

OFFICER.

Hebrews, the prisoner Samson here I seek.

His manacles remark him, there he sits.

Samson, to thee our lords thus bid me say:
This day to Dagon is a solemn feast,
With sacrifices, triumph, pomp, and games;
Thy strength they know surpassing human rate,
And now some public proof thereof require
To honour this great feast, and great assembly;
Rise therefore with all speed, and come along,
Where I will see thee heartened and fresh clad,
To appear as fits before the illustrious lords.

SAMSON.

Thou know'st I am an Hebrew, therefore tell them, Our law forbids at their religious rites My presence; for that cause I cannot come.

OFFICER.

This answer, be assured, will not content them.

Have they not sword-players, and every sort Of gymnic artists, wrestlers, riders, runners, Jugglers and dancers, antics, mummers, mimics, But they must pick me out with shackles tired, And over-laboured at their public mill, To make them sport with blind activity? Do they not seek occasion of new quarrels On my refusal to distress me more, Or make a game of my calamities? Return the way thou cam'st, I will not come.

OFFICER.

Regard thyself: this will offend them highly SAMSON.

Myself? my conscience and internal peace. Can they think me so broken, so debased With corporal servitude, that my mind ever Will condescend to such absurd commands?

Although their drudge, to be their fool or jester, And in my midst of sorrow and heart-grief To show them feats, and play before their god, The worst of all indignities, yet on me Joined with extreme contempt? I will not come.

OFFICER.

My message was imposed on me with speed, Brooks no delay; is this thy resolution?

SAMSON.

So take it with what speed thy message needs. OFFICER.

I am sorry what this stoutness will produce.

SAMSON.

Perhaps thou shalt have cause to sorrow indeed. CHORUS.

Consider, Samson; matters now are strained Up to the heighth, whether to hold or break; He's gone, and who knows how he may report Thy words by adding fuel to the flame? Expect another message more imperious, More lordly thundering than thou well wilt bear.

Shall I abuse this consecrated gift
Of strength, again returning with my hair
After my great transgression; so requite
Favour renewed, and add a greater sin
By prostituting holy things to idols?
A Nazarite in place abominable
Vaunting my strength in honour to their Dagon?
Besides how vile, contemptible, ridiculous,
What act more execrably unclean, profane?

CHORUS.

Yet with this strength thou serv'st the Philistines

Idolatrous, uncircumcised, unclean.

Not in their idol-worship, but by labour Honest and lawful to deserve my food Of those who have me in their civil power.

CHORUS.

Where the heart joins not, outward acts defile not.

SAMSON.

SAMSON.

Where outward force constrains, the sentence holds. But who constrains me to the temple of Dagon, Not dragging? The Philistian lords command: Commands are no restraints. If I obey them, I do it freely, venturing to displease God for the fear of man, and man prefer, Set God behind; which in his jealousy Shall never, unrepented, find forgiveness. Yet that he may dispense with me or thee Present in temples at idolatrous rites For some important cause, thou need'st not doubt.

CHORUS.

How thou wilt here come off surmounts my reach.

Be of good courage, I begin to feel Some rousing motions in me which dispose To something extraordinary my thoughts. I with this messenger will go along, Nothing to do, be sure, that may dishonour Our law, or stain my vow of Nazarite. If there be aught of presage in the mind, This day will be remarkable in my life By some great act, or of my days the last.

In time thou hast resolved, the man returns.

OFFICER.

Samson, this second message from our lords To thee I am bid say. Art thou our slave, Our captive, at the public mill our drudge, And dar'st thou at our sending and command Dispute thy coming? Come without delay; Or we shall find such engines to assail And hamper thee, as thou shalt come of force, Though thou wert firmlier fastened than a rock.

SAMSON.

I could be well content to try their art,
Which to no few of them would prove pernicious.
Yet knowing their advantages too many,
Because they shall not trail me through their streets

Like a wild beast, I am content to go.

Masters' commands come with a power resistless
To such as owe them absolute subjection;
And for a life who will not change his purpose
(So mutable are all the ways of men)
Yet this be sure, in nothing to comply
Scandalous or forbidden in our law.

OFFICER.

I praise thy resolution; doff these links: By this compliance thou wilt win the lords To favour, and perhaps to set thee free.

SAMSON.

Brethren, farewell; your company along I will not wish, lest it perhaps offend them To see me girt with friends; and how the sight Of me as of a common enemy, So dreaded once, may now exasperate them I know not. Lords are lordliest in their wine; And the well-feasted priest then soonest fired With zeal, if aught religion seem concerned; No less the people on their holy-days Impetuous, insolent, unquenchable: Happen what may, of me expect to hear Nothing dishonourable, impure, unworthy Our God, our law, my nation, or myself, The last of me or no I cannot warrant.

Go, and the Holy One
Of Israel be thy guide
To what may serve his glory best, and spread his name
Great among the heathen round;
Send thee the angel of thy birth, to stand
Fast by thy side, who from thy father's field
Rode up in flames after his message told
Of thy conception, and be now a shield
Of fire; that Spirit that first rushed on thee
In the camp of Dan
Be efficacious in thee now at need.
For never was from Heaven imparted
Measure of strength so great to mortal seed,

As in thy wondrous actions hath been seen. But wherefore comes old Manoah in such haste With youthful steps? much livelier than erewhile He seems; supposing here to find his son, Or of him bringing to us some glad news?

Peace with you, brethren; my inducement hither Was not at present here to find my son, By order of the lords new parted hence To come and play before them at their feast. I heard all as I came, the city rings, And numbers thither flock, I had no will, Lest I should see him forced to things unseemly. But that which moved my coming now, was chiefly To give ye part with me what hope I have With good success to work his liberty.

CHORUS.

That hope would much rejoice us to partake With thee; say, reverend sire, we thirst to hear.

MANOAH.

I have attempted one by one the lords Either at home, or through the high street passing. With supplication prone and father's tears, To accept of ransom for my son their prisoner. Some much averse I found and wondrous harsh. Contemptuous, proud, set on revenge and spite; That part most reverenced Dagon and his priests: Others more moderate seeming, but their aim Private reward, for which both god and state They easily would set to sale; a third More generous far and civil, who confessed They had enough revenged, having reduced Their foe to misery beneath their fears, The rest was magnanimity to remit, If some convenient ransom were proposed. What noise or shout was that? it tore the sky. CHORUS.

Doubtless the people shouting to behold Their once great dread, captive and blind before them, Or at some proof of strength before them shown. MANOAH.

His ransom, if my whole inheritance
May compass it, shall willingly be paid
And numbered down: much rather I shall choose
To live the poorest in my tribe, than richest,
And he in that calamitous prison left.
No, I am fixed not to part hence without him.
For his redemption all my patrimony,
If need be, I am ready to forego
And quit: not wanting him, I shall want nothing.

CHORUS.

Fathers are wont to lay up for their sons, Thou for thy son art bent to lay out all; Sons wont to nurse their parents in old age, Thou in old age car'st how to nurse thy son, Made older than thy age through eyesight lost.

MANOAH.

It shall be my delight to tend his eyes,
And view him sitting in the house, ennobled
With all those high exploits by him achieved,
And on his shoulders waving down those locks,
That of a nation armed the strength contained;
And I persuade me God had not permitted
His strength again to grow up with his hair
Garrisoned round about him like a camp
Of faithful soldiery, were not his purpose
To use him further yet in some great service,
Not to sit idle with so great a gift
Useless, and thence ridiculous about him.
And since his strength with eyesight was not lost,
God will restore him eyesight to his strength.

CHORUS.

Thy hopes are not ill-founded, nor seem vain Of his delivery, and thy joy thereon Conceived, agreeable to a father's love, In both which we, as next, participate.

MANOAH.

I know your friendly minds, and—Oh, what noise! Mercy of Heaven! what hideous noise was that? Horribly loud, unlike the former shout.

CHORUS.

Noise call you it, or universal groan, As if the whole inhabitation perished! Blood, death, and deathful deeds are in that noise, Ruin, destruction at the utmost point.

MANOAH.

Of ruin, indeed, methought I heard the noise: Oh! it continues; they have slain my son!

CHORUS.

Thy son is rather slaying them; that outcry From slaughter of one foe could not ascend.

MANOAH.

Some dismal accident it needs must be: What shall we do, stay here or run and see?

CHORUS.

Best keep together here, lest running thither We unawares run into danger's mouth. This evil on the Philistines is fallen; From whom could else a general cry be heard? The sufferers then will scarce molest us here, From other hands we need not much to fear. What if his eyesight (for to Israel's God Nothing is hard) by miracle restored, He now be dealing dole among his foes, And over heaps of slaughtered walk his way?

MANOAH.

That were a joy presumptuous to be thought. CHORUS.

Yet God hath wrought things as incredible For his people of old; what hinders now?

MANOAH.

He can, I know, but doubt to think he will; Yet hope would fain subscribe, and tempts belief. A little stay will bring some notice hither.

CHORUS.

Of good or bad so great, of bad the sooner, For evil news rides post, while good news baits. And to our wish I see one hither speeding, An Hebrew, as I guess, and of our tribe. MESSENGER.

Oh, whither shall I run, or which way fly
The sight of this so horrid spectacle,
Which erst my eyes beheld and yet behold?
For dire imagination still pursues me.
But providence or instinct of nature seems,
Or reason though disturbed, and scarce consulted,
To have guided me aright, I know not how,
To thee first, reverend Manoah, and to these
My countrymen, whom here I knew remaining
As at some distance from the place of horror,
So in the sad event too much concerned.

MANOAH.

The accident was loud, and here before thee With rueful cry, yet what it was we hear not; No preface needs, thou seest we long to know.

MESSENGER.

It would burst forth, but I recover breath And sense distract, to know well what I utter.

MANOAH.

Tell us the sum; the circumstance defer.

MESSENGER.

Gaza yet stands, but all her sons are fallen; All in a moment overwhelmed and fallen.

MANOAH.

Sad, but thou know'st to Israelites not saddest, The desolation of a hostile city.

MESSENGER.

Feed on that first: there may in grief be surfeit.

MANOAII.

Relate by whom?

MESSENGER.

By Samson.

MANOAH.

That still lessens

The sorrow, and converts it nigh to joy.

MEESENGER.

Ah! Manoah, I refrain too suddenly To utter what will come at last too soon; Lest evil tidings with too rude irruption Hitting thy aged ear should pierce too deep.

MANOAH.

Suspense in news is torture; speak them out.

MESSENGER.

Take then the worst in brief; Samson is dead!

The worst indeed. Oh, all my hope's defeated To free him hence! but death, who sets all free, Hath paid his ransom now and full discharge. What windy joy this day had I conceived, Hopeful of his delivery, which now proves Abortive as the first-born bloom of spring Nipped with the lagging rear of winter's frost! Yet ere I give the reins to grief, say first, How died he? death to life is crown or shame. All by him fell, thou say'st; by whom fell he? What glorious hand gave Samson his death's wound?

MESSENGER.

Unwounded of his enemies he fell.

MANOAH.

Wearied with slaughter then, or how? explain.

MESSENGER.

By his own hands.

MANOAH.

Self-violence? What cause

Brought him so soon at variance with himself Among his foes?

MESSENGER.
Inevitable cause

At once both to destroy and be destroyed: The edifice, where all were met to see him, Upon their heads and on his own he pulled.

MANOAH.

O lastly over-strong against thyself! A dreadful way thou took'st to thy revenge. More than enough we know; but while things yet Are in confusion, give us, if thou canst, Eye-witness of what first or last was done, Relation more particular and distinct.

MESSENGER.

Occasions drew me early to this city, And as the gates I entered with sunrise, The morning trumpets festival proclaimed Through each high street: little I had despatched, When all abroad was rumoured that this day Samson should be brought forth, to show the people Proof of his mighty strength in feats and games; I sorrowed at his captive state, but minded Not to be absent at that spectacle. The building was a spacious theatre, Half round, on two main pillars vaulted high, With seats where all the lords and each degree Of sort, might sit in order to behold; The other side was open, where the throng On banks and scaffolds under sky might stand; I among these aloof obscurely stood. The feast and noon grew high, and sacrifice Had filled their hearts with mirth, high cheer, and wine, When to their sports they turned. Immediately Was Samson as a public servant brought, In their state livery clad: before him pipes And timbrels; on each side went armed guards, Both horse and foot; before him and behind, Archers and slingers, cataphracts and spears. At sight of him the people with a shout Rifted the air, clamouring their god with praise, Who had made their dreadful enemy their thrall. He, patient but undaunted, where they led him, Came to the place, and what was set before him, Which without help of eye might be assayed, To heave, pull, draw, or break, he still performed All with incredible, stupendous force, None daring to appear antagonist. At length for intermission sake they led him Between the pillars; he his guide requested (For so from such as nearer stood we heard), As overtired, to let him lean awhile With both his arms on those two massy pillars, That to the archéd roof gave main support.

He, unsuspicious, led him; which when Samson Felt in his arms, with head awhile inclined. And eyes fast fixed, he stood, as one who prayed, Or some great matter in his mind revolved: At last, with head erect, thus cried aloud: " Hitherto, lords, what your commands imposed I have performed, as reason was, obeying, Not without wonder or delight beheld: Now, of my own accord, such other trial I mean to show you of my strength, yet greater: As with amaze shall strike all who behold." This uttered, straining all his nerves he bowed. As with the force of winds and waters pent, When mountains tremble, those two massy pillars With horrible convulsion to and fro He tugged, he shook, till down they came and drew The whole roof after them, with burst of thunder, Upon the heads of all who sat beneath, Lords, ladies, captains, counsellors, or priests, Their choice nobility and flower, not only Of this but each Philistian city round Met from all parts to solemnize this feast. Samson, with these immixed, inevitably Pulled down the same destruction on himself: The vulgar only 'scaped who stood without.

CHORUS.

Oh, dearly bought revenge, yet glorious!

Living or dying thou hast fulfilled

The work for which thou wast foretold

To Israel, and now liest victorious

Among thy slain, self-killed,

Not willingly, but tangled in the fold

Of dire necessity, whose law in death conjoined

Thee with thy slaughtered foes in number more

Than all thy life had slain before.

SEMICHORUS.

While their hearts were jocund and sublime, Drunk with idolatry, drunk with wine, And fat regorged of bulls and goats, Chanting their idol, and preferring Before our living Dread who dwells
In Silo, his bright sanctuary;
Among them he a spirit of frenzy sent,
Who hurt their minds,
And urged them on with mad desire
To call in haste for their destroyer;
They, only set on sport and play,
Unweetingly importuned
Their own destruction to come speedy upon them.
So fond are mortal men,
Fallen into wrath divine,
As their own ruin on themselves to invite,
Insensate left, or to sense reprobate,
And with blindness internal struck.

SEMICHORUS.

But he, though blind of sight, Despised and thought extinguished quite, With inward eyes illuminated, His fiery virtue roused From under ashes into sudden flame; And as an evening dragon came, Assailant on the perchéd roosts, And nests in order ranged Of tame villatic fowl; but as an eagle His cloudless thunder bolted on their heads So virtue given for lost, Depressed, and overthrown, as seemed, Like that self-begotten bird, In the Arabian woods imbost, That no second knows nor third, And lay erewhile a holocaust, From out her ashy womb now teemed, Revives, reflourishes, then vigorous most When most unactive deemed, And though her body die, her fame survives, A secular bird, ages of lives. MANOAH.

Come, come! no time for lamentation now; Nor much more cause; Samson hath quit himself Like Samson, and heroically hath finished

A life heroic, on his enemies Fully revenged, hath left them years of mourning And lamentation to the sons of Caphtor Through all Philistian bounds; to Israel Honour hath left, and freedom, let but them Find courage to lay hold on this occasion; To himself and father's house eternal fame; And which is best and happiest yet, all this With God not parted from him, as was feared, But favouring and assisting to the end. Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail Or knock the breast; no weakness, no contempt, Dispraise, or blame; nothing but well and fair, And what may quiet us in a death so noble. Let us go find the body where it lies Soaked in his enemies' blood; and from the stream, With lavers pure, and cleansing herbs, wash off The clotted gore. I with what speed the while (Gaza is not in plight to say us nay) Will send for all my kindred, all my friends, To fetch him hence, and solemnly attend With silent obsequy and funeral train Home to his father's house: there will I build him A monument, and plant it round with shade Of laurel ever green, and branching palm, With all his trophies hung, and acts enrolled In copious legend, or sweet lyric song. Thither shall all the valiant youth resort, And from his memory inflame their breasts To matchless valour, and adventures high; The virgins also shall, on feastful days, Visit his tomb with flowers, only bewailing His lot unfortunate in nuptial choice, From whence captivity and loss of eyes.

All is best, though we oft doubt, What the unsearchable dispose Of highest wisdom brings about, And ever best found in the close. Oft he seems to hide his face,

But unexpectedly returns,
And to his faithful champion hath in place
Bore witness gloriously; whence Gaza mourns,
And all that band them to resist
His uncontrollable intent;
His servants he, with new acquist
Of true experience from this great event,
With peace and consolation hath dismissed,
And calm of mind all passion spent.

ANNO ÆTATIS XVII.

ON THE DEATH OF A FAIR INFANT DYING OF A COUGH.

I.

O FAIREST flower! no sooner blown but blasted, Soft silken primrose fading timelessly, Summer's chief honour, if thou hadst out-lasted Bleak Winter's force that made thy blossom dry; For he being amorous on that lovely dye

That did thy cheek envermeil, thought to kiss, But killed, alas! and then bewailed his fatal bliss.

For since grim Aquilo, his charioteer, By boisterous rape the Athenian damsel got, He thought it touched his deity full near, If likewise he some fair one wedded not, Thereby to wipe away the infamous blot

Of long-uncoupled bed, and childless eld, Which 'mongst the wanton gods a foul reproach was held. HI.

So mounting up in icy-pearled car, Through middle empire of the freezing air He wandered long, till thee he spied from far; There ended was his quest, there ceased his care. Down he descended from his snow-soft chair,

But all unwares with his cold-kind embrace Unhoused thy virgin soul from her fair biding place.

IV.

Yet art thou not inglorious in thy fate;
For so Apollo, with unweeting hand,
Whilome did slay his dearly-lovéd mate,
Young Hyacinth, born on Eurotas' strand,
Young Hyacinth, the pride of Spartan land;
But then transformed him to a purple flower:

Alack! that so to change thee Winter had no power.

v.

Yet can I not persuade me thou art dead, Or that thy corse corrupts in earth's dark womb, Or that thy beauties lie in wormy bed, Hid from the world in a low-delvéd tomb; Could Heaven for pity be so strictly doom?

Oh, no! for something in thy face did shine Above mortality, that showed thou wast divine.

VI.

Resolve me then, O soul most surely blest!
(If so it be that thou these plaints dost hear);
Tell me, bright spirit, where er thou hoverest,
Whether above that high first-moving sphere,
Or in the Elysian fields (if such there were);

Oh, say me true, if thou wert moral wight, And why from us so quickly thou didst take thy flight?

VII.

Wert thou some star which from the ruined roof Of shaked Olympus by mischance didst fall; Which careful Jove in nature's true behoof Took up, and in fit place did reinstal? Or did of late earth's sons besiege the wall

Of sheeny Heaven, and thou some goddess fled Amongst us here below to hide thy nectared head?

VIII.

Or wert thou that just maid who once before Forsook the hated earth, oh, tell me sooth! And cam'st again to visit us once more? Or wert thou that sweet smiling youth? Or that crowned matron sage, white-robéd Truth?

Or any other of that heavenly brood Let down in cloudy throne to do the world some good?

Or wert thou of the golden-wingéd host,
Who, having clad thyself in human weed,
To earth from thy prefixéd seat didst host,
And after short abode fly back with speed,
As if to show what creatures Heaven doth breed,
Thereby to set the hearts of more on five

Thereby to set the hearts of men on fire, To scorn the sordid world, and unto Heaven aspire?

X.

But oh! why didst thou not stay here below To bless us with thy Heaven-loved innocence, To slake his wrath whom sin hath made our foe, To turn swift-rushing black perdition hence, Or drive away the slaughtering pestilence,

To stand 'twixt us and our deservéd smart? But thou canst best perform that office where thou art.

XI.

Then thou, the mother of so sweet a child, Her false imagined loss cease to lament, And wisely learn to curb thy sorrows wild; Think what a present thou to God hast sent, And render him with patience what he lent;

This if thou do, he will an offspring give,
That till the world's last end shall make thy name to live.

II.

ANNO ÆTATIS XIX.

[At a vacation exercise in the College, part Latin, part English. The Latin speeches ended, the English thus began.]

HAIL, native language! that by sinews weak Didst move my first endeavouring tongue to speak,

And mad'st imperfect words with childish trips, Half unpronounced, slide through my infant lips, Driving dumb silence from the portal door, Where he had mutely sat two years before: Here I salute thee, and thy pardon ask, That now I use thee in my latter task: Small loss it is that thence can come unto thee. I know my tongue but little grace can do thee: Thou need'st not be ambitious to be first, Believe me I have thither packed the worst; And, if it happen as I did forecast, The daintiest dishes shall be served up last. I pray thee then deny me not thy aid For this same small neglect that I have made; But haste thee straight to do me once a pleasure, And from thy wardrobe bring thy chiefest treasure. Not those new-fangled toys and trimming slight Which takes our late fantastics with delight, But cull those richest robes and gay'st attire Which deepest spirits and choicest wits desire. I have some naked thoughts that rove about. And loudly knock to have their passage out; And, weary of their place, do only stay Till thou hast decked them in thy best array. That so they may, without suspect or fears, Fly swiftly to this fair assembly's ears; Yet I had rather, if I were to choose, Thy service in some graver subject use, Such as may make thee search thy coffers round, Before thou clothe my fancy in fit sound: Such where the deep transported mind may soar Above the wheeling poles, and at Heaven's door Look in, and see each blissful deity How he before the thunderous throne doth lie, Listening to what unshorn Apollo sings To the touch of golden wires, while Hebe brings Immortal nectar to ber kingly sire; Then passing through the spheres of watchful fire. And misty regions of wide air next under, And hills of snow and lofts of piled thunder,

May tell at length how green-eyed Neptune raves, In Heaven's defiance mustering all his waves; Then sing of secret things that came to pass When beldame Nature in her cradle was; And last of kings and queens and heroes old, Such as the wise Demodocus once told In solemn songs at king Alcinous' feast While sad Ulysses' soul and all the rest Are held with his melodious harmony In willing chains and sweet captivity. But fie, my wandering muse, how thou dost stray! Expectance calls thee now another way; Thou know'st it must be now thy only bent To keep in compass of thy predicament: Then quick about thy purposed business come, That to the next I may resign my room.

[Then Ens is represented as father of the Predicaments, his ten sons, whereof the eldest stood for Substance with his canons, which Ens, thus speaking, explains.]

Good luck befriend thee, son; for at thy birth The fairy ladies danced upon the earth: Thy drowsy nurse hath sworn she did them spy Come tripping to the room where thou didst lie. And, sweetly singing round about thy bed, Strew all their blessings on thy sleeping head. She heard them give thee this, that thou shouldst still From eyes of mortals walk invisible: Yet there is something that doth force my fear, For once it was my dismal hap to hear A sibyl old, bow-bent with crooked age, That far events full wisely could presage, And in time's long and dark prospective glass Foresaw what future days should bring to pass: Your son, said she (nor can you it prevent), Shall subject be to many an accident. O'er all his brethren he shall reign as king, Yet every one shall make him underling, And those that cannot live from him asunder Ungratefully shall strive to keep him under, In worth and excellence he shall out-go them,

Yet, being above them, he shall be below them: From others he shall stand in need of nothing, Yet on his brothers shall depend for clothing. To find a foe it shall not be his hap, And peace shall lull him in her flowery lap; Yet shall he live in strife, and at his door Devouring war shall never cease to roar: Yea it shall be his natural property To harbour those that are at enmity. What power, what force, what mighty spell, if not Your learned hands, can loose this Gordian knot?

[The next, Quantity and Quality, spake in prose, then Relation was called by his name.]

tion was called by his name.]

RIVERS, arise! whether thou be the son
Of utmost Tweed, or Oose, or gulfy Dun;
Or Trent, who, like some earth-born giant, spreads
His thirty arms along the indented meads;
Or sullen Mole, that runneth underneath;
Or Severn swift, guilty of maidens' death;
Or rocky Avon; or of sedgy Lee;
Or coaly Tine; or ancient hallowed Dee;
Or Humber loud, that keeps the Scythian's name;
Or Medway smooth; or royal towered Thame.

[The rest was prose.]

III.

ON THE MORNING OF CHRIST'S NATIVITY.

Composed 1629.

This is the month, and this the happy morn, Wherein the Son of Heaven's eternal King, Of wedded maid, and virgin mother born, Our great redemption from above did bring; For so the holy sages once did sing,

That he our deadly forfeit should release, And with his Father work us a perpetual peace.

H

That glorious form, that light unsufferable, And that far-beaming blaze of majesty

Wherewith he wont at Heaven's high council-table To sit the midst of Trinal Unity, He laid aside; and here with us to be, Forsook the courts of everlasting day, And chose with us a darksome house of mortal clay.

III.

Say, heavenly muse, shall not thy sacred vein Afford a present to the infant God? Hast thou no verse, no hymn, or solemn strain, To welcome him to this his new abode, Now while the Heaven, by the sun's team untrod, Hath took no print of the approaching light,

And all the spangled host keep watch in squadrons bright?

See how from far upon the eastern road The star-led wizards haste with odours sweet: Oh, run, prevent them with thy humble ode, And lay it lowly at his blessed feet; Have thou the honour first thy Lord to greet, And join thy voice unto the angel quire, From out his secret altar touched with hallowed fire.

THE HYMN.

I.

IT was the winter wild, While the Heaven-born child

All meanly wrapped in the rude manger lies: Nature in awe to him

Had doffed her gaudy trim,

With her great Master so to sympathize: It was no season then for her To wanton with the sun, her lusty paramour. II.

Only with speeches fair She woes the gentle air

To hide her guilty front with innocent snow, And on her naked shame. Pollute with sinful blame,

The saintly veil of maiden white to throw,

Confounded, that her Maker's eyes Should look so near upon her foul deformities.

III.

But he, her fears to cease,

Sent down the meek-eyed Peace;

She, crowned with olive green, came softly sliding

Down through the turning sphere

His ready harbinger,

With turtle wing the amorous clouds dividing, And waving wide her myrtle wand,

She strikes an universal peace through sea and land.

IV.

No war, or battle's sound, Was heard the world around:

The idle spear and shield were high up hung;

The hooked chariot stood,

Unstained with hostile blood;
The trumpet spake not to the arméd throng,

And kings sat still with awful eye, As if they surely knew their sovran Lord was by.

٧.

But peaceful was the night Wherein the Prince of Light

His reign of peace upon the earth began:

The winds with wonder whist Smoothly the waters kissed,

Whispering new joys to the mild ocean,

Who now hath quite forgot to rave,

While birds of calm sit brooding on the charméd wave.

VI.

The stars with deep amaze Stand fixed in stedfast gaze,

Bending one way their precious influence,

And will not take their flight, For all the morning light,

Or Lucifer that often warned them thence;

But in their glimmering orbs did glow,

Until their Lord himself bespake, and bid them go.

VII.

And though the shady gloom Had given day her room,

The sun himself withheld his wonted speed, And hid his head for shame, As his inferior flame

The new enlightened world no more should need; He saw a greater sun appear Than his bright throne, or burning axletree, could bear.

VШ.

The shepherds on the lawn,
Or e'er the point of dawn,
Sat simply chatting in a rustic row,
Full little thought they then,
That the mighty Pan

Was kindly come to live with them below; Perhaps their loves, or else their sheep, Was all that did their silly thoughts so busy keep.

IX.

When such music sweet
Their hearts and ears did greet,
As never was by mortal finger strook,
Divinely-warbled voice
Answering the stringéd noise,
As all their souls in blissful rapture took:
The air, such pleasure loth to lose,
With thousand echoes still prolongs each heavenly close.

Nature that heard such sound,

Beneath the hollow round Of Cynthia's seat, the airy region thrilling, Now was almost won

To think her part was done,

And that her reign had here its last fulfilling; She knew such harmony alone Could hold all heaven and earth in happier union.

XI.

At last surrounds their sight A globe of circular light, That with long beams the

That with long beams the shame-faced night arrayed; The helméd cherubim,

And sworded seraphim,

Are seen in glittering ranks with wings displayed,

Harping in loud and solemn quire, With unexpressive notes to Heaven's new-born Heir.

XII.

Such music (as 'tis said) Before was never made,

But when of old the sons of morning sung,

While the Creator great His constellations set,

And the well-balanced world on hinges hung, And cast the dark foundations deep, And bid the weltering waves their oozy channel keep.

XIII.

Ring out, ye crystal spheres, Once bless our human ears

(If ye have power to touch our senses so),

And let your silver chime Move in melodious time,

And let the base of Heaven's deep organ blow, And with your ninefold harmony Make up full consort to the angelic symphony.

XIV.

For if such holy song Enwrap our fancy long,

Time will run back, and fetch the age of gold,

And speckled Vanity
Will sicken soon and die,

And leprous Sin will melt from earthly mould,

And Hell itself will pass away,

And leave her dolorous mansions to the peering day.

XV.

Yea, Truth and Justice then Will down return to men,

Orbed in a rainbow; and like glories wearing

Mercy will sit between, Throned in celestial sheen,

With radiant feet the tissued clouds down steering,

And Heaven, as at some festival,

Will open wide the gates of her high palace hall.

XVI.

But wisest Fate says no, This must not yet be so,

The babe lies yet in smiling infancy,

That on the bitter cross Must redeem our loss;

So both himself and us to glorify:

Yet first to those ychained in sleep,

The wakeful trump of doom must thunder through the deep,

XVII.

With such a horrid clang As on Mount Sinai rang,

While the red fire and smouldering clouds out brake:

The aged earth aghast, With terror of that blast,

Shall from the surface to the centre shake:

When at the world's last session,

The dreadful Judge in middle air shall spread his throne.

XVIII.

And then at last our bliss Full and perfect is,

But now begins; for, from this happy day,

The old dragon, underground In straiter limits bound,

Not half so far casts his usurpéd sway, And wroth to see his kingdom fail,

Swinges the scaly horror of his folded tail.

XIX.

The oracles are dumb, No voice or hideous hum

Runs through the archéd roof in words deceiving.

Apollo from his shrine Can no more divine,

With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving.

No nightly trance, or breathéd spell, Inspires the pale-eyed priest from the prophetic cell.

XX.

The lonely mountains o'er, And the resounding shore,

A voice of weeping heard and loud lament; From haunted spring, and dale Edged with poplar pale,

The parting genius is with sighing sent;

With flower-inwoven tresses torn

The nymphs in twilight shade of tangled thickets mourn.

XXI.

In consecrated earth, And on the holy hearth,

The Lars and Lemures moan with midnight plaint;

In urns, and altars round, A drear and dying sound

Affrights the Flamens at their service quaint;

And the chill marble seems to sweat,

While each peculiar power foregoes his wonted seat.

Peor and Baälim

Forsake their temples dim,

With that twice battered god of Palestine;

And mooned Ashtaroth,

Heaven's queen and mother both,

Now sits not girt with tapers' holy shine;

The Lybic Hammon shrinks his horn,

In vain the Tyrian maids their wounded Thammuz mourn.

And sullen Moloch fled, Hath left in shadows dread

His burning idol all of blackest hue;

In vain with cymbals' ring They call the grisly king,

In dismal dance about the furnace blue;

The brutish gods of Nile as fast,

Isis, and Orus, and the dog Anubis, haste.

XXIV.

Nor is Osiris seen

In Memphian grove or green,

Trampling the unshowered grass with lowings loud:

Nor can he be at rest

Within his sacred chest,

Nought but profoundest hell can be his shroud;

In vain with timbrelled anthems dark
The sable-stoléd sorcerers bear his worshipped ark.

XXV.

He feels from Juda's land The dreaded infant's hand,

The rays of Bethlehem blind his dusky eyn; Nor all the gods beside,

Longer dare abide,

Not Typhon huge ending in snaky twine: Our Babe to show his Godhead true, Can in his swaddling bands control the damnéd crew

So when the sun in bed, Curtained with cloudy red,

Pillows his chin upon an orient wave.

The flocking shadows pale Troop to the infernal jail,

Each fettered ghost slips to his several grave, And the yellow-skirted fays Fly after the night-steeds, leaving their moon-loved maze.

XXVII.

But see the virgin blest Hath laid her Babe to rest,

Time is our tedious song should here have ending:

Heaven's youngest teeméd star Hath fixed her polished car,

Her sleeping Lord with handmaid lamp attending: And all about the courtly stable Bright-harnessed angels sit in order serviceable.

IV.

THE PASSION.

ı.

EREWHILE of music, and ethereal mirth,
Wherewith the stage of air and earth did ring,
And joyous news of heavenly Infant's birth,
My muse with angels did divide to sing;
But headlong joy is ever on the wing,

In winter solstice like the shortened light Soon swallowed up in dark and long out-living night.

II.

For now to sorrow must I tune my song, And set my harp to notes of saddest woe, Which on our dearest Lord did seize ere long, Dangers, and snares, and wrongs, and worse than so, Which he for us did freely undergo:

Most perfect Hero, tried in heaviest plight Of labours huge and hard, too hard for human wight!

III.

He, sovran Priest, stooping his regal head,
That dropped with odorous oil down his fair eyes,
Poor fleshly tabernacle enteréd,
His starry front low-roofed beneath the skies:
Oh, what a mask was there, what a disguise!

Yet more; the stroke of death he must abide, Then lies him meekly down fast by his brethren's side.

IV.

These latest scenes confine my roving verse, To this horizon is my Phæbus bound; His godlike acts, and his temptations fierce, And former sufferings other where are found; Loud o'er the rest Cremona's trump doth sound;

Me softer airs befit, and softer strings Of lute, or viol still, more apt for mournful things.

Befriend me night, best patroness of grief.
Over the pole thy thickest mantle throw,
And work my flattered fancy to belief,
That Heaven and Earth are coloured with my woe;
My sorrows are too dark for day to know:

The leaves should all be black whereon I write, And letters, where my tears have washed, a wannish white.

٧1.

See, see the chariot, and those rushing wheels, That whirled the prophet up at Chebar flood, My spirit some transporting cherub feels, To bear me where the towers of Salem stood, Once glorious towers, now sunk in guiltless blood; There doth my soul in holy vision sit In pensive trance, and anguish, and ecstatic fit.

VII.

Mine eye hath found that sad sepulchral rock
That was the casket of Heaven's richest store,
And here though grief my feeble hands up lock,
Yet on the softened quarry would I score
My plaining verse as lively as before;

For sure so well instructed are my tears, That they would fitly fall in ordered characters.

VIII.

Or should I thence, hurried on viewless wing, Take up a weeping on the mountains wild, The gentle neighbourhood of grove and spring Would soon unbosom all their echoes mild, And I (for grief is easily beguiled)

Might think the infection of my sorrows loud Had got a race of mourners on some pregnant cloud. [This subject the author finding to be above the years he had, when he wrote it, and nothing satisfied with what was begun, left it unfinished.]

V. ON TIME.

FLY, envious Time, till thou run out thy race;
Call on the lazy leaden-stepping hours,
Whose speed is but the heavy plummet's pace;
And glut thyself with what thy womb devours,
Which is no more than what is false and vain,
And merely mortal dross;
So little is our loss,
So little is thy gain.
For when as each thing bad thou hast entombed,
And last of all thy greedy self consumed,
Then long eternity shall greet our bliss
With an individual kiss;
And joy shall overtake us as a flood,
When every thing that is sincerely good
And perfectly divine,

With truth, and peace, and love, shall ever shine About the supreme throne Of him, to whose happy-making sight alone When once our heavenly-guided soul shall climb, Then all this earthy grossness quit, Attired with stars, we shall for ever sit.

Triumphing over Death, and Chance, and thee, O Time.

VI. UPON THE CIRCUMCISION.

YE flaming powers, and wingéd warriors bright, That erst with music, and triumphant song, First heard by happy watchful shepherds' ear, So sweetly sung your joy the clouds along Through the soft silence of the listening night, Now mourn; and if sad share with us to bear Your fiery essence can distil no tear, Burn in your sighs, and borrow Seas wept from our deep sorrow: He who with all Heaven's heraldry whilere Entered the world, now bleeds to give us ease; Alas! how soon our sin

Sore doth begin His infancy to seize!

O more exceeding love, or law more just? Just law, indeed, but more exceeding love! For we by rightful doom remediless Were lost in death, till he that dwelt above, High throned in secret bliss, for us frail dust Emptied his glory, even to nakedness; And that great covenant which we still transgress Entirely satisfied, And the full wrath beside Of vengeful justice bore for our excess, And seals obedience first with wounding smart This day; but oh, ere long,

Huge pangs and strong Will pierce more near his heart.

VII.

AT A SOLEMN MUSIC.

BLEST pair of Sirens, pledges of Heaven's-joy, Sphere-born harmonious sisters, Voice and Verse, Wed your divine sounds, and mixed power employ, Dead things with inbreathed sense able to pierce, And to our high-raised fantasy present That undisturbéd song of pure concent, Ave sung before the sapphire-coloured throne To him that sits thereon, With saintly shout, and solemn jubilee, Where the bright seraphim in burning row Their loud uplifted angel-trumpets blow, And the cherubic host in thousand quires Touch their immortal harps of golden wires, With those just spirits that wear victorious palms, Hymns devout and holy psalms Singing everlastingly; That we on earth with undiscording voice May rightly answer that melodious noise; As once we did, till disproportioned sin Jarred against nature's chime, and with harsh din Broke the fair music that all creatures made To their great Lord, whose love their motion swaved In perfect diapason, whilst they stood In first obedience, and their state of good. Oh, may we soon again renew that song, And keep in tune with Heaven, till God ere long To his celestial consort us unite, To live with him, and sing in endless morn of light.

VIII.

AN EPITAPH ON THE MARCHIONESS OF WINCHESTER.

This rich marble doth inter
The honoured wife of Winchester,
A viscount's daughter, an earl's heir,

Besides what her virtues fair Added to her noble birth. More than she could own from earth. Summers three times eight, save one, She had told; alas! too soon, After so short time of breath, To house with darkness, and with death. Yet had the number of her days Been as complete as was her praise, Nature and fate had had no strife In giving limit to her life. Her high birth, and her graces sweet, Quickly found a lover meet; The virgin quire for her request The god that sits at marriage feast; He at their invoking came, But with a scarce well-lighted flame; And in his garland as he stood Ye might discern a cypress bud. Once had the early matrons run To greet her of a lovely son, And now with second hope she goes, And calls Lucina to her throes; But whether by mischance or blame Atropos for Lucina came, And with remorseless cruelty Spoiled at once both fruit and tree: The hapless babe before his birth Had burial, yet not laid in earth, And the languished mother's womb Was not long a living tomb. So have I seen some tender slip, Saved with care from winter's nip, The pride of her carnation train, Plucked up by some unheedy swain Who only thought to crop the flower New shot up from vernal shower; But the fair blossom hangs the head Side-ways, as on a dying bed, And those pearls of dew she wears,

Prove to be presaging tears, Which the sad morn had let fall On her hastening funeral. Gentle lady, may thy grave Peace and quiet ever have; After this, thy travel sore, Sweet rest seize thee evermore, That to give the world increase, Shortened hast thy own life's lease. Here, besides the sorrowing That thy noble house doth bring, Here be tears of perfect moan Wept for thee in Helicon, And some flowers, and some bays, For thy hearse, to strew the ways, Sent thee from the banks of Came, Devoted to thy virtuous name; Whilst thou, bright saint, high sitt'st in glory, Next her much like to thee in story, That fair Syrian shepherdess, Who, after years of barrenness, The highly favoured Joseph bore To him that served for her before, And at her next birth, much like thee, Through pangs fled to felicity, Far within the bosom bright Of blazing Majesty and Light; There with thee, new welcome saint, Like fortunes may her soul acquaint, With thee there clad in radiant sheen, No marchioness, but now a queen.

IX. SONG ON MAY MORNING.

Now the bright morning star, day's harbinger, Comes dancing from the east, and leads with her The flowery May, who from her green lap throws The yellow cowslip, and the pale primrose. Hail, bounteous May, that dost inspire

Mirth and youth and warm desire;

Woods and groves are of thy dressing, Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing. Thus we salute thee with our early song, And welcome thee, and wish thee long.

X.

ON SHAKSPEARE, 1630.

What needs my Shakspeare for his honoured bones The labour of an age in piléd stones? Or that his hallowed reliques should be hid Under a star-ypointing pyramid? Dear son of memory, great air of fame, What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name? Thou in our wonder and astonishment Hast built thyself a livelong monument. For whilst to the shame of flow-endeavouring art Thy easy numbers flow, and that each heart Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued book Those Delphic lines with deep impression took; Then thou our fancy of itself bereaving, Dost make us marble with too much conceiving; And so sepulchred in such pomp dost lie, That kings, for such a tomb, would wish to die.

XI.

ON THE UNIVERSITY CARRIER,

WHO SICKENED IN THE TIME OF HIS VACANCY, BEING FORBID TO GO TO LONDON, BY REASON OF THE PLAGUE.

Here lies old Hobson; Death hath broke his girt, And here, alas! hath laid him in the dirt; Or else the ways being foul, twenty to one, He's here stuck in a slough, and overthrown. 'Twas such a shifter, that if truth were known, Death was half glad when he had got him down; For he had, any time this ten years full, Dodged with him betwixt Cambridge and the Bull.

And surely Death could never have prevailed, Had not his weekly course of carriage failed; But lately finding him so long at home, And thinking now his journey's end was come, And that he had ta'en up his latest inn, In the kind office of a chamberlin Showed him his room where he must lodge that night, Pulled off his boots, and took away the light; If any ask for him, it shall be said, Hobson has supped, and 's newly gone to bed.

XII. ANOTHER ON THE SAME.

HERE lieth one, who did most truly prove That he could never die while he could move: So hung his destiny, never to rot While he might still jog on and keep his trot; Made of sphere-metal, never to decay Until his revolution was at stay. Time numbers motion, yet (without a crime 'Gainst old truth) motion numbered out his time: And like an engine moved with wheel and weight. His principles being ceased, he ended straight. Rest that gives all men life, gave him his death, And too much breathing put him out of breath; Nor were it contradiction to affirm Too long vacation hastened on his term. Merely to drive the time away he sickened, Fainted, and died, nor would with ale be quickened: "Nay," quoth he, on his swooning bed out-stretched; "If I mayn't carry, sure I'll ne'er be fetched, But vow, though the cross doctors all stood hearers. For one carrier put down to make six bearers." Ease was his chief disease, and to judge right, He died for heaviness that his cart went light: His leisure told him that his time was come, And lack of load made his life burdensome, That even to his last breath (there be that say't) As he were pressed to death, he cried "More weight;" But had his doings lasted as they were, He had been an immortal carrier. Obedient to the moon he spent his date In course reciprocal, and had his fate Linked to the mutual flowing of the seas, Yet (strange to think) his wain was his increase; His letters are delivered all and gone, Only remains this superscription.

XIII. L'ALLEGRO.

Hence loathed Melancholy, Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight born, In Stygian cave forlorn.

'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sights unholy,

Find out some uncouth cell,

Where brooding darkness spreads his jealous wings, And the night raven sings;

There under ebon shades, and low-browed rocks.

As ragged as thy locks,

In dark Cimmerian desert ever dwell. But come thou goddess fair and free, In Heaven yeleped Euphrosyne, And by men, heart-easing Mirth, Whom lovely Venus at a birth With two sister graces more To ivy-crownéd Bacchus bore Or whether (as some sages sing) The frolic wind that breathes the spring. Zephyr with Aurora playing, As he met her once a maying, There on beds of violets blue, And fresh-blown roses washed in dew, Filled her with thee a daughter fair, So buxom, blithe, and debonair. Haste thee, nymph, and bring with thee Jest and youthful jollity, Quips, and cranks, and wanton wiles, Nods, and becks, and wreathed smiles,

Such as hang on Hebe's cheek, And love to live in dimple sleek; Sport that wrinkled care derides, And laughter holding both his sides. Come, and trip it as you go On the light fantastic toe, And in thy right hand lead with thee, The mountain nymph, sweet Liberty; And if I give thee honour due, Mirth, admit me of thy crew, To live with her, and live with thee, In unreprovéd pleasures free; To hear the lark begin his flight, And singing startle the dull night, From his watch-tower in the skies. Till the dappled dawn doth rise; Then to come in spite of sorrow, And at my window bid good-morrow. Through the sweet-briar, or the vine, Or the twisted eglantine: While the cock with lively din Scatters the rear of darkness thin, And to the stack, or the barn-door, Stoutly struts his dames before: Oft listening how the hounds and horn Cheerly rouse the slumbering morn, From the side of some hoar hill, Through the high wood echoing shrill: Some time walking not unseen By hedge-row elms, on hillocks green, Right against the eastern gate, Where the great sun begins his state. Robed in flames and amber light, The clouds in thousand liveries dight, While the ploughman near at hand Whistles o'er the furrowed land. And the milkmaid singeth blithe, And the mower whets his scythe, And every shepherd tells his tale Under the hawthorn in the dale.

Straight mine eye hath caught new pleasures Whilst the landskip round it measures, Russet lawns, and fallows gray, Where the nibbling flocks do stray, Mountains on whose barren breast The labouring clouds do often rest. Meadows trim with daises pied, Shallow brooks, and rivers wide. Towers and battlements it sees Bosomed high in tufted trees, Where perhaps some beauty lies, The Cynosure of neighbouring eyes. Hard by, a cottage chimney smokes, From betwixt two aged oaks, Where Corydon and Thyrsis met, Are at their savoury dinner set Of herbs, and other country messes, Which the neat-handed Phillis dresses; And then in haste her bower she leaves, With Thestylis to bind the sheaves; Or if the earlier season lead To the tanned havcock in the mead. Sometimes with secure delight The upland hamlets will invite, When the merry bells ring round, And the jocund rebecks sound To many a youth, and many a maid, Dancing in the chequered shade; And young and old come forth to play On a sunshine holy-day, Till the livelong daylight fail; Then to the spicy nut-brown ale, With stories told of many a feat, How fairy Mab the junkets eat, She was pinched, and pulled, she said, And he by friars' lanthorn led, Tells how the drudging goblin sweat, To earn his cream bowl duly set, When in one night, ere glimpse of morn, His shadowy flail hath threshed the corn,

That ten day-labourers could not end; Then lies him down the lubbar fiend, And stretched out all the chimney's length, Basks at the fire his hairy strength, And crop-full out of doors he flings. Ere the first cock his matin rings. Thus done the tales, to bed they creep, By whispering winds sood lulled asleep. Towered cities please us then, And the busy hum of men, Where throngs of knights and barons bold In weeds of peace high triumphs hold, With store of ladies, whose bright eyes Rain influence, and judge the prize Of wit, or arms, while both contend To win her grace, whom all commend. There let Hymen oft appear In saffron robe, with taper clear, And pomp, and feast, and revelry, With mask, and antique pageantry; Such sights as youthful poets dream On summer eves by haunted stream. Then to the well-trod stage anon, If Jonson's learnéd sock be on, Or sweetest Shakspeare, fancy's child, Warble his native wood-notes wild. And ever against eating cares, Lap me in soft Lydian airs, Married to immortal verse, Such as the meeting soul may pierce In notes, with many a winding bout Of linkéd sweetness long drawn out, With wanton heed, and giddy cunning, The melting voice through mazes running Untwisting all the chains that tie, The hidden soul of harmony; That Orpheus' self may heave his head From golden slumber on a bed Of heaped Elysian flowers, and hear Such strains as would have won the ear

Of Pluto, to have quite set free His half regained Eurydice. These delights, if thou canst give, Mirth, with thee I mean to live.

XIV. IL PENSEROSO.

Hence, vain deluding joys,

The brood of folly without father bred
How little you bested,

Or fill the fixéd mind with all your toys!

Dwell in some idle brain,

And fancies fond with gaudy shapes possess,

As thick and numberless

As the gay motes that people the sunbeams, Or likest hovering dreams,

The fickle pensioners of Morpheus' train. But hail thou goddess, sage and holy,

Hail, divinest Melancholy, Whose saintly visage is too bright

To hit the sense of human sight, And therefore to our weaker view, O'erlaid with black, staid wisdom's hue;

Black, but such as in esteem

Prince Memnon's sister might beseem, Or that starred Ethiop queen that strove

To set her beauty's praise above

The sea-nymphs, and their powers offended:

Yet thou art higher far descended; Thee, bright-haired Vesta long of yore

To solitary Saturn bore;

His daughter she (in Saturn's reign, Such mixture was not held a stain). Oft in glimmering bowers and glades

He met her, and in secret shades
Of woody Ida's inmost grove,

While yet there was no fear of Jove. Come, pensive nun, devout and pure,

Sober, stedfast, and demure,

All in a robe of darkest grain, Flowing with majestic train, And sable stole of Cyprus lawn, Over thy decent shoulders drawn. Come, but keep thy wonted state, With even step, and musing gait, And looks commercing with the skies, Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes: There, held in holy passion still, Forget thyself to marble, till With a sad leaden downward cast Thou fix them on the earth as fast: And join with thee calm Peace, and Quiet, Spare Fast, that oft with gods doth diet, And hears the Muses in a ring Ave round about Jove's altar sing; And add to these retired Leisure, That in trim gardens takes his pleasure: But first, and chiefest, with thee bring Him that you soars on golden wing, Guiding the fiery-wheeled throne, The cherub Contemplation; And the mute Silence hist along, Less Philomel will deign a song, In her sweetest, saddest plight, Smoothing the rugged brow of night, While Cynthia checks her dragon yoke, Gently o'er the accustomed oak; Sweet bird that shunn'st the noise of folly, Most musical, most melancholy! Thee, chantress, oft the woods among I woo to hear thy even-song; And missing thee, I walk unseen On the dry smooth-shaven green, To behold the wandering moon, Riding near her highest noon, Like one that had been led astray Through the Heaven's wide pathless way, And oft, as if her head she bowed, Stooping through a fleecy cloud.

Oft on a plat of rising ground, I hear the far-off curfew sound. Over some wide-watered shore, Swinging slow with sullen roar: Or if the air will not permit, Some still removed place will fit, Where glowing embers through the room Teach light to counterfeit a gloom; Far from all resort of mirth, Save the cricket on the hearth, Or the bellman's drowsy charm, To bless the doors from nightly harm: Or let my lamp at midnight hour, Be seen in some high lonely tower, Where I may oft outwatch the Bear, With thrice great Hermes, or unsphere The spirit of Plato to unfold What worlds, or what vast regions hold The immortal mind that hath forsook Her mansion in this fleshly nook: And of those demons that are found In fire, air, flood, or under ground, Whose power hath a true consent With planet or with element. Sometime let gorgeous tragedy In sceptred pall come sweeping by, Presenting Thebes, or Pelops' line, Or the tale of Troy divine; Or what (though rare) of later age Ennobled hath the buskined stage. But oh, sad virgin, that thy power Might raise Musæus from his bower! Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing Such notes as warbled to the string, Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek, And made Hell grant what love did seek Or call up him that left half told The story of Cambuscan bold, Of Camball, and of Algarsife, And who had Canace to wife,

That owned the virtuous ring and glass, And of the wondrous horse of brass, On which the Tartar king did ride; And if aught else great bards beside In sage and solemn tunes have sung, Of turneys and of trophies hung, Of forests and enchantments drear, Where more is meant than meets the ear. Thus night oft see me in thy pale career, Till civil-suited morn appear, Not trickt and frounct as she was wont With the Attic boy to hunt, But kerchiefed in a comely cloud, While rocking winds are piping loud, Or ushered with a shower still, When the gust hath blown his fill, Ending on the rustling leaves. With minute drops from off the eaves. And when the sun begins to fling His flaring beams, me, goddess, bring To archéd walks of twilight groves, And shadows brown, that Sylvan loves, Of pine, or monumental oak, Where the rude axe with heaved stroke Was never heard the nymphs to daunt, Or fright them from their hallowed haunt. There in closed covert by some brook, Where no profaner eye may look, Hide me from day's garish eye, While the bee with honeyed thigh, That at her flowery work loth sing, And the waters murmuring, With such consort as they keep, Entice the dewy-feathered sleep; And let some strange mysterious dream Wave at his wings in airy stream Of lively portraiture displayed, Softly on my eyelids laid. And as I wake, sweet music breathe Above, about, or underneath,

Sent by some spirit to mortals good, Or the unseen genius of the wood. But let my due feet never fail To walk the studious cloister's pale, And love the high embowed roof, With antic pillars massy proof, And storied windows richly dight, Casting a dim religious light. There let the pealing organ blow, To the full-voiced quire below, In service high, and anthems clear, As may with sweetness, through mine ear. Dissolve me into ecstasies, And bring all Heaven before my eyes. And may at last my weary age Find out the peaceful hermitage, The hairy gown and mossy cell, Where I may sit and rightly spell Of every star that Heaven doth shew, And every herb that sips the dew: Till old experience do attain To something like prophetic strain. These pleasures, Melancholy, give, And I with thee will choose to live

ARCADES.

Part of an entertainment presented to the Countess Dowager of Derby, at Harefield, by some noble persons of her family, who appear on the scene in the pastoral habit, moving toward the seat of state, with this song.]

Song I.

Look, nymphs, and shepherds look,
What sudden blaze of majesty
Is that which we from hence descry,
Too divine to be mistook:
This, this is she
To whom our views and wishes bend;
Here our solemn search hath end.

Fame, that her high worth to raise, Seemed erst so lavish and profuse, We may justly now accuse Of detraction from her praise; Less than half we find expressed, Envy bid conceal the rest.

Mark what radiant state she spreads,
In circle round her shining throne,
Shooting her beams like silver threads;
This, this is she alone,
Sitting like a goddess bright,

In the centre of her light.

Might she the wise Latona be.

Might she the wise Latona be,
Or the towered Cybele,
Mother of a hundred gods?
Juno dares not give her odds;
Who had thought this clime had held
A deity so unparalled?

[As they come forward, the Genius of the wood appears, and turning towards them, speaks.]

GENIUS.

Stay, gentle swains, for though in this disguise, I see bright honour sparkle through your eyes; Of famous Arcady ve are, and sprung Of that renowned flood, so often sung, Divine Alpheus, who by secret sluice Stole under seas to meet his Arethuse: And ye, the breathing roses of the wood, Fair silver-buskined nymphs as great and good, I know this quest of yours, and free intent, Was all in honour and devotion meant To the great mistress of you princely shrine, Whom with low reverence I adore as mine. And with all helpful service will comply To further this night's glad solemnity; And lead ye where ye may more near behold What shallow-searching fame hath left untold; Which I full oft amidst these shades alone Have sat to wonder at, and gaze upon:

For know by lot from Jove I am the power Of this fair wood, and live in oaken bower, To nurse the saplings tall, and curl the grove With ringlets quaint, and wanton windings wove And all my plants I save from nightly ill Of noisome winds, and blasting vapours chill; And from the boughs brush off the evil dew, And heal the harms of thwarting thunder blue, Or what the cross dire-looking planet smites, Or hurtful worm with cankered venom bites. When evening gray doth rise, I fetch my round Over the mount, and all this hallowed ground, And early, ere the odorous breath of morn Awakes the slumbering leaves, or tasselled horn Shakes the high thicket, haste I all about, Number my ranks, and visit every sprout With puissant words, and murmurs made to bless; But else in deep of night, when drowsiness Hath locked up mortal sense, then listen I To the celestial sirens' harmony, That sit upon the nine enfolded spheres, And sing to those that hold the vital shears, And turn the adamantine spindle round, On which the fate of gods and men is wound. Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie, To lull the daughters of Necessity, And keep unsteady Nature to her law, And the low world in measured motion draw After the heavenly tune, which none can hear Of human moold with gross unpurgéd ear; And yet such music worthiest were to blaze The peerless height of her immortal praise, Whose lustre leads us, and for her most fit, If my inferior hand or voice could hit Inimitable sounds; yet as we go, Whate'er the skill of lesser gods can show. I will assay, her worth to celebrate, And so attend ye toward her glittering state; Where ye may all, that are of noble stem, Approach, and kiss her sacred vesture's hem.

Song II.

O'er the smooth enamelled green, Where no print of step hath been,

Follow me, as I sing, And touch the warbled string.

Under the shady roof

Of branching elm star-proof.

Follow me,

I will bring you where she sits, Clad in splendour as befits

Her deity.

Such a rural queen All Arcadia hath not seen.

Song III.

Nymphs and shepherds dance no more
By sandy Ladon's lilied banks,

On old Lycœus or Cyllene hoar

Trip no more in twilight ranks,

Though Frymanth your loss deplere

Though Erymanth your loss deplore,
A better soil shall give ye thanks.

From the stony Mænalus
Bring your flocks, and live with us;
Here ye shall have greater grace,
To serve the lady of this place;
Though Syrinx your Pan's mistress were,
Yet Syrinx well might wait on her.

Such a rural queen
All Arcadia hath not seen.

▲ MASK, PRESENTED AT LUDLOW CASTLE, 1634, BEFORE THE EARL OF BRIDGEWATER, THEN PRESIDENT OF WALES.

The Mask was presented in 1634, and consequently in the twenty-sixth year of our author's age. In the title-page of the first edition, printed in 1637, it is said that it was presented on Michaelmas night, and there was this motto:—

"Eheu quid volui misero mihi! floribus austrum l'erditus."

In this edition, and in that of Milton's poems in 1645, there was pre-fixed to the Mask the following dedication:—

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD JOHN VISCOUNT BRACKLY, SON AND HEIR APPARENT TO THE EARL OF BRIDGEWATER, &c.

My Lord,—This poem, which received its first occasion of birth from yourself and others of your noble family, and much honour from your own person in the performance, now returns again to make a final dedication of itself to you. Although not openly acknowledged by the author, yet it is a legitimate offspring, so lovely, and so much desired, that the often copying of it hath tired my pen to give my several friends satisfaction, and brought me to a necessity of producing it to the public view; and now to offer it up in all rightful devotion to those fair hopes, and rare endowments of your much promising youth, which give a full assurance, to all that know you, of a future excellence. Live, sweet lord, to be the honour of your name, and receive this as your own, from the hands of him, who hath by many favours been long obliged to your most honoured parents, and as in this representation your attendant Thyrsis, so now in all real expression

Your faithful and most humble servant, H. LAWES.

ATTENDANT SPIRIT.

BEFORE the starry threshold of Jove's court
My mansion is, where those immortal shapes
Of bright aërial spirits live insphered
In regions mild of calm and serene air,
Above the smoke and stir of this dim spot,
Which men call Earth; and with low-thoughted care
Confined, and pestered in this pinfold here,

Strive to keep up a frail and feverish being, Unmindful of the crown that virtue gives, After this mortal change to her true servants, Amongst the enthroned gods on sainted seats. Yet some there be, that by due steps aspire To lay their just hands on that golden key, That opes the palace of eternity:

To such my errand is; and but for such, I would not soil these pure ambrosial weeds With the rank vapours of this sin-worn mould.

But to my task. Neptune, besides the sway Of every salt flood, and each ebbing stream, Took in by lot 'twixt high and nether Jove Imperial rule of all the sea-girt isles, That, like to rich and various gems, inlay The unadornéd bosom of the deep: Which he, to grace his tributary gods, By course commits to several government, And gives them leave to wear their sapphire crowns, And wield their little tridents; but this isle, The greatest and the best of all the main, He quarters to his blue-haired deities: And all this tract that fronts the falling sun A noble peer of mickle trust and power Has in his charge, with tempered awe to guide An old and haughty nation, proud in arms: Where his fair offspring nursed in princely lore, Are coming to attend their father's state, And new-entrusted sceptre; but their way Lies through the pérplexed paths of this drear wood, The nodding horror of whose shady brows Threats the forlorn and wandering passenger; And here their tender age might suffer peril, But that by quick command from sovran Jove I was despatched for their defence and guard: And listen why; for I will tell you now What never yet was heard in tale or song, From old or modern bard, in hall or bower. Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape

Crushed the sweet poison of misused wine,

After the Tuscan mariners transformed, Coasting the Tyrrhene shore, as the winds listed. On Circe's island fell (who knows not Circe, The daughter of the sun, whose charmed cup Whoever tasted lost his upright shape, And downward fell into a grovelling swine?): This nymph, that gazed upon his clustering locks With ivy berries wreathed, and his blithe youth, Had by him, ere he parted thence, a son Much like his father, but his mother more, Whom therefere she brought up, and Comus named: Who, ripe and frolic of his full-grown age, Roving the Celtic and Iberian fields, At last betakes him to this ominous wood: And, in thick shelter of black shades embowered. Excels his mother at her mighty art, Offering to every weary traveller His orient liquor in a crystal glass, To quench the drouth of Phæbus; which, as they taste (For most do taste through fond intemperate thirst), Soon as the potion works, their human countenance, The express resemblance of the gods, is changed Into some brutish form of wolf, or bear, Or ounce, or tiger, hog, or bearded goat, All other parts remaining as they were; And they, so perfect is their misery, Not once perceive their foul disfigurement, But boast themselves more comely than before: And all their friends and native home forget, To roll with pleasure in a sensual sty. Therefore when any, favoured of high Jove. Chances to pass through this adventurous glade, Swift as the sparkle of a glancing star I shoot from Heaven, to give him safe convoy, As now I do; but first I must put off These my sky robes spun out of Iris' woof, And take the weeds and likeness of a swain, That to the service of this house belongs, Who, with his soft pipe and smooth-dittied song, Well knows to still the wild winds when they roar,

And hush the waving woods; nor of less faith, And in this office of his mountain watch, Likeliest, and nearest to the present aid Of this occasion. But I hear the tread Of hateful steps! I must be viewless now.

(Comus enters with a charming rod in one hand, his glass in the other, with him a rout of monsters, headed like sundry sorts of wild beasts, but otherwise like men and women, their apparel glistering; they come in making a riotous and unruly noise, with their torches in their hands.]

COMUS.

The star that bids the shepherd fold, Now the top of Heaven doth hold; And the gilded car of day His glowing axle doth allay In the steep Atlantic stream; And the slope sun his upward beam Shoots against the dusky pole, Pacing toward the other goal Of his chamber in the east. Meanwhile welcome joy and feast, Midnight shout and revelry, Tipsy dance and jollity. Braid your locks with rosy twine, Dropping odours, dropping wine. Rigour now is gone to bed, And advice with scrupulous head. Strict age, and sour severity, With their grave saws in slumber lie. We, that are of purer fire, Imitate the starry quire; Who, in their nightly watchful spheres, Lead in swift round the months and years. The sounds and seas, with all their finny drove Now to the moon in wavering morrice move; And, on the tawny sands and shelves, Trip the pert fairies and the dapper elves. By dimpled brook, and fountain brim, The wood-nymphs, decked with daisies trim, Their merry wakes and pastimes keep; What hath night to do with sleep? Night hath better sweets to prove,

438 ° COMUS.

Venus now wakes, and wakens Love. Come, let us our rites begin; 'Tis only daylight that makes sin, Which these dun shades will ne'er report. Hail, goddess of nocturnal sport, Dark-veiled Cotytto! to whom the secret flame Of midnight torches burns; mysterious dame, That ne'er art called, but when the dragon womb Of Stygian darkness spets her thickest gloom, And makes one blot of all the air: Stay thy cloudy ebon chair, Wherein thou rid'st with Hecat, and befriend Us thy vowed priests, till utmost end Of all thy dues be done, and none left out; Ere the blabbing eastern scout, The nice morn, on the Indian steep From her cabined loophole peep. And to the tell-tale sun descry Our concealed solemnity. Come, knit hands, and beat the ground, In a light fantastic round.

The Measure. Break off, break off, I feel the different pace Of some chaste footing near about this ground. Run to your shrouds, within these brakes and trees; Our number may affright: some virgin sure (For so I can distinguish by mine art) Benighted in these woods. Now to my charms, And to my wily trains: I shall, ere long, Be well stocked with as fair a herd as grazed About my mother Circe. Thus I hurl My dazzling spells into the spongy air, Of power to cheat the eye with blear illusion. And give it false presentments, lest the place And my quaint habits breed astonishment, And put the damsel to suspicious flight, Which must not be, for that's against my course: I, under fair pretence of friendly ends, And well-placed words of glozing courtesy, Baited with reasons not unplausible,

Wind me into the easy-hearted man, And hug him into snares. When once her eye Hath met the virtue of this magic dust, I shall appear some harmless villager, Whom thrift keeps up about his country gear. But here she comes; I fairly step aside, And hearken, if I may, her business here

[The LADY enters.]

LADY.

This way the noise was, if mine ear be true, My best guide now: methought it was the sound Of riot and ill-managed merriment, Such as the jocund flute, or gamesome pipe, Stirs up among the loose unlettered hinds, When, for their teeming flocks, and granges full, In wanton dance they praise the bounteous Pan. And thank the gods amiss. I should be loth To meet the rudeness and swilled insolence Of such late wassailers; yet oh! where else Shall I inform my unacquainted feet In the blind mazes of this tangled wood? My brothers, when they saw me wearied out With this long way, resolving here to lodge Under the spreading favour of these pines, Stepped, as they said, to the next thicket side, To bring me berries, or such cooling fruit As the kind hospitable woods provide. They left me then, when the gray-hooded even, Like a sad votarist in palmer's weed, Rose from the hindmost wheels of Phæbus' wain. But where they are, and why they came not back, Is now the labour of my thoughts; 'tis likeliest They had engaged their wandering steps too far, And envious darkness, ere they could return, Had stole them from me; else, O thievish night! Why shouldst thou, but for some felonious end, In thy dark lanthorn thus close up the stars, That nature hung in Heaven, and filled their lamps With everlasting oil, to give due light To the misled and lonely traveller?

440 · COMUS.

This is the place, as well as I may guess, Whence even now the tumult of loud mirth Was rife, and perfect in my listening ear; Yet nought but single darkness do I find. What might this be? A thousand fantasies Begin to throng into my memory. Of calling shapes, and beckoning shadows dire. And airy tongues, that syllable men's names On sands, and shores, and desert wildernesses. These thoughts may startle well, but not astound. The virtuous mind, that ever walks attended By a strong siding champion, conscience. Oh, welcome, pure-eyed faith, white-handed hope. Thou hovering angel girt with golden wings, And thou unblemished form of chastity! I see ye visibly, and now believe That he, the Supreme Good, to whom all things ill Are but as slavish officers of vengeance, Would send a glistering guardian, if need were, To keep my life and honour unassailed. Was I deceived, or did a sable cloud Turn forth her silver lining on the night? I did not err, there does a sable cloud Turn forth her silver lining on the night, And casts a gleam over this tufted grove: I cannot halloo to my brothers, but Such noise as I can make to be heard farthest I'll venture, for my new enlivened spirits Prompt me; and they perhaps are not far off. Song.

Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph, that liv'st unseen

Within thy airy shell,

By slow Meander's margent green, And in the violet-embroidered vale, Where the love-lorn nightingale

Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth well; Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair

That likest thy Narcissus are?

Oh! if thou have

Hid them in some flowery cave,

Tell me but where,
Sweet queen of parley, daughter of the sphere,
So mayst thou be translated to the skies,
And give resounding grace to all Heaven's harmonies.

COMUS.

Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment? Sure something holy lodges in that breast, And with these raptures moves the vocal air To testify his hidden residence: How sweetly did they float upon the wings Of silence, through the empty-vaulted night, At every fall smoothing the raven down Of darkness till it smiled! I have oft heard My mother Circe with the Sirens three, Amidst the flowery-kirtled Naiades Culling their potent heros and baleful drugs, Who, as they sung, would take the prisoned soul And lap it in Elysium : Scylla wept, And chid her barking waves into attention, And fell Charybdis murmured soft applause; Yet they in pleasing slumber lulled the sense, And in sweet madness robbed it of itself; But such a sacred and home-felt delight, Such sober certainty of waking bliss, I never heard till now. I'll speak to her, And she shall be my queen. Hail, foreign wonder! Whom certain these rough shades did never breed, Unless the goddess that in rural shrine Dwell'st here with Pan, or Sylvan; by blest song Forbidding every bleak unkindly fog To touch the prosperous growth of this tall wood

LADY.

Nay, gentle shepherd, ill is lost that praise That is addressed to unattending ears; Not any boast of skill, but extreme shift How to regain my severed company, Compelled me to awake the courteous Echo To give me answer from her mossy couch.

What chance, good lady, hath bereft you thus?

Dim darkness, and this leafy labyrinth.

COMUS.

Could that divide you from near-ushering guides?

They left me weary on a grassy turf. comus.

By falsehood, or discourtesy, or why?

To seek i' the valley some cool, friendly spring COMUS.

And left your fair side all unguarded, lady?

They were but twain, and purposed quick return. comus.

Perhaps forestalling night prevented them.

LADY.

How easy my misfortune is to hit!

Imports their loss, beside the present need?

No less than if I should my brothers lose.

Were they of manly prime, or youthful bloom?

As smooth as Hebe's their unrazored lips.

Two such I saw, what time the laboured ox
In his loose traces from the furrow came,
And the swinkt hedger at his supper sat;
I saw them under a green mantling vine
That crawls along the side of yon small hill,
Plucking ripe clusters from the tender shoots;
Their port was more than human, as they stood;
I took it for a fairy vision
Of some gay creatures of the element,
That in the colours of the rainbow live,
And play i' the plighted clouds. I was awe-struck,

And, as I passed, I worshipped; if those you seek, It were a journey like the path to Heaven, To help you find them.

LADY.

Gentle villager, What readiest way would bring me to that place? COMUS.

Due west it rises from this shrubby point.

To find out that, good shepherd, I suppose, In such a scant allowance of star-light, Would overtask the best land-pilot's art, Without the sure guess of well practised feet.

I know each lane, and every alley green, Dingle, or bushy dell of this wild wood, And every bosky bourn from side to side, My daily walks and ancient neighbourhood; And if your stray attendants be yet lodged, Or shroud within these limits, I shall know Ere morrow wake, or the low-roosted lark From her thatched pallet rouse: if otherwise, I can conduct you, lady, to a low

But loval cottage, where you may be safe

Till further quest.

LADY. Shepherd, I take thy word,

And trust thy honest-offered courtesy, Which oft is sooner found in lowly sheds With smoky rafters, than in tap'stry halls And courts of princes, where it first was named, And yet is most pretended: in a place Less warranted than this, or less secure, I cannot be, that I should fear to change it. Eye me, blest Providence, and square my trial To my proportioned strength! Shepherd, lead on.

[The two BRCTHERS.] ELDER BROTHER.

Unmuffle, ye faint stars; and thou fair moon, That wont'st to love the traveller's benizon,

Stoop thy pale visage through an amber cloud, And disinherit Chaos, that reigns here In double night of darkness and of shades; Or if your influence be quite dammed up With black usurping mists, some gentle taper, Though a rush-candle from the wicker hole Of some clay habitation, visit us With thy long levelled rule of streaming light, And thou shalt be our star of Arcady, Or Tyrian Cynosure.

SECOND BROTHER.
Or, if our eyes

Be barred that happiness, might we but hear The folded flocks penned in their wattled cotes, Or sound of pastoral reed with oaten stops, Or whistle from the lodge, or village cock Count the night watches to his feathery dames, 'Twould be some solace yet, some little cheering, In this close dungeon of innumerous boughs. But oh, that hapless virgin, our lost sister! Where may she wander now? whither betake her From the chill dew, amongst rude burs and thistles? Perhaps some cold bank is her bolster now; Or 'gainst the rugged bark of some broad elm Leans her unpillowed head, fraught with sad fears. What if in wild amazement and affright? Or, while we speak, within the direful grasp Of savage hunger, or of savage heat? ELDER BROTHER.

Peace, brother! be not over-exquisite
To cast the fashion of uncertain evils;
For grant they be so, while they rest unknown,
What need a man forestall his date of grief,
And run to meet what he would most avoid?
Or if they be but false alarms of fear,
How bitter is such self-delusion!
I do not think my sister so to seek,
Or so unprincipled in virtue's book,
And the sweet peace that goodness bosoms ever,
As that the single want of light and noise

(Not being in danger, as I trust she is not) Could stir the constant mood of her calm thoughts, And put them into misbecoming plight. Virtue could see to do what virtue would By her own radiant light, though sun and moon Were in the flat sea sunk. And wisdom's self Oft seeks to sweet retiréd solitude, Where, with her best nurse, contemplation, She plumes her feathers and lets grow her wings, That in the various bustle of resort Were all too ruffled, and sometimes impaired. He that has light within his own clear breast May sit i' the centre, and enjoy bright day; But he that hides a dark soul and foul thoughts. Benighted walks under the midday sun; Himself is his own dungeon.

SECOND BROTHER.

'Tis most true

That musing meditation most affects The pensive secresy of desert cell, Far from the cheerful haunt of men and herds, And sits as safe as in a senate-house; For who would rob a hermit of his weeds, His few books, or his beads, or maple dish, Or do his gray hairs any violence? But beauty, like the fair Hesperian tree Laden with blooming gold, hath need the guard Of dragon-watch with unenchanted eye, To save her blossoms, and defend her fruit From the rash hand of bold incontinence. You may as well spread out the unsunned heaps Of misers' treasure by an outlaw's den, And tell me it is safe, as bid me hope Danger will wink on opportunity, And let a single helpless maiden pass Uninjured in this wild surrounding waste. Of night, or loneliness, it recks me not; I fear the dread events that dog them both, Lest some ill-greeting touch attempt the person Of our unownéd sister.

ELDER BROTHER.

I do not, brother,
Infer, as if I thought my sister's state
Secure without all doubt or controversy;
Yet, where an equal poise of hope and fear
Does arbitrate the event, my nature is
That I incline to hope rather than fear,
And gladly banish squint suspicion.
My sister is not so defenceless left
As you imagine: she has hidden strength
Which you remember not.

SECOND BROTHER.

What hidden strength, Unless the strength of Heaven, if you mean that?

I mean that too; but yet a hidden strength, Which, if Heaven gave it, may be termed her own: 'Tis chastity, my brother, chastity: She that has that is clad in complete steel, And, like a quivered nymph with arrows keen, May trace huge forests, and unharboured heaths. Infamous hills, and sandy perilous wilds; Where, through the sacred rays of chastity, No savage fierce, bandit, or mountaineer, Will dare to soil her virgin purity: Yea there, where very desolation dwells, By grots and caverns shagged with horrid shades. She may pass on with unblenched majesty, Be it not done in pride or in presumption. Some say no evil thing that walks by night, In fog or fire, by lake or moorish fen, Blue meagre hag, or stubborn unlaid ghost That breaks his magic chains at curfew time, No goblin, or swart fairy of the mine, Hath hurtful power o'er true virginity. Do ye believe me yet? or shall I call Antiquity from the old schools of Greece To testify the arms of chastity? Hence had the huntress Dian her dread bow.

Fair silver-shafted queen, for ever chaste, Wherewith she tamed the brinded lioness And spotted mountain pard, but set at nought The frivolous bolt of Cupid; gods and men Fear her stern frown, and queen o' the woods. What was that snaky-headed Gorgon shield That wise Minerva wore, unconquered virgin, Wherewith she freezed her foes to congealed stone. But rigid looks of chaste austerity, And noble grace, that dashed brute violence With sudden adoration and blank awe? So dear to Heaven is saintly chastity, That when a soul is found sincerely so, A thousand liveried angels lackey her, Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt, And, in clear dream, and solemn vision, Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear; Till oft converse with heavenly habitants Begin to cast a beam on the outward shape, The unpolluted temple of the mind, And turns it by degrees to the soul's essence, Till all be made immortal; but when lust, By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk, But most by lewd and lavish act of sin, Lets in defilement to the inward part, The soul grows clotted by contagion, Embodies, and embrutes, till she quite lose The divine property of her first being. Such are those thick and gloomy shadows damp Oft seen in charnel vaults and sepulchres Lingering, and sitting by a new-made grave, As loth to leave the body that it loved, And linked itself by carnal sensuality To a degenerate and degraded state.

SECOND BROTHER.

How charming is divine philosophy!

Not harsh, and crabbed, as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectared sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.

ELDER BROTHER.

List, list! I hear

Some far off halloo break the silent air. SECOND BROTHER.

Methought so too; what should it be?

ELDER BROTHER.

For certain

Either some one like us night-foundered here, Or else some neighbour woodman, or, at worst, Some roving robber calling to his fellows.

SECOND BROTHER.

Heaven keep my sister! Again, again, and near; Best draw and stand upon our guard.

ELDER BROTHER.

I'll halloo;

If he be friendly, he comes well; if not, Defence is a good cause, and Heaven be for us.

[THE ATTENDANT SPIRIT habited like a Shepherd.] That halloo I should know; what are you? Speak! Come not too near, you fall on iron stakes else.

SPIRIT.

What voice is that? My young lord? Speak again.
SECOND BROTHER.

Thyrsis? whose artful strains have oft delayed The huddling brook to hear his madrigal, And sweetened every musk-rose of the dale. How cam'st thou here, good swain? Hath any ram Slipped from the fold, or young kid lost his dam, Or straggling wether the pent flock forsook? How couldst thou find this dark sequestered nook?

SPIRIT.

O my loved master's heir, and his next joy! I came not here on such a trivial toy
As a strayed ewe, or to pursue the stealth
Of pilfering wolf; not all the fleecy wealth
That doth enrich these downs, is worth a thought
To this my errand, and the care it brought.
But oh, my virgin lady! where is she?
How chance she is not in your company?

ELDER BROTHER.

To tell thee sadly, shepherd, without blame, Or our neglect, we lost her as we came.

SPIRIT.

Ay me unhappy ' then my fears are true. ELDER BROTHER.

What fears, good Thyrsis? Prythee briefly shew.

I'll tell ye; 'tis not vain or fabulous (Though so esteemed by shallow ignorance) What the sage poets, taught by the heavenly muse, Storied of old in high immortal verse, Of dire chimeras, and enchanted isles, And rifted rocks whose entrance leads to Hell;

For such there be; but unbelief is blind.

Within the navel, of this hideous wood, Immured in cypress shades, a sorcerer dwells, Of Bacchus and of Circe born, great Comus, Deep skilled in all his mother's witcheries; And here to every thirsty wanderer, By sly enticement, gives his baneful cup, With many murmurs mixed, whose pleasing poison The visage quite transforms of him that drinks, And the inglorious likeness of a beast Fixes instead, unmoulding reason's mintage Charáctered in the face; this have I learnt Tending my flocks hard by i' the hilly crofts That brow this bottom glade; whence night by night He and his monstrous rout are heard to howl Like stabled wolves, or tigers at their prey, Doing abhorréd rites to Hecate In their obscuréd haunts of inmost bowers. Yet have they many baits, and guileful spells To inveigle and invite the unwary sense Of them that pass unweeting by the way. This evening late, by then the chewing flocks Had ta'en their supper on the savoury herb Of knot-grass dew-besprent, and were in fold, I sat me down to watch upon a bank With ivy canopied, and interwove

459 comus.

With flaunting honeysuckle, and began, Wrapt in a pleasing fit of melancholy, To meditate my rural minstrelsy, Till fancy had her fill; but, ere a close, The wonted roar was up amidst the woods. And filled the air with barbarous dissonance; At which I ceased, and listened them a while, Till an unusual stop of sudden silence Gave respite to the drowsy-flighted steeds That draw the litter of close-curtained sleep; At last a soft and solemn-breathing sound Rose like a steam of rich distilled perfumes, And stole upon the air, that even Silence Was took ere she was ware, and wished she might Deny her nature, and be never more Still to be so displaced. I was all ear, And took in strains that might create a soul Under the ribs of death: but oh, ere long, Too well I did perceive it was the voice Of my most honoured lady, your dear sister. Amazed I stood, harrowed with grief and fear, And oh, poor hapless nightingale, thought I, How sweet thou sing'st, how near the deadly snare! Then down the lawns I ran with headlong haste, Through paths and turnings often trod by day, Till, guided by mine ear, I found the place, Where that damned wizard, hid in sly disguise (For so by certain signs I knew), had met Already, ere my best speed could prevent, The aidless innocent lady, his wished prey, Who gently asked if he had seen such two, Supposing him some neighbour villager. Longer I durst not stay, but soon I guessed Ye were the two she meant; with that I sprung Into swift flight, till I had found you here, But further know I not.

SECOND BROTHER.

O night and shades. How are ye joined with Hell in triple knot Against the unarmed weakness of one virgin Alone, and helpless! Is this the confidence You gave me, brother?

ELDER BROTHER.

Yes, and keep it still;

Lean on it safely; not a period Shall be unsaid for me: against the threats Of malice, or of sorcery, or that power Which erring men call chance, this I hold firm: Virtue may be assailed, but never hurt, Surprised by unjust force, but not enthralled; Yea even that which mischief meant most harm, Shall in the happy trial prove most glory: But evil on itself shall back recoil, And mix no more with goodness; when at last, Gathered like scum, and settled to itself, It shall be in eternal restless change, Self-fed, and self-consumed: if this fail, The pillared firmament is rottenness, And earth's base built on stubble. But come, let's on. Against the opposing will and arm of Heaven May never this just sword be lifted up! But for that damned magician, let him be girt With all the grisly legions that troop Under the sooty flag of Acheron, Harpies and Hydras, or all the monstrous forms 'Twixt Africa and Ind, I'll find him out, And force him to restore his purchase back, Or drag him by the curls to a foul death, Cursed as his life.

SPIRIT.

Alas! good venturous youth, I love thy courage yet, and bold emprise; But here thy sword can do thee little stead; For other arms, and other weapons, must Be those that quell the might of hellish charms: He with his bare wand can unthread thy joints, And crumble all thy sinews.

ELDER BROTHER.

Why prythee, shepherd,

452 comus.

How durst thou then thyself approach so near, As to make this relation?

SPIRIT.

Care and utmost shifts How to secure the lady from surprisal, Brought to my mind a certain shepherd lad, Of small regard to see to, yet well skilled In every virtuous plant and healing herb That spreads her verdant leaf to the morning ray: He loved me well, and oft would beg me sing, Which when I did, he on the tender grass Would sit, and hearken even to ecstasy, And in requital ope his leathern scrip, And show me simples of a thousand names, Telling their strange and vigorous faculties: Amongst the rest a small unsightly root, But of divine effect, he culled me out; The leaf was darkish, and had prickles on it: But in another country, as he said, Bore a bright golden flower, but not in this soil: Unknown, and like esteemed, and the dull swair Treads on it daily with his clouted shoon: And yet more med'cinal is it than that moly That Hermes once to wise Ulysses gave; He called it hæmony, and gave it me, And bade me keep it as of sovran use 'Gainst all enchantments, mildew, blast, or damp. Or ghastly furies' apparition. I pursed it up, but little reckoning made, Till now that this extremity compelled: But now I find it true; for by this means I knew the foul enchanter, though disguised, Entered the very lime-twigs of his spells, And yet came off: if you have this about you. (As I will give you when we go) you may Boldly assault the necromancer's hall; Where if he be, with dauntless hardihood, And brandished blade, rush on him; break his glass, And shed the luscious liquor on the ground, But seize his wand; though he and his cursed crew

Fierce sign of battle make, and menace high, Or like the sons of Vulcan vomit smoke, Yet will they soon retire, if he but shrink.

ELDER BROTHER.

Thyrsis, lead on apace, I'll follow thee; And some goo'd angel bear a shield before us!

The scene changes to a stately palace, set out with all manner of deliciousness; soft music, tables spread with all dainties. Comus appears with his rabble, and the Lady set in an enchanted chair, to whom he offers his glass, which she puts by, and goes about to rise.]

COMUS.

Nay, lady, sit; if I but wave this wand, Your nerves are all chained up in alabaster And you a statue, or, as Daphne was, Root-bound, that fled Apollo.

LADY.

Fool! do not boast;

Thou canst not touch the freedom of my mind With all thy charms, although this corporal rind Thou hast immanacled, while Heaven sees good.

COMUS.

Why are you vexed, lady? why do you frown? Here dwell no frowns, nor anger; from these gates Sorrow flies far: see, here be all the pleasures That fancy can beget on youthful thoughts, When the fresh blood grows lively, and returns Brisk as the April buds in primrose-season. And first behold this cordial julep here, That flames and dances in his crystal bounds. With spirit of balm and fragrant syrups mixed Not that Nepenthes, which the wife of Thone In Egypt gave to Jove-born Helena, Is of such power to stir up joy as this, To life so friendly, or so cool to thirst. Why should you be so cruel to yourself, And to those dainty limbs which Nature lent For gentle usage, and soft delicacy? But you invert the covenants of her trust. And harshly deal, like an ill borrower,

With that which you received on other terms, Scorning the unexempt condition
By which all mortal frailty must subsist,
Refreshment after toil, ease after pain,
That have been tired all day without repast,
And timely rest have wanted; but, fair virgin,
This will restore all soon.

LADY.

'Twill not, false traitor! 'Twill not restore the truth and honesty That thou hast banished from thy tongue with lies. Was this the cottage, and the safe abode, Thou told'st me of? What grim aspects are these, These ugly-headed monsters? Mercy guard me! Hence with thy brewed enchantments, foul deceiver! Hast thou betrayed my credulous innocence With visored falsehood, and base forgery? And wouldst thou seek again to trap me here With liquorish baits fit to ensnare a brute? Were it a draught for Juno when she banquets. I would not taste thy treasonous offer; none But such as are good men can give good things, And that which is not good, is not delicious To a well-governed and wise appetite.

COMUS. Oh, foolishness of men! that lend their ears To those budge doctors of the Stoic fur, And fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub, Praising the lean and sallow abstinence. Wherefore did Nature pour her bounties forth With such a full and unwithdrawing hand, Covering the earth with odours, fruits, and flocks, Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable, But all to please and sate the curious taste? And set to work millions of spinning worms, That in their green shops weave the smooth-haired silk To deck her sons; and, that no corner might Be vacant of her plenty, in her own loins She hutched the all-worshipped ore, and precious gems To store her children with: if all the world

Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse,
Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear but frieze,
The All-giver would be unthanked, would be unpraised,
Not half his riches known, and yet despised;
And we should serve him as a grudging master,
As a penurious niggard of his wealth,
And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons,
Who would be quite surcharged with her own weight,
And strangled with her waste fertility;
The earth cumbered, and the winged air darked with plumes,

The herds would over-multitude their lords,
The sea o'erfraught would swell, and the unsought diamonds

Would so emblaze the forehead of the deep, And so bestud with stars, that they below Would grow inured to light, and come at last To gaze upon the sun with shameless brows. List, lady, be not coy, and be not cozened With that same vaunted name, virginity. Beauty is Nature's coin, must not be hoarded, But must be current; and the good thereof Consists in mutual and partaken bliss, Unsavoury in the enjoyment of itself; If you let slip time, like a neglected rose It withers on the stalk with languished head. Beauty is Nature's brag, and must be shown In courts, at feasts, and high solemnities, Where most may wonder at the workmanship; It is for homely features to keep home, They had their name thence; coarse complexions, And cheeks of sorry grain, will serve to ply The sampler, and to tease the housewife's wool. What need a vermeil-tinetured lip for that, Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the morn? There was another meaning in these gifts; Think what, and be advised: you are but young yet. LADY.

I had not thought to have unlocked my lips In this unhallowed air, but that this juggler

Would think to charm my judgment, as mine eyes, Obtruding false rules prankt in reason's garb. I hate when vice can bolt her arguments, And virtue has no tongue to check her pride. Impostor, do not charge most innocent Nature. As if she would her children should be riotous With her abundance; she, good cateress, Means her provision only to the good, That live according to her sober laws, And holy dictate of spare temperance: If every just man, that now pines with want, Had but a moderate and beseeming share Of that which lewdly-pampered luxury Now heaps upon some few with vast excess, Nature's full blessings would be well dispensed In unsuperfluous even proportion, And she no whit encumbered with her store: And then the Giver would be better thanked, His praise due paid; for swinish gluttony Ne'er looks to Heaven amidst his gorgeous feast, But with besotted base ingratitude Crams, and blasphemes his Feeder. Shall I go on? Or have I said enough? To him that dares Arm his profane tongue with contemptuous words Against the sun-clad power of chastity, Fain would I something say, yet to what end? Thou has not ear, nor soul, to apprehend The sublime notion, and high mystery, That must be uttered to unfold the sage And serious doctrine of virginity; And thou art worthy that thou shouldst not know More happiness than this thy present lot. Enjoy your dear wit, and gay rhetoric, That hath so well been taught her dazzling fence, Thou art not fit to hear thyself convinced; Yet, should I try, the uncontrolled worth Of this pure cause would kindle my rapt spirits To such a flame of sacred vehemence, That dumb things would be moved to sympathize, And the brute earth would lend her nerves, and shake,

Till all thy magic structures, reared so high, Were shattered into heaps o'er thy false head.

COMUS.

She fables not: I feel that I do fear
Her words set off by some superior power;
And though not mortal, yet a cold shuddering dew
Dips me all o'er, as when the wrath of Jove
Speaks thunder, and the chains of Erebus,
To some of Saturn's crew. I must dissemble,
And try her yet more strongly. Come, no more;
This is mere moral babble, and direct
Against the canon laws of our foundation;
I must not suffer this, yet 'tis but the lees
And settlings of a melancholy blood:
But this will cure all straight; one sip of this
Will bathe the drooping spirits in delight
Beyond the bliss of dreams. Be wise, and taste.

[The Brothers rush in with swords drawn, wrest his glass out of his hand, and break it against the ground: his rout makes sign of resistance, but are all driven in. The Attendant Spirit comes in.]

SPIRIT.

What, have you let the false enchanter 'scape? Oh! ye mistook, ye should have snatched his wand, And bound him fast; without his rod reversed, And backward mutters of dissevering power, We cannot free the lady that sits here In stony fetters fixed, and motionless; Yet stay, be not disturbed; now I bethink me, Some other means I have which may be used, Which once of Melibous old I learnt, The soothest shepherd that e're piped on plains. There is a gentle nymph not far from hence, That with moist curb sways the smooth Severn stream. Sabrina is her name, a virgin pure; Whilome she was the daughter of Locrine, That had the sceptre from his father Brute. She, guiltless damsel, flying the mad pursuit Of her enraged stepdame Guendolen, Commended her fair innocence to the flood, That stayed her flight with his cross-flowing course.

The water nymphs that in the bottom played, Held up their pearled wrists and took her in, Bearing her straight to aged Nereus' hall, Who, piteous of our woes, reared her lank head, And gave her to his daughters to embathe In nectared layers strewed with asphodel, And through the porch and inlet of each sense Dropped in ambrosial oils till she revived, And underwent a quick immortal change, Made goddess of the river: still she retains Her maiden gentleness, and oft at eve Visits the herds along the twilight meadows, Helping all urchin blasts, and ill-luck signs That the shrewd meddling elf delights to make, Which she with precious vialled liquors heals; For which the shepherds at their festivals Carol her goodness loud in rustic lays, And throw sweet garland wreaths into her stream Of pansies, pinks, and gaudy daffodils. And, as the old swain said, she can unlock The clasping charm, and thaw the numbing spell, If she be right invoked in warbled song; For maidenhood she loves, and will be swift To aid a virgin, such as was herself, In hard-besetting need: this will I try, And add the power of some adjuring verse. Song.

Sabrina fair,

Listen where thou art sitting
Under the glassy, cool, translucent wave,
In twisted braids of lilies knitting
The loose train of thy amber-dropping hair;
Listen for dear honour's sake,
Goddess of the silver lake,

Listen, and save.
Listen, and appear to us,
In name of great Oceanus;
By the earth-shaking Neptune's mace,
And Tethys' grave majestic pace,
By hoary Nereus' wrinkled look,

And the Carpathian wizard's hook, By scaly Triton's winding shell, And old soothsaying Glaucus' spell, By Leucothea's lovely hands, And her son that rules the strands. By Thetis' tinsel-slippered feet, And the songs of sirens sweet. By dead Parthenope's dear tomb, And fair Ligea's golden comb, Wherewith she sits on diamond rocks, Sleeking her soft alluring locks; By all the nymphs that nightly dance Upon thy streams with wily glance, Rise, rise, and heave thy rosy head From thy coral-paven bed, And bridle in thy headlong wave, Till thou our summons answered have. Listen, and save.

[SABRINA rises, attended by water-nymphs, and sings.]

By the rushy-fringed bank,
Where grows the willow and the osier dank,
My sliding chariot stays,
Thick set with agate, and the azure sheen
Of turkis blue, and emerald green,
That in the channel strays;
Whilst from off the waters fleet
Thus I set my printless feet
O'er the cowslip's velvet head,
That bends not as I tread;
Gentle swain, at thy request
I am here.

SPIRIT.

Goddess dear,
We implore thy powerful hand
To undo the charméd band
Of true virgin here distressed,
Through the force, and through the wile,
Of unblest enchanter vile.

SABRINA.

Shepherd, 'tis my office best
To help ensnaréd chastity:
Brightest lady, look on me;
Thus I sprinkle on thy breast
Drops, that from my fountain pure
I have kept, of precious cure;
Thrice upon thy finger's tip,
Thrice upon thy rubied lip;
Next this marble venomed seat,
Smeared with gums of glutinous heat,
I touch with chaste palms moist and cold:
Now the spell hath lost his hold;
And I must haste, ere morning hour,
To wait in Amphitrite's bower.

[SABRINA descends, and the LADY rises out of her seat.]

SPIRIT.

Virgin, daughter of Locrine, Sprung of old Anchises' line. May thy brimméd waves for this Their full tribute never miss From a thousand petty rills, That tumble down the snowy hills: Summer drouth, or singéd air, Never scorch thy tresses fair, Nor wet October's torrent flood Thy molten crystal fill with mud: May thy billows roll ashore The beryl, and the golden ore, May thy lofty head be crowned With many a tower and terrace round, And here and there thy banks upon With groves of myrrh and cinnamon. Come, lady, while Heaven lends us grace,

Let us fly this curséd place, Lest the sorcerer us entice With some other new device. Not a waste or needless sound Till we come to holier ground; I shall be your faithful guide
Through this gloomy covert wide;
And not many furlongs thence
Is your father's residence,
Where this night are met in state
Many a friend to gratulate
His wished presence; and, beside,
All the swains that near abide,
With jigs and rural dance resort:
We shall catch them at their sport;
And our sudden coming there
Will double all their mirth and cheer.
Come, let us haste, the stars grow high,
But night sits monarch yet in the mid sky.

[The Scene changes, presenting Ludlow town and the President's castle; then come in country dancers; after them the ATTENDANT SPIRIT, with the two BROTHERS and the LADY.

Song.

Back, shepherds, back! enough your play,
Till next sunshine holiday:
Here be, without duck or nod,
Other trippings to be trod
Of lighter toes, and such court guise
As Mercury did first devise,
With the mincing Dryades,
On the lawns, and on the leas.

[This second Song presents them to their Father and Mother.]

Noble lord, and lady bright,
I have brought ye new delight;
Here behold, so goodly grown,
Three fair branches of your own;
Heaven hath timely tried their youth,
Their faith, their patience, and their truth,
And sent them here through hard assays

With a crown of deathless praise, To triumph in victorious dance O'er sensual folly and intemperance.

[The dances ended, the SPIRIT epiloguises.]

SPIRIT. To the ocean now I fly, And those happy climes that lie Where day never shuts his eye, Up in the broad fields of the sky: There I suck the liquid air All amidst the gardens fair Of Hesperus, and his daughters three. That sing about the golden tree: Along the crispéd shades and bowers Revels the spruce and jocund Spring, The Graces, and the rosy-bosomed Hours, Thither all their bounties bring: There eternal Summer dwells, And west winds, with musky wing, About the cedarn alleys fling Nard and cassia's balmy smells. Iris there with humid bow Waters the odorous banks, that blow Flowers of more mingled hue Than her purfled scarf can shew, And drenches with Elysian dew (List, mortals, if your ears be true) Beds of hyacinth and roses, Where young Adonis oft reposes, Waxing well of his deep wound In slumber soft, and on the ground Sadly sits the Assyrian queen; But far above, in spangled sheen, Celestial Cupid, her famed son, advanced, Holds his dear Psyche sweet entranced, After her wandering labours long, Till free consent the gods among Make her his eternal bride, And from her fair unspotted side Two blissful twins are to be born, Youth and Joy; so Jove hath sworn. But now my task is smoothly done; I can fly, or I can run

Quickly to the green earth's end,

Where the bowed welkin slow doth bend, And from thence can soar as soon To the corners of the moon.

Mortals, that would follow me, Love Virtue; she alone is free: She can teach ye how to climb Higher than the sphery chime; Or, if Virtue feeble were, Heaven itself would stoop to her.

XVII.

LYCIDAS.

[In this monody the author bewails a learned friend, Mr. Edward King, who was unfortunately drowned in his passage from Chester on the Irish seas, 1637, and by occasion foretells the ruin of our corrupted clergy, then in their height.]

YET once more, O ye laurels! and once more Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never sere, And with forced fingers rude Shatter your leaves had I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude, walk Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year Bitter constraint, and sad occasion dear, Compels me to disturb your season due; For Lycidas is dead, dead ere his prime, Young Lycidas, and hath not left his peer: Who would not sing for Lycidas? He knew Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme. He must not float upon his watery bier Unwept, and welter to the parching wind, Without the meed of some melodious tear. Begin then, sisters, of the sacred well, That from beneath the seat of Jove doth spring; Begin, and somewhat loudly sweep the string. Hence with denial vain, and coy excuse, So may some gentle muse With lucky words favour my destined urn,

E WINES OF

IN SEFENCE HE

And, as he passes, turn And bid fair peace be to my sable shroud: For we were nursed upon the self-same hill, Fed the same flock by fountain, shade, and rill.

Together both, ere the high lawns appeared

BACK 6.76 JAM

Under the opening eyelids of the morn,
We drove a field, and both together heard
What time the gray fly winds her sultry horn,
Battening our flocks with the fresh dews of night,
Oft till the star that rose, at evening, bright,
Toward Heaven's descent had sloped his westering wheel.
Meanwhile the rural ditties were not mute,
Tempered to the oaten flute;
Rough satyrs danced, and fauns with cloven heel
From the glad sound would not be absent long,
And old Damætas loved to hear our song.

But oh, the heavy change, now thou art gone, Now thou art gone, and never must return! Thee, shepherd, thee the woods, and desert caves With wild thyme and the gadding vine o'ergrown, And all their echoes mourn. The willows, and the hazel copses green, Shall now no more be seen, Fanning their joyous leaves to thy soft lays. As killing as the canker to the rose, Or taint-worm to the weanling herds that graze, Or frost to flowers, that their gay wardrobe wear,

When first the white-thorn blows; Such, Lycidas, thy loss to shepherds' ear.

Where were ye, nymphs, when the remorseless deep >E4- Nymphs Closed o'er the head of your loved Lycidas? For neither were ye playing on the steep, Where your old bards, the famous Druids, lie; Nor on the shaggy top of Mona high, Nor yet where Deva spreads her wizard stream: Ay me! I fondly dream Had ye been there, for what could that have done? norther of cooling What could the muse herself that Orpheus bore, CAKLICPE The muse herself for her enchanting son, Whom universal nature did lament, IF CAMIDIE CEL-DRT When by the rout that made the hideous roar, SAVE SEPHENS THE His gory visage down the stream was sent, (शंदिम्बर्ग अल्पून्त -Down the swift Hebrus to the Lesbian shore? SC BANG E WAS THOU Alas! what boots it with incessant care To tend the homely slighted shepherd's trade,

And strictly meditate the thankless muse? Were it not better done as others use, To sport with Amaryllis in the shade, Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair? Westman Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise (That last infirmity of noble mind) To scorn delights, and live laborious days; But the fair guerdon when we hope to find, And think to burst out into sudden blaze, Comes the blind fury with the abhorred shears, And slits the thin-spun life. "But not the praise," Phæbus replied, and touched my trembling ears. "Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil, Nor in the glistering foil Set off to the world, nor in broad rumour lies,

But lives and spreads aloft by those pure eyes,
And perfect witness of all-judging Jove;
As he pronounces lastly on each deed,
Of so much fame in Heaven expect thy meed."
O fountain Arethuse, and thou honoured flor But lives and spreads aloft by those pure eyes,

O fountain Arethuse, and thou honoured flood, Smooth-sliding Mincius, crowned with vocal reeds, That strain I heard was of a higher mood: But now my oat proceeds,

And listens to the herald of the sea That came in Neptune's plea; He asked the waves, and asked the felon winds, What hard mishap had doomed this gentle swain? And questioned every gust of rugged wings, That blows from off each beaked promontory: They knew not of his story,

And sage Hippotades their answer brings, That not a blast was from his dungeon strayed, The air was calm, and on the level brine Sleek Panope with all her sisters played. It was that fatal and perfidious bark Built in the eclipse, and rigged with curses dark,

That sunk so low that sacred head of thine. Next Camus, reverend sire, went footing slow, His mantle hairy, and his bonnet sedge,

Inwrought with figures dim, and on the edge,

Like to that sanguine flower inscribed with woe. "Ah! who hath reft," quoth he, "my dearest pledge?" Last came, and last did go, The pilot of the Galilean lake. Two massy keys he bore, of metals twain (The golden opes, the iron shuts amain), He shook his mitred locks, and stern bespake: 'How well could I have spared for thee, young swain, Enow of such as for their bellies' sake Creep, and intrude, and climb into the fold! Of other care they little reckoning make, Than how to scramble at the shearer's feast, And shove away the worthy bidden guest; Blind mouths! that scarce themselves know how to hold A sheep-hook, or have learned aught else the least That to the faithful herdsman's art belongs! What recks it them? What need they? They are sped: And when they list, their lean and flashy songs Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw; The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed, But swollen with wind, and the rank mist they draw. Rot inwardly, and foul contagion spread: Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw Daily devours apace, and nothing said. But that two-handed engine at the door Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more," Return, Alpheus, the dread voice is past,

Return, Alpheus, the dread voice is past,
That shrunk thy streams: return Sicilian muse,
And call the vales, and bid them hither cast
Their bells and flowerets of a thousand hues.
Ye valleys low, where the mild whispers use
Of shades, and wanton winds, and gushing brooks.
On whose fresh lap the swart star sparely looks,
Throw hither all your quaint enamelled eyes,
That on the green turf suck the honeyed showers,
And purple all the ground with vernal flowers.
Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies,
The tufted crow-toe, and pale jessamine,
The white pink, and the bansy freaked with jet,
The glowing violet,

The musk-rose, and the well-attired woodbine, With cowslips wan that hang the pensive head, And every flower that sad embroidery wears: Bid amaranthus all his beauty shed, And daffodillies fill their cups with tears, To strow the laureate hearse where Lycid lies. For so to interpose a little ease, Let our frail thoughts dally with false surmise. Ay me! whilst thee the shores and sounding seas Wash far away, where ere thy bones are hurled, Whether beyond the stormy Hebrides, Where thou, perhaps, under the whelming tide Visit'st the bottom of the monstrous world; Or whether thou to our moist vows denied, Sleep'st by the fable of Bellerus old. Where the great vision of the guarded mount Looks toward Namancos and Bayona's hold; Look homeward, angel now, and melt with ruth: And, O ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth.

Weep no more, woeful shepherds, weep no more, For Lycidas your sorrow is not dead, Sunk though he be beneath the watery floor; So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed, And yet anon repairs his drooping head, And tricks his beams, and with new-spangled ore Flames in the forehead of the morning sky: So Lycidas sunk low, but mounted high, Through the dear might of him that walked the wastes Where other groves and other streams along, With nectar pure his oozy locks he laves, And hears the unexpressive nuptial song, In the blest kingdoms meek of joy and love. There entertain him all the saints above, In solemn troops, and sweet societies, That sing, and singing in their glory move, And wipe the tears for ever from his eyes. Now, Lycidas, the shepherds weep no more; Henceforth thou art the genius of the shore, In thy large recompense, and shalt be good To all that wander in that perilous flood.

Thus sang the uncouth swain to the oaks and rills, While the still morn went out with sandals gray; He touched the tender stops of various quills, With eager thought warbling his Doric lay: And now the sun had stretched out all the hills, And now was dropped into the western bay; At last he rose, and twitched his mantle blue: To morrow to fresh woods, and pastures new.

THE FIFTH ODE OF HORACE, LIB. I.

["Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa," rendered almost word for word without rhyme, according to the Latin measure, as near as the languagewill permit.]

What slender youth, bedewed with liquid odours,

Courts thee on roses in some pleasant cave,

Pyrrha? For whom bind'st thou

In wreaths thy golden hair, Plain in thy neatness? Oh, how oft shall he On faith and changed gods complain, and seas

Rough with black winds and storms

Unwonted shall admire!

Who now enjoys thee credulous, all gold; Who always vacant, always amiable,

Hopes thee, of flattering gales Unmindful. Hapless they

To whom thou untried seem'st fair. Me in my vowed Picture the sacred wall declares to have hung

My dank and dropping weeds To the stern god of sea.

AD PYRRHAM. ODE V.

Horatius ex Pyrrhæ illecebris tanquam è naufragio enataverat, cujus amore irretitos, affirmat esse miseros.

Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa Perfusus liquidis urget odoribus, Grato, Pyrrha, sub antro? Cui flavam religas comam
Simplex munditiis? heu quoties fidem
Mutatosque deos flebit, et aspera
Nigris æquora ventis
Emirabitur insolens!
Qui nunc te fruitur credulus aurea,
Qui semper vacuam semper amabilem
Sperat, nescius auræ
Fallacis. Miseri quibus
Intentata nites. Me tubula sacer
Votiva paries indicat uvida
Suspendisse potenti
Vestimenta maris Deo.

ON THE NEW FORCERS OF CONSCIENCE UNDER THE LONG PARLIAMENT.

BECAUSE you have thrown off your prelate lord, And with stiff vows renounced his liturgy, To seize the widowed whore Plurality From them whose sin ye envied, not abhorred, Dare ye for this adjure the civil sword To force our consciences that Christ set free, And ride us with a classic hierarchy Taught ye by mere A. S. and Rotherford? Men whose life, learning, faith, and pure intent Would have been held in high esteem with Paul, Must now be named and printed heretics By shallow Edwards and Scotch what d'ye call: But we do hope to find out all your tricks, Your plots and packing worse than those of Trent, That so the Parliament May, with their wholesome and preventive shears, Clip your phylacteries, though bank your ears,

And succour our just fears, When they shall read this clearly in your charge, New Presbyter is but Old Priest writ large.

TO THE NIGHTINGALE.

O NIGHTINGALE, that on yon bloomy spray
Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still,
Thou with fresh hope the lover's heart dost fill,
While the jolly hours lead on propitious May.
Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,
First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,
Portend success in love; oh, if Jove's will
Have linked that amorous power to thy soft lay,
Now timely sing, ere the rude bird of hate
Foretell my hopeless doom in some grove nigh;
As thou from year to year hast sung too late
For my relief, yet hadst no reason why:
Whether the Muse, or Love, call thee his mate,
Both them I serve, and of their train am I.

II.

Donna leggiadra il cui bel nome honora
L' herbosa val di Rheno, e il nobil varco,
Bene è colui d' ogni valore scarco
Qual tuo spirto gentil non innamora,
Che dolcemente mostra si di fuora
De sui atti soavi giamai parco,
E i don', che son d'amor saette ed arco,
La onde l' alta tua virtu s' infiora.

(471)

Quando tu vaga parli, o lieta canti
Che mover possa duro alpestre legno,
Guardi ciascun a gli occhi, ed a gli orecchi
L' entrata, chi di te si truova indegno;
Grazia sola di su gli vaglia, inanti
Che 'l disio amoroso al cuor s' invecchi.

III.

Qual in colle aspro, al imbrunir di sera
L' avezza giovinetta pastorella
Va bagnando l' herbetta strana e bella
Che mal si spande a disusata spera
Fuor di sua natia alma primavera,
Cosi Amor meco insù la lingua snella
Desta il fior novo di strania favella,
Mentre io di te, vezzosamente altera,
Canto, dal mio buon popol non inteso,
E 'l bel Tamigi cangio col bel Arno.
Amor lo volse, ed io a l' altrui peso
Seppi ch' Amor cosa mai volse indarno.
Deh! foss' il mio cuor lento e 'l duro seno
A chi pianta dal ciel si buon terreno.

CANZONE.

Ridonsi donne e giovani amorosi
M'accostandosi attorno, e perche scrivi,
Perche tu scrivi in lingua ignota e strana
Verseggiando d'amor, e come t'osi?
Dinne, se la tua speme sia mai vana,
E de pensieri lo miglior t'arrivi;
Cosi mi van burlando, altri rivi
Altri lidi t'aspettan, et altre onde
Nelle cui verdi sponde
Spuntati ad hor, ad hor a la tua chioma
L'immortal guiderdon d'eterne frondi;
Perche alle spalle tue soverchia soma?
Canzon dirotti, e tu per me rispondi
Dice mia Donna, e'l suo dir, e il mio cuore
Questa e lingua di cui si vanta Amore.

IV.

DIODATI, e te 'l dirò con maraviglia,
Quel ritroso io ch' amor spreggiar soléa
E de suoi lacci spesso mi ridéa
Gia caddi, ov' huom dabben talhor s' impiglia.
Ne treccie d' oro, ne guancia vermiglia
M' abbaglian sì, ma sotto nova idea
Pellegrina bellezza che' l cuor bea,
Portamenti alti honesti, e nelle ciglia
Quel sereno fulgor d' amabil nero,
Parole adorne di lingua pui d' una,
E 'l cantar che di mezzo l' hemispero
Traviar ben puo la faticosa Luna,

V.

E degli occhi suoi auventa si gran fuoco Che l' incerar gli orecchi mi fia poco.

Per certo i bei vost'r occhi, Donna mia
Esser non puo che non sian lo mio sole
Si mi percuoton forte, come ei suole
Per l'arene di Libia chi s' invia,
Mentre un caldo vapor (ne sentì pria)
Da quel lato si spinge ove mi duole,
Che forse amanti nelle lor parole
Chiaman sospir; io non so che si sia:
Parte rinchiusa, e turbida si cela
Scosso mi il petto, e poi n'uscendo poco
Quivi d'attorno o s' agghiaccia, o s' ingiela;
Ma quanto a gli occhi giunge a trovar loco
Tutte le notti a me suol far provose
Finche mia Alba rivien colma di rose.

VI.

GIOVANE piano, e semplicetto amante,
Poi che fuggir me stesso in dubbio sono,
Madonna a voi del mio cuor l' humil dono
Faro divoto; io certo a prove tante
L' hebbi fedele, intrepido, costante,
De pensieri leggiadro, accorto, e buono;
Quando rugge il gran mondo, e scocca il tuono,

S' arma di se, e d' intero diamante;
Tanto del forse, e d' invidia sicuro,
Di timori, e speranze al popol use
Quanto d' ingegno, e d' alto valor vago,
E di cetra sonora, e delle muse:
Sol troverete in tal parte men duro
Ove Amor mise l' insanabil ago.

VII.

ON HIS BEING ARRIVED AT THE AGE OF TWENTY-THREE.

How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth,
Stolen on his wing my three-and-twentieth year!
My hasting days fly on with full career,
But my late spring no bud or blossom shew'th.
Perhaps my semblance might deceive the truth,
That I to manhood am arrived so near,
And inward ripeness doth much less appear,
That some more timely-happy spirits endu'th.
Yet be it less or more, or soon or slow,
It shall be still in strictest measure even
To that same lot, however mean or high,
Toward which Time leads me, and the will of Heaven;
All is, if I have grace to use it so,
As ever in my great Task-Master's eye.

VIII.

WHEN THE ASSAULT WAS INTENDED TO THE CITY.

Captain or colonel, or knight in arms,

Whose chance on these defenceless doors may seize,
If deed of honour did thee ever please,
Guard them, and him within protect from harms.
He can requite thee, for he knows the charms
That call fame on such gentle acts as these,
And he can spread thy name o'er lands and seas,

Whatever clime the sun's bright circle warms.

Lift not thy spear against the Muses' bower:

The great Emathian conqueror bid spare
The house of Pindarus, when temple and tower
Went to the ground: and the repeated air
Of sad Electra's poet had the power
To save the Athenian walls from ruin bare.

IX.

TO A VIRTUOUS YOUNG LADY.

Lady, that in the prime of earliest youth
Wisely hast shunned the broad way and the green,
And with those few art eminently seen,
That labour up the hill of heavenly truth,
The better part with Mary and with Ruth
Chosen thou hast; and they that overween,
And at thy growing virtues fret their spleen,
No anger find in thee, but pity and ruth.
Thy care is fixed, and zealously attends
To fill thy odorous lamp with deeds of light,
And hope that reaps not shame. Therefore be sure
Thou, when the bridegroom with his feastful friends
Passes to bliss at the mid hour of night,
Hath gained thy entrance, virgin wise and pure.

X.

TO THE LADY MARGARET LEY.

DAUGHTER to that good earl, once President
Of England's Council, and her Treasury,
Who lived in both, unstained with gold or free,
And left them both, more in himself content,
Till sad the breaking of that Parliament
Broke him, as that dishonest victory
At Chæronea, fatal to liberty,
Killed with report that old man eloquent.
Though later born that to have known the days

Wherein your father flourished, yet by you, Madam, methinks I see him living yet; So well your words his noble virtues praise, That all both judge you to relate them true, And to possess them, honoured Margaret.

XI.

ON THE DETRACTION WHICH FOLLOWED UPON MY WRITING CERTAIN TREATISES.

A BOOK was writ of late, called "Tetrachordon,"
And woven close, both matter, form, and style;
The subject new: it walked the town a while,
Numbering good intellects; now seldom pored on.
Cries the stall-reader, Bless us! what a word on

A title-page is this! and some in file

Stand spelling false, while one might walk to Mile-End Green. Why is it harder, sirs, than Gordon,

Colkitto, or Macdonnel, or Galasp?

Those rugged names to our like mouths grow sleek,
That would have made Quintilian stare and gasp.

Thy age, like ours, O soul of Sir John Cheek,
Hated not learning worse than toad or asp,
When thou taught'st Cambridge, and king Edward,

Greek.

XII.

ON THE SAME.

I pm but prompt the age to quit their clogs
By the known rules of ancient liberty,
When straight a barbarous noise environs me
Of owls and cuckoos, asses, apes, and dogs:
As when those hinds that were transformed to frogs
Railed at Latona's twin-born progeny,
Which after held the sun and moon in fee.
But this is got by casting pearl to hogs,
That bawl for freedom in their senseless mood,

And still revolt when truth would set them free.
License they mean when they cry "Liberty!"
For who loves that, must first be wise and good;
But from that mark how far they rove we see
For all this waste of wealth, and loss of blood.

XIII.

TO MR. H. LAWES ON HIS AIRS.

HARRY, whose tuneful and well-measured song
First taught our English music how to span
Words with just note and accent, not to scan
With Midas' ears, committing short and long;
Thy worth and skill exempts thee from the throng.
With praise enough for envy to look wan;
To after age thou shalt be writ the man,
That with smooth air couldst humour best our tongue
Thou honour'st verse, and verse must lend her wing
To honour thee, the priest of Phæbus' quire,
That tun'st their happiest lines in hymn or story.
Dante shall give Fame leave to set thee higher
Than his Casella, whom he wooed to sing
Met in the milder shades of purgatory.

XIV.

ON THE RELIGIOUS MEMORY OF MRS. CATHA-RINE THOMSON, MY CHRISTIAN FRIEND.

Deceased 16th December, 1646.

When faith and love, which parted from thee never,
Had ripened thy just soul to dwell with God,
Meekly thou didst resign this earthly load
Of death, called life; which us from life doth sever.
Thy works and alms and all thy good endeavour
Stayed not behind, nor in the grave were trod;
But as faith pointed with her golden rod,
Followed thee up to joy and bliss for ever.

Love led them on, and faith, who knew them best
Thy handmaids, clad them o'er with purple beams
And azure wings, that up they flew so drest,
And spake the truth of thee on glorious themes
Before the Judge, who thenceforth bid thee rest
And drink thy fill of pure immortal streams.

XV.

TO THE LORD GENERAL FAIRFAX.

Fairfax, whose name in arms through Europe rings,
Filling each mouth with envy or with praise,
And all her jealous monarchs with amaze
And rumours loud, that daunt remotest kings,
Thy firm unshaken virtue ever brings
Victory home, though new rebellions raise
Their Hydra heads, and the false north displays
Her broken league to imp their serpent wings.
Oh! yet a nobler task awaits thy hand
(For what can war but endless war still breed?)
Till truth and right from violence be freed,
And public faith cleared from the shameful brand
Of public fraud. In vain doth valour bleed,

While avarice and rapine share the land.

XVI.

TO THE LORD GENERAL CROMWELL.

CROMWELL, our chief of men, who through a cloud
Not of war only, but detractions rude,
Guided by faith and matchless fortitude,
To peace and truth thy glorious way hast ploughed,
And on the neck of crownéd fortune proud
Hast reared God's trophies, and his work pursued,
While Darwen stream with blood of Scots imbrued
And Dunbar field resounds thy praises loud,
And Worcester's laureate wreath. Yet much remains
To conquer still; peace hath her victories

No less renowned than war: new foes arise
Threatening to bind our souls with secular chains:
Help us to save free conscience from the paw
Of hireling wolves, whose gospel is their maw.

XVI.

TO SIR HENRY VANE THE YOUNGER.

VANE, young in years, but in sage counsel old,
Than whom a better senator ne'er held
The helm of Rome, when gowns not arms repelled
The fierce Epirot and the African bold;

Whether to settle peace, or to unfold

The drift of hollow states hard to be spelled,
Then to advise how war may best upheld
Move by her two main nerves, iron and gold,

In all her equipage; besides to know

Both spiritual power and civil, what each means,

What severs each, thou hast learned, which few have done:

The bounds of either sword to thee we owe;
Therefore, on thy firm hand religion leans

Therefore, on thy firm hand religion leans In peace, and reckons thee her eldest son.

XVII.

ON THE LATE MASSACRE IN PIEMONT.

Avenge, O Lord! thy slaughtered saints, whose bones
Lie scattered on the Alpine mountains cold;
Even them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
When all our fathers worshipped stocks and stones,
Forget not: in thy book record their groans
Who were thy sheep, and in their ancient fold
Slain by the bloody Piemontese that rolled
Mother with infant down the rocks. Their moans
The vales redoubled to the hills, and they
To Heaven. Their martyred blood and ashes sow

O'er all the Italian fields, where still doth sway
The triple tyrant; that from these may grow
A hundredfold, who having learned thy way
Early may fly the Babylonian woe.

XIX.

ON HIS BLINDNESS.

When I consider how my light is spent
Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide;
And that one talent which is death to hide,
Lodged with me useless, though my soul more bent
To serve therewith my Maker, and present
My true account, lest he returning chide;
Doth God exact day-labour, light denied,
I fondly ask? But Patience, to prevent
That murmur, soon replies, God doth not need
Either man's work or his own gifts; who best
Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best: his state
Is kingly; thousands at his bidding speed,
And post o'er land and ocean without rest;
They also serve who only stand and wait.

XX.

TO MR. LAWRENCE.

Now that the fields are dank, and ways are mire, Where shall we sometimes meet, and by the fire Help waste a sullen day, what may be won From the hard season gaining? Time will run On smoother, till Favonius re-inspire The frozen earth, and clothe in fresh attire The lily and rose, that neither sowed nor spun. What neat repast shall feast us, light and choice, Of Attic taste, with wine, whence we may rise To hear the lute well touched, or artful voice Warble immortal notes and Tuscan air?

He who of those delights can judge, and spare To interpose them oft, is not unwise.

XXI.

TO CYRIAC SKINNER.

Cyriac, whose grandsire on the royal bench Of British Themis, with no mean applause Pronounced, and in his volumes taught, our laws, Which others at their bar so often wrench; To-day deep thoughts resolve with me to drench In mirth, that after no repenting draws; Let Euclid rest, and Archimedes pause, And what the Swede intends, and what the French To measure life learn thou betimes, and know Toward solid good what leads the nearest way; For other things mild Heaven a time ordains, And disapproves that care, though wise in show, That with superfluous burden loads the day,

XXII.

And, when God sends a cheerful hour, refrains.

TO THE SAME.

Cyriac, this three years' day these eyes, though clear, To outward view, of blemish or of spot, Bereft of light their seeing have forgot, Nor to their idle orbs doth sight appear Of sun, or moon, or star throughout the year, Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot Of heart or hope; but still bear up, and steer Right onward. What supports me, dost thou ask? The conscience, friend, to have lost them overplied In liberty's defence, my noble task, Of which all Europe talks from side to side. This thought might lead me through the world's vain mask

XXIII.

ON DECEASED WIFE.

METHOUGHT I saw my ate espoused saint
Brought to me like Alcestis from the grave,
Whom Jove's great son to her glad husband gave,
Rescued from death by force, though pale and faint
Mine, as whom washed from spot of child-bed taint
Purification in the old law did save;
And such, as yet once more I trust to have
Full sight of her in Heaven without restraint,
Came vested all in white, pure as her mind:
Her face was veiled, yet to my fancied sight
Love, sweetness, goodness, in her person shined
So clear, as in no face with more delight.
But oh! as to embrace me she inclined,
I waked, she fled, and day brought back my night

Psalms.

PSALM I.

DONE INTO VERSE, 1653.

BLESSED is the man who hath not walked astray In council of the wicked, and i' the way Of sinners hath not stood, and in the seat Of scorners hath not sat. But in the great Jehovah's law is ever his delight, And in his law he studies day and night. He shall be as a tree which planted grows By watery streams, and in his season knows To yield his fruit, and his leaf shall not fall, And what he takes in hand shall prosper all. Not so the wicked, but as chaff which fanned The wind drives, so the wicked shall not stand In judgment, or abide their trial then, Nor sinners in the assembly of just men. For the Lord knows the upright way of the just; And the way of bad men to ruin must.

PSALM II.

DONE AUGUST 8, 1653.

Terzette.

Why do the Gentiles tumult, and the nations
Muse a vain thing, the kings of the earth upstand
With power, and princes in their congregations
Lay deep their plots together through each land

Against the Lord and his Messiah dear? Let us break off, say they, by strength of hand Their bonds, and cast from us, no more to wear, Their twisted cords: he who in Heaven doth dwell Shall laugh, the Lord shall scoff them, then severe Speak to them in his wrath, and in his fell And fierce ire trouble them; but I, saith he, Anointed have my King (though ye rebel) On Sion my holy hill. A firm decree I will declare: the Lord to me hath said, Thou art my Son, I have begotten thee This day; ask of me, and the grant is made; As thy possession I on thee bestow The Heathen, and as thy conquest to be swaved Earth's utmost bounds: them shalt thou bring full low With iron sceptre bruised, and them disperse Like to a potter's vessel shivered so. And now be wise at length, ye kings averse; Be taught, ye judges of the earth; with fear Jehovah serve, and let your joy converse With trembling; kiss the Son, lest he appear In anger, and ye perish in the way, If once his wrath take fire like fuel sere. Happy all those who have in him their stay.

PSALM III.

August 9, 1653.

When he fled from Absalom.

Horn, how many are my foes!
How many those
That in arms against me rise!
Many are they
That of my life distrustfully doth say,
No help for him in God there lies.
But thou, Lord, art my shield, my glory,
Thee through my story

The exalter of my head I count; Aloud I cried

Unto Jehovah, he full soon replied, And heard me from his holy mount. I lay and slept, I waked again;

For my sustain

Was the Lord. Of many millions

The populous rout

1 fear not, though encamping round about They pitch against me their pavilions. Rise, Lord, save me, my God, for thou

Hast smote ere now

On the cheek-bone all my foes, Of men abhorred

Hast broke the teeth. This help was from the Lord; Thy blessing on thy people flows.

PSALM IV.

August 10, 1653.

Answer me when I call,
God of my righteousness,
In straits and in distress
Thou didst me disenthrall
And set at large; now spare,
Now pity me, and hear my carnest prayer.

Great ones, how long will ye My glory have in scorn, How long be thus forborne Still to love vanity, To love, to seek, to prize

Things false and vain, and nothing else but lies?

Yet know the Lord hath chose, Chose to himself apart, The good and meek of heart (For whom to choose he knows); Jehovah from on high

Will hear my voice what time to him I cry.

Be awed, and do not sin,
Speak to your hearts alone,
Upon your beds, each one,
And be at peace within.
Offer the offerings just
Of righteousness, and in Jehovah trust.

Many there be that say,
Who yet will show us good?
Talking like this world's brood;
But, Lord, thus let me pray,
On us lift up the light,
Lift up the the favour of thy countenance bright.

Into my heart more joy
And gladness thou hast put,
Than when a year of glut
Their stores doth over-cloy,
And from their plenteous grounds
With vast increase their corn and wine abounds.

In peace at once will I
Both lay me down and sleep,
For thou alone dost keep
Me safe where'er I lie:
As in a rocky cell
Thou, Lord, alone in safety mak'st me dwell.

PSALM V.

AUGUST 12, 1653.

Jahovah, to my words give ear,
My meditation weigh;
The voice of my complaining hear,
My King and God; for unto thee I pray.
Jehovah, thou my early voice
Shall in the morning hear,
I' the morning I to thee with choice
Will rank my prayers, and watch till thou appear,

For thou art not a God that takes

In wickedness delight,

Evil with thee no biding makes, Fools or mad men stand not within thy sight.

All workers of iniquity

Thou hat'st; and them unblest Thou wilt destroy that speak a lie;

The bloody and guileful man God doth detest.

But I will in thy mercies dear, Thy numerous mercies, go Into thy house; I in thy fear

Will towards thy holy temple worship low.

Lord, lead me in thy righteousness,

Lead me because of those That do observe if I transgress;

Set thy ways right before, where my step goes.

For in his faltering mouth unstable

No word is firm or sooth; Their inside, troubles miserable;

An open grave their throat, their tongue they smooth.

God, find them guilty, let them fall By their own counsels quelled; Push them in their rebellions all

Still on; for against thee they have rebelled.

Then all who trust in thee shall bring
Their joy; while thou from blame

Defend'st them, they shall ever sing And shall triumph in thee, who love thy name.

For thou, Jehovah, wilt be found

To bless the just man still;
As with a shield thou wilt surround

Him with thy lasting favour and good will.

PSALM VI.

AUGUST 13, 1653.

Lord, in thine anger do not reprehend me,
Nor in thy hot displeasure me correct;
Pity me, Lord, for I am much deject,
And very weak and faint; heal and amend me:
For all my bones, that even with anguish ache,

Are troubled, yea my soul is troubled sore, And thou, O Lord, how long? turn, Lord, restore My soul; oh, save me for thy goodness sake: For in death no remembrance is of thee;

Who in the grave can celebrate thy praise?
Wearied I am with sighing out my days,
Nightly my couch I make a kind of sea;
My bed I water with my tears; mine eye

Through grief consumes, is waxen old and dark I' the midst of all mine enemies that mark.

Depart all ye that work iniquity,

Depart from me; for the voice of my weeping
The Lord hath heard, the Lord hath heard my prayer,

My supplication with acceptance fair The Lord will own, and have me in his keeping. Mine enemies shall all be blank and dashed

With much confusion; then grown red with shame, They shall return in haste the way they came, And in a moment shall be quite abashed.

PSALM VII.

AUGUST 14, 1653.

Upon the words of Chush the Benjamite against him.

Lord, my God, to thee I fly; Save me and secure me under Thy protection while I cry, Lest as a lion (and no wonder) He haste to tear my soul asunder, Tearing and no rescue nigh.

Lord, my God, if I have thought Or done this; if wickedness Be in my hands, if I have wrought Ill to him that meant me peace, Or to him have rendered less, And not freed my foe for nought; Let the enemy pursue my soul And overtake it; let him tread My life down to the earth, and roll In the dust my glory dead, In the dust; and, there outspread, Lodge it with dishonour foul.

Rise, Jehovah, in thine ire,
Rouse thyself amidst the rage
Of my foes that urge like fire;
And wake for me, their fury assuage;
Judgment here thou didst engage
And command, which I desire.

So the assemblies of each nation Will surround thee, seeking right, Thence to thy glorious habitation Return on high, and in their sight. Jehovah judgeth most upright All people from the world's foundation.

Judge me, Lord, be judge in this According to my righteousness, And the innocence which is Upon me: cause at length to cease Of evil men the wickedness And their power that do amiss.

But the just establish fast, Since thou art the just God that tries Hearts and reins. On God is cast My defence, and in him lies, In him who both just and wise Saves the upright of heart at last.

God is a just judge and severe, And God is every day offended; If the unjust will not forbear, His sword he whets, his bow hath bended Already, and for him intended The tools of death, that waits him near. (His arrows purposely made he For them that persecute.) Behold He travels big with vanity, Trouble he hath conceived of old As in a womb, and from that mould Hath at length brought forth a lie.

He digged a pit, and delved it deep, And fell into the pit he made; His mischief that due course doth keep. Turns on his head, and his ill trade Of violence will, undelayed, Fall on his crown with ruin steep.

Then will I Jehovah's praise According to his justice raise, And sing the Name and Deity Of Jehovah the most high.

PSALM VIII.

AUGUST 14, 1653.

O JEHOVAH our Lord, how wondrous great And glorious is thy name through all the earth; So as above the heavens thy praise to set Out of the tender mouths of latest birth.

Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou
Hast founded strength because of all thy foes,
To stint the enemy, and slack the avenger's brow,
That bends his rage thy providence to oppose.

When I behold thy heavens, thy fingers' art,
The moon and stars which thou so bright hast set
In the pure firmament, then saith my heart,
Oh, what is man that thou rememberest yet,

And think'st upon him; or of man begot,
That him thou visit'st, and of him art found?
Scarce to be less than gods, thou mad'st his lot,
With honour and with state thou hast him crowned.

O'er the works of thy hand thou mad'st him lord, Thou hast put all under his lordly feet, All flocks, and herds, by thy commanding word,

All beasts that in the field or forest meet,

Fowl of the heavens, and fish that through the wet Sea paths in shoals do slide, and know no dearth.

O Jehovah our Lord, how wondrous great

And glorious is thy name through all the earth!

APRIL, 1648. J. M.

[Nine of the Psalms done into metre, wherein all, but what is in a different character, are the very words of the text, translated from the original.]

PSALM LXXX.

1 Thou Shepherd that dost Israel keep, Give ear in time of need,

Who leadest like a flock of sheep Thy loved Joseph's seed,

That sitt'st between the cherubs bright. Between their wings out-spread,

Shine forth, and from thy cloud give light. And on our foes thy dread.

2 In Ephraim's view and Benjamin's, And in Manasse's sight,

Awake thy strength, come, and be seen To save us by thy might.

3 Turn us again, thy grace divine To us, O God, vouchsafe;

Cause thou thy face on us to shine, And then we shall be safe.

4 Lord God of Hosts, how long wilt thou, How long wilt thou declare

Thy smoking wrath, and angry brow Against thy people's prayer!

5 Thou feed'st them with the bread of tears, Their bread with tears they eat, And mad'st them largely drink the tears Wherewith their cheeks are wet.

A strife thou mak'st us and a prey
 To every neighbour foe,
 Amongst themselves they laugh, they play,

Amongst themselves they laugh, they play,
And flouts at us they throw.

7 Return us, and thy grace divine, O God of Hosts, vouchsafe,

Cause thou thy face on us to shine,

And then we shall be safe.

8 A vine from Egypt thou hast brought, Thy free love made it thine,

And drov'st out nations, proud and haut,

To plant this lovely vine.

9 Thou didst prepare for it a place, And root it deep and fast, That it began to grow apace,

And filled the land at last.

10 With her green shade that covered all,
The hills were overspread,
Her boughs as high as cedars tall

Advanced their lofty head.

11 Her branches on the western side

Down to the sea she sent,

And upward to that river wide

Her other branches went.

12 Why hast thou laid her hedges low, And broken down her fence, That all may pluck her, as they go, With rudest violence?

13 The tuskéd boar out of the wood
Upturns it by the roots,

Wild beasts there browse, and make their food

Her grapes and tender shoots.

14 Return now, God of Hosts, look down From Heaven, thy seat divine, Behold us, but without a frown,

And visit this thy vine.

15 Visit this vine, which thy right hand
Hath set, and planted long,
And the young branch, that for thyself

Thou hast made firm and strong.

16 But now it is consumed with fire, And cut with axes down: They perish at thy dreadful ire,

At thy rebuke and frown.

17 Upon the man of thy right hand Let thy good hand be laid, Upon the son of man, whom thou Strong for thyself hast made.

18 So shall we not go back from thee To ways of sin and shame; Quicken us thou, then gladly we Shall call upon thy name.

19 Return us, and thy grace divine, Lord God of Hosts, vouchsafe, Cause thou thy face on us to shine, And then we shall be safe.

PSALM LXXXI.

1 To God our strength sing loud, and dear, Sing loud to God our King, To Jacob's God, that all may hear, Loud acclamations ring.

2 Prepare a hymn, prepare a song, The timbrel hither bring, The cheerful psaltery bring along,

And harp with pleasant string. 3 Blow, as is wont, in the new moon With trumpets' lofty sound,

The appointed time, the day whereon Our solemn feast comes round.

4 This was a statute given of old For Israel to observe,

A law of Jacob's God, to hold, From whence they might not swerve.

5 This he a testimony ordained In Joseph, not to change,

When as he passed through Egypt land; The tongue I heard was strange.

6 From burden, and from slavish toil, I set his shoulder free: His hands from pots, and miry soil,

Delivered were by me.

7 When trouble did thee sore assail. On me then didst thou call, And I to free thee did not fail, And led thee out of thrall.

I answered thee in thunder deep With clouds encompassed round;

I tried thee at the water steep Of Meribah renowned.

8 Hear, O my people, hearken well, I testify to thee, Thou ancient stock of Israel,

If thou wilt list to me,

9 Throughout the land of thy abode No alien god shall be, Nor shalt thou to a foreign god

In honour bend thy knee.

10 I am the Lord thy God, which brought Thee out of Egypt land; Ask large enough, and I, besought,

Will grant thy full demand.

11 And yet my people would not hear, Nor hearken to my voice: And Israel, whom I loved so dear, Misliked me for his choice.

12 Then did I leave them to their will, And to their wandering mind; Their own conceits they followed still, Thir own devices blind.

13 Oh, that my people would be wise, To serve me all their days! And oh, that Israel would advise To walk my righteous ways!

14 Then would I soon bring down their foes, That now so proudly rise,

And turn my hand against all those That are their enemies.

15 Who hate the Lord should then be fining To bow to him and bend; But they, his people, should remain,

Their time should have no end.

16 And he would feed them from the shock With flour of finest wheat,

And satisfy them from the rock With honey for their meat.

PSALM LXXXII.

1 God in the great assembly stands Of kings and lordly states, Among the gods, on both his hands

He judges and debates.

2 How long will ye pervert the right With judgment false and wrong, Favouring the wicked by your might, Who thence grow bold and strong?

3 Regard the weak and fatherless, Despatch the poor man's cause, And raise the man in deep distress By just and equal laws,

4 Defend the poor and desolate, And rescue from the hands Of wicked men the low estate Of him that help demands.

5 They know not, nor will understand, In darkness they walk on; The earth's foundations all are moved,

And out of order gone.

6 I said that ye were gods, yea all The sons of God Most High;

7 But ye shall die like men, and fall As other princes die.

8 Rise, God, judge thou the earth in might, This wicked earth redress, For thou art he who shalt by right The nations all possess.

PSALM LXXXIII.

1 BE not thou silent now at length, O God, hold not thy peace; Sit thou not still, O God of strength, We cry, and do not cease.

2 For lo, thy furious foes now swell, And storm outrageously;

And they that hate thee, proud and fell, Exalt their heads full high.

3 Against thy people they contrive
Their plots and counsels deep,
Them to ensnare they chiefly strive,
Whom thou dost hide and keep.

4 Come, let us cut them off, say they,
Till they no nation be;
That Israel's name for ever may

Be lost in memory.

5 For they consult with all their might, And all as one in mind Themselves against thee they unite,

And in firm union bind.

6 The tents of Edom, and the brood Of scornful Ishmael, Moab, with them of Hagar's blood,

loab, with them of Hagar's blood, That in the desert dwell,

7 Gebal and Ammon there conspire, And hateful Amalec,

The Philistines, and they of Tyre,
Whose bounds the sea doth check.

3 With them great Ashur also bands And doth confirm the knot: All these have lent their arméd hands

To aid the sons of Lot.
9 Do to them as to Midian bold,

That wasted all the coast,
To Sisera, and as is told
Thou didst to Jabin's host,

When at the brook of Kishon old They were repulsed and slain, 10 At Endor quite cut off, and rolled As dung upon the plain.

11 As Zeb and Oreb evil sped, So let their princes speed, As Zeba and Zalmunna bled,

So let their princes bleed.

12 For they amidst their pride have said,
By right now shall we seize
God's houses, and will now invade

Their stately palaces.

13 My God, oh make them as a wheel,

No quiet let them find;

Giddy and restless let them reel Like stubble from the wind.

14 As when an aged wood takes fire
Which on a sudden strays,
The greedy flame runs higher and higher

Till all the mountains blaze,

15 So with thy whirlwind them pursue, And with thy tempest chase;

16 And till they yield thee honour due, Lord, fill with shame their face.

17 Ashamed, and troubled, let them be,
Troubled and shamed for ever,
Ever confounded, and so die
With shame, and 'scape it never.

18 Then shall they know that thou, whose name Jehovah is alone,

Art the most high, and thou the same O'er all the earth art one.

PSALM LXXXIV.

1 How lovely are thy dwellings fair O Lord of hosts, how dear The pleasant tabernacles are, Where thou dost dwell so near! 2 My soul doth long and almost die Thy courts, O Lord, to see, My heart and flesh aloud do cry, O living God, for thee.

3 There even the sparrow freed from wrong Hath found a house of rest, The swallow there, to lay her young

Hath built her brooding nest;

Even by thy altars, Lord of Hosts, They find their safe abode;

And home they fly from round the coasts, Toward thee, my King, my God.

4 Happy, who in thy house reside, Where thee they ever praise,

5 Happy, whose strength in thee doth bide, And in their hearts thy ways.

6 They pass through Baca's thirsty vale, That dry and barren ground, As through a fruitful watery dale

Where springs and showers abound.

7 They journey on from strength to strength With joy and gladsome cheer, Till all before our God at length In Sion do appear.

8 Lord God of Hosts, hear now my prayer, O Jacob's God give ear;

Thou God, our shield, look on the face Of thy anointed dear.

10 For one day in thy courts to be Is better, and more blest, Than in the joys of vanity A thousand days at best. I in the temple of my God Had rather keep a door,

Than dwell in tents, and rich abode, With sin for evermore.

11 For God the Lord, both sun and shield, Gives grace and glory bright; No good from them shall be withheld Whose ways are just and right.

12 Lord God of Hosts that reign'st on high,
That man is truly blest,
Who only on thee doth rely,
And in thee only rest.

PSALM LXXXV.

1 Try land to favor graciously
Thou hast not, Lord, been slack;
Thou hast from hard captivity
Returned Jacob back.

2 The iniquity thou didst forgive

That wrought thy people woe;

And all their sin, that did thee grieve,

Hast hid where none shall know.

3 Thine anger all thou hadst removed,
And calmly didst return
From thy fierce wrath which we had proved

Far worse than fire to burn.
4 God of our saving health and peace,
Turn us, and us restore;

Thine indignation cause to cease Toward us, and chide no more.

5 Wilt thou be angry without end, For ever angry thus? Wilt thou thy frowning ire extend

From age to age on us?
6 Wilt thou not turn, and hear our voice,

And us again revive;
That so thy people may rejoice.
By thee preserved alive.

7 Cause us to see thy goodness, Lord,
To us thy mercy shew;

Thy saving health to us afford, And life in us renew.

8 And now what God the Lord will speak,
I will go straight and hear;
For to his people he speaks peace,
And to his saints full dear,

To his dear saints he will speak peace, But let them never more Return to folly, but surcease To trespass as before.

9 Surely to such as do him fear

Salvation is at hand;

And glory shall ere long appear To dwell within our land.

10 Mercy and Truth that long were missed Now joyfully are met; Sweet Peace and Righteousness have kissed,

And hand in hand are set.

11 Truth from the earth, like to a flower, Shall bud and blossom then; And Justice from her heavenly bower Look down on mortal men.

12 The Lord will also then bestow
Whatever thing is good;
Our land shall forth in plenty throw
Her fruits to be our food.

13 Before him Righteousness shall go,

His royal harbinger:

Then will he come, and not be slow, His footsteps cannot err.

PSALM LXXXVI.

1 Thy gracious ear, O Lord, incline, O hear me, I thee pray, For I am poor, and almost pine With need, and sad decay.

2 Preserve my soul, for I have trod Thy ways, and love the just; Save thou thy servant, O my God, Who still in thee doth trust.

3 Pity me, Lord, for daily thee I call; 4. Oh, make rejoice
Thy servant's soul; for, Lord, to thee I lift my soul and voice.

5 For thou art good, thou, Lord, art prone To pardon, thou to all

Art full of mercy, thou alone To them that on thee call.

6 Unto my supplication, Lord,
Give ear, and to the cry
Of my incessant prayers afford

Thy hearing graciously.

7 I in the day of my distress
Will call on thee for aid;
For thou wilt grant me free access,

And answer what I prayed.

8 Like thee among the gods is none, O Lord, nor any works Of all that other gods have done

Like to thy glorious works.

9 The nations all whom thou hast made Shall come, and all shall frame To bow them low before thee, Lord, And glorify thy name.

10 For great thou art, and wonders great By thy strong hand are done,

Thou in thy everlasting seat Remainest God alone.

11 Teach me, O Lord, thy way most right,

I in thy truth will bide,

To fear thy name my heart unite, So shall it never slide.

12 Thee will I praise, O Lord my God, Thee honour and adore

With my whole heart, and blaze abroad

Thy name for evermore.

13 For great thy mercy is toward me, And thou hast freed my soul, Even from the lowest hell set free,

From deepest darkness foul.

14 O God! the proud against me rise,

And violent men are met

To seek my life, and in their eyes

No fear of thee have set.

15 But thou, Lord, art the God most mild.
Readiest thy grace to show,
Slow to be angry, and art styled
Most merciful, most true.

16 Oh, turn to me thy face at length, And me have mercy on; Unto thy servant give thy strength, And save thy handmaid's son.

17 Some sign of good to me afford,
And let my foes then see,
And be ashamed; because thou, Lord,
Dost help and comfort me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

I Among the holy mountains high
Is his foundation fast,
There seated is his sanctuary,
His temple there is placed.

2 Sion's fair gates the Lord loves more Than all the dwellings fair Of Jacob's land, though there be store, And all within his care.

3 City of God, most glorious things Of thee abroad are spoke;

4 I mention Egypt, where proud kings
Did our forefathers yoke;
I mention Babel to my friends,
Philistia full of scorn,
And Tyre with Ethiop's utmost ends,

And Tyre with Ethiop's utmost ends,

Lo this man there was born:

5 But twice that praise shall in our ear Be said of Sion last; This and this man was born in her,

6 The Lord shall write it in a scroll,
That ne'er shall be out-worn,
When he'the nations doth enrol,
That this man there was born.

High God shall fix her fast.

7 Both they who sing, and they who dance,
 With sacred songs are there;
 In the fresh brooks, and soft streams glance,
 And all my fountains clear.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

1 Lord God, that dost me save and keep,
All day to thee I cry;
And all night long before thee weep,

Before thee prostrate lie.

2 Into thy presence let my prayer With sighs devout ascend,

And to my cries that ceaseless are, Thine ear with favour bend.

3 For cloyed with woes and trouble store
Surcharged my soul doth lie;
My life at death's uncheerful door

Unto the grave draws nigh.

4 Reckoned I am with them that pass
Down to the dismal pit;
I am a man, but weak, alas!
And for that name unfit.

5 From life discharged and parted quite Among the dead to sleep;

And like the slain in bloody fight

That in the grave lie deep.

Whom thou rememberest no more,

Dost never more regard;
Them from thy hand delivered o'er,
Death's hideous house hath barred.

6 Thou in the lowest pit profound
Hast set me all forlorn,

Where thickest darkness hovers round,

In horrid deeps to mourn.
7 Thy wrath, from which no shelter saves,
Full sore doth press on me;

Thou break'st upon me all thy waves, And all thy waves break me. 8 Thou dost my friends from me estrange, And mak'st me odious. Me to them odious, for they change,

And I here pent up thus.

9 Through sorrow, and affliction great, Mine eye grows dim and dead; Lord, all the day I thee entreat, My hands to thee I spread.

10 Wilt thou do wonders on the dead?

Shall the deceased arise,

And praise thee from their loathsome bed With pale and hollow eyes?

Shall they thy loving kindness tell On whom the grave hath hold, Or they who in perdition dwell,

Thy faithfulness unfold? 12 In darkness can thy mighty hand Or wondrous acts be known?

Thy justice in the gloomy land Of dark oblivion?

13 But I to thee, O Lord, do cry. Ere yet my life be spent;

. And up to thee my prayer doth hie, Each morn, and thee prevent.

14 Why wilt thou, Lord, my soul forsake, And hide thy face from me,

15 That am already bruised, and shake With terror sent from thee? Bruised and afflicted, and so low As ready to expire;

While I thy terrors undergo, Astonished with thine ire.

16 Thy fierce wrath over me doth flow, Thy threatenings cut me through:

17 All day they round about me go, Like waves they me pursue.

18 Lover and friend thou hast removed, And severed from me far:

They fly me now whom I have loved.

And as in darkness are.

A PARAPHRASE ON PSALM CXIV.

[This and the following Psalm were done by the Author at fifteen years old.]

WHEN the blest seed of Terah's faithful son, After long toil, their liberty had won, And past from Pharian fields to Canaan land, Led by the strength of the Almighty's hand, Jehovah's wonders were in Israel shown, His praise and glory were in Israel known. That saw the troubled sea, and shivering fled, And sought to hide his froth-becurled head Low in the earth: Jordan's clear streams recoil, As a faint host that hath received the foil. The high, huge-bellied mountains skipped like rams Amongst their ewes, the little hills like lambs. Why fled the ocean? And why skipped the mountains? Why turned Jordan towards his crystal fountains? Shake, Earth! and at the presence be aghast Of him that ever was, and ave shall last; That glassy floods from rugged rocks can erush, And make soft rills from fiery flint-stones gush.

PSALM CXXXVI.

LET us, with a gladsome mind, Praise the Lord, for he is kind: For his mercies aye endure, Ever faithful, ever sure.

Let us blaze his name abroad, For of gods he is the God: For his, &c.

Oh, let us his praises tell, Who doth the wrathful tyrants quell: For his, &c.

Who with his miracles doth make Amazéd Heaven and earth to shake: For his, &c. Who by his wisdom did create The painted heavens so full of state: For his, &c.

Who did the solid earth ordain To rise above the watery plain: For his, &c.

Who, by his all commanding might, Did fill the new-made world with light For his, &c.

And caused the golden-tresséd sun All the day long his course to run: For his, &c.

The hornéd moon to shine by night, Amongst her spangled sisters bright: For his, &c.

He, with his thunder-clasping hand, Smote the first-born of Egypt land: For his, &c.

And in despite of Pharao fell, He brought from thence his Israel: For his, &c.

The ruddy waves he cleft in twain Of the Erythræan main: For his, &c.

The floods stood still like walls of glass While the Hebrew bands did pass:
For his, &c.

But full soon they did devour The tawny king with all his power: For his, &c.

His chosen people he did bless In the wasteful wilderness: For his, &c. In bloody battle he brought down Kings of prowess and renown:
For his, &c.

He foiled bold Seon and his host, That ruled the Amorrean coast: For his, &c.

And large-limbed Og he did subdue, With all his over-hardy crew: For his, &c.

And to his servant Israel, He gave their land therein to dwell: For his, &c.

He hath, with a piteous eye, Beheld us in our misery: For his, &c.

And freed us from the slavery Of the invading encmy: For his, &c.

All living creatures he doth feed, And with full hand supplies their need For his, &c.

Let us therefore warble forth His mighty majesty and worth: For his, &c.

That his mansion hath on high Above the reach of mortal eye: For his mercies aye endure, Ever faithful, ever sure.

Sol virtù rintracciando il tuo pensicro
Vide in ogni confino
Chi di nobil valor calca il senticro;
L' ottimo dal miglior dopo sceglica
Per fabbricar d'ogni virtu l' idea.

Quanti nacquero in Flora
O in lei del parlar Tosco appreser l' arte,
La cui memoria onora
Il mondo fatta eterna in dotte carte,
Volesti ricercar per tuo tesoro,
E parlasti con lor nell' opre loro.

Nell' altera Babelle Per te il parlar confuse Giove in vano, Che per varie favelle Di se stessa trofeo cadde su 'l piano: Ch' ode oltr' all' Anglia il suo più degno idioma Spagna, Francia, Toscana, e Grecia, e Roma.

I più profondi arcani Ch' occulta la natura e in cielo e in terra Ch' à ingegni sovrumani Troppo avara tal' hor gli chiude, e serra, Chiaramente conosci, e giungi al fine Della moral virtude al gran confine, Non batta il Tempo l' ale, Fermisi immoto, e in un fermin si gl' anni, Che di virtù immortale Scorron di troppo ingiuriosi a i danni; Che s' opre degne di poema o storia Furon gia, l' hai presenti alla memoria.

Dammi tua dolce cetra Se vuoi ch' io dica del tuo dolce canto, Ch' inalzandoti all' Etra Di farti huomo celeste ottiene il vanto, Il Tamigi il dirà che gl' e concesso Per te, suo cigno, parreggiar Permesso.

I o che in riva del Arno Tento spiegar tuo merto alto e preclaro, So che fatico indarno, E ad ammirar, non a lodarlo imparo; Freno dunque la lingua, e ascolto il core Che ti prende a lodar con lo stupore.

JOANNI MILTONI

LONDINENSI:

Juveni patria, virtutibus, eximio,

Viro qui multa peregrinatione, studio cuncta orbis terrarum loca perspexit, ut novus Ulysses omnia ubique ab omnibus apprehenderet:

Polyglotto, in cujus ore linguæ jam deperditæ sie reviviscunt, ut idiomata omnia sint in ejus laudibus infacunda; et jure ea percallet, ut admirationes et plausus populorum ab propriâ sapientiâ excitatos intelligat:

Illi, cujus animi dotes corporisque sensus ad admira tionem commovent, et per ipsam motum cuique auferunt, cujus opera ad plausus hortantur, sed venustate vocem landatoribus adimunt. Cui in memoriâ totus orbis; in intellectu sapientia; in voluntate ardor gloriæ; in ore eloquentia; harmonicos cœlestium sphærarum sonitus astronomiâ duce audienti; characteres mirabilium naturæ per quos Dei magnitudo describitur magistrâ philosophiâ legenti; antiquitatum latebras, vetustatis excidia, eruditionis ambages, comite assiduâ auctorum lectione,

"Exquirenti, restauranti, percurrenti.
At cur nitor in arduum?"

Illi in cujus virtutibus evulgandis ora Famæ non sufficiant, nee hominum stupor in laudandis satis est, reverentiæ et amoris ergo hoc ejus meritis debitum admirationis tributum offert Carolus Datus, Patricius Florentinus,

Tanto homini servus, tantæ virtutis amator

Seu procus, aut positâ casside miles adest,

Nonne satis quod sylva tuas persentiat iras, Et quod in herbosos jus tibi detur agros,

Quodque afflata tuo marcescant lilia tabo, Et crocus, et pulchræ Cypridi sacra rosa,

Nec sinis ut semper fluvio contermina quereus

Ipse racemiferis dum densas vitibus umbras, Et pellucentes miror ubique locos,

Ecce mihi subito Præsul Wintonius astat. Sidereum nitido fulsit in ore jubar;

Vestis ad auratos defluxit candida talos, Infula divinum cinxerat alba caput. Dumque senex tali incedit venerandus amictu,

Intremuit læto florea terra sono.

Agmina gemmatis plaudunt cœlestia pennis, Pura triumphali personat æthra tubâ.

Dixit, ex aligeræ tetigerunt nablia turmæ, At mihi cum tenebris aurea pulsa quies.

Flebam turbatos Cephaleiâ pellice somnos, Talia contingant somnia sæpe mihi.

ELEGIA QUARTA,

ANNO ÆTATIS 18.

Ad THOMAM JUNIUM præceptorem suum, apud mercatores Anglicos Hamburgæ agentes, Pastoris munere fungentem.

Curre per immensum subitò mea littera pontum, I, pete Teutonicos læve per æquor agros;

Segnes rumpe moras, et nil, precor, obstet eunti,

Et festinantis nil remoretur iter.

Ipse ego Sicanio frænantem carcere ventos Æolon, et virides sollicitabo Deos,

Cæruleamque suis comitatam Dorida Nymphis, Ut tibi dent placidam per sua regna viam.

At tu, si poteris, celeres tibi sume jugales, Vecta quibus Colchis fugit ab ore viri;

Aut queis Triptolemus Scythicas devenit in oras Gratus Eleusinâ missus ab urbe puer.

Atque ubi Germanas flavere videbis arenas,

Ditis ad Hamburgæ mænia flecte gradum, Dicitur occiso quæ ducere nomen ab Hamâ, Cimbrica quem fertur clava dedisse neci.

Vivit ibi antiquæ clarus pietatis honore Præsul, Christicolas pascere doctus oves: Ille quidem est animæ plusquam pars altera nostræ; Dimidio vitæ vivere cogor ego.

Hei mihi! quot pelagi, quot montes interjecti,

Me faciunt alia parte carere mei!

Charior ille mihi quam tu doctissime Graium Cliniadi, pronepos qui Telamonis erat;

Quamque Stagirites generoso magnus alumno, Quem peperit Lybico Chaonis alma Jovi.

Qualis Amyntorides, qualis Philyrëius heros Myrmidonum regi, talis et ille mihi.

Primus ego Aonios illo præeunte recessus Lustrabam, et bifidi sacra vireta jugi,

Pieriosque hausi latices, Clioque favente, Castalio sparsi læta ter ora mero.

Flammeus at signum ter viderat arietis Æthon, Induxitque auro lanea terga novo,

Bisque novo terram sparsisti, Chlori, senilom Gramine, bisque tuas abstulit Auster opes:

Necdum ejus licuit mihi lumina pascere vultu, Aut linguæ dulces aure bibisse sonos.

Vade igitur, cursuque Eurum præverte sonorum, Quàm sit opus monitis res docet, ipsa vides.

Invenies dulci cum conjuge fortè sedentem, Mulcentem gremio pignora chara suo,

Forsitan aut veterum prælarga volumina patrum

Versantem, aut veri biblia sacra Dei,

Cœlestive animas saturantem rore tenellas, Grande salutiferæ religionis opus.

Utque solet, multam sit dicere cura salutem, Dicere quam decuit, si modo adesset, herum.

Hæc quoque, paulum oculos in humum defixa modestos,

Verba verecundo sis memor ore loqui: Hæc tibi, si teneris vacat inter prælia Musis, Mittit ab Angliaco littore fida manus.

Accipe sinceram, quamvis sit sera, salutem;

Fiat et hoc ipso gratior illa tibi.

Sera quidem, sed vera fuit, quam casta recepit

Icaris à lento Penelopeia viro.

Ast ego quid volui manifestum tollere crimen, Ipse quod ex omni parte levare nequit? Arguitur tardus meritò, noxamque fatetur, Et pudet officium deseruisse suum.

Tu modò da veniam fasso, veniamque roganti, Crimina diminui, que patuere, solent.

Non ferus in pavidos rictus diducit hiantes, Vulnifico pronos nec rapit ungue leo.

Sæpe sarissiferi crudelia pectora Thracis Supplicis ad mæstas delicuere preces.

Extensæque manus avertunt fulminis ictus, Placat et iratos hostia parva Deos.

Jamque diu scripsisse tibi fuit impetus illi, Neve moras ultra ducere passus Amor.

Nam vaga Fama refert, heu nuntia vera malorum!
In tibi finitimis bella tumere locis,

Teque tuamque urbem truculento milite cingi,

Et jam Saxonicos arma parasse duces. Te circum latè campos populatur Enyo,

Et sata carne virûm jam cruor arva rigat; Germanisque suum concessit Thracia Martem,

Illuc Odrysios Mars pater egit equos; Perpetuòque comans jam deflorescit oliva,

Fugit et ærisonam Divi perosa tubam, Fugit Io terris, et jam non ultima virgo

Creditur ad superas justa volasse domos. Te tamen intereà belli circumsonat horror,

Vivis et ignoto solus inopsque solo; Et, tibi quam patrii non exhibuere penates,

Sede peregrinâ quæris egenus opem. Patria dura parens, et saxis sævior albis

Spumea quæ pulsat littoris unda tui, Siccine te decet innocuos exponere fætus, Siccine in externam ferrea cogis humum,

Et sinis ut terris quærant alimenta remotis Quos tibi prospiciens miserat ipse Deus,

Et qui læta ferunt de cœlo nuntia, quique, Quæ via post cineres ducat ad astra, docent? Digna quidem Stygiis quæ vivas clausa tenebris,

Æternâque animæ digna perire fame! Haud aliter vates terræ Thesbitidis olim Pressit inassueto devia tesqua pede, Desertasque Arabum salebras, dum regis Achabi Effugit atque tuas, Sidoni dira, manus.

Talis et horrisono laceratus membra flagello, Paulus ab Æmathiâ pellitur urbe Cilix.

Piscosæque ipsum Gergessæ civis Iësum Finibus ingratus jussit abire suis.

At tu sume animos, nec spes cadat anxia curis, Nec tua concutiat decolor ossa metus.

Sis etenim quamvis fulgentibus obsitus armis, Intententque tibi millia tela necem,

At nullis vel inerme latus violabitur armis, Deque tuo cuspis nulla cruore bibet.

Namque eris ipse Dei radiante sub ægide tutus, Ille tibi custos, et pugil ille tibi;

Ille Sionææ qui tot sub mænibus arcis Assyrios fudit nocte silente viros;

Inque fugam vertit quos in Samaritidas oras Misit ab antiquis prisca Damascus agris,

Misit ab antiquis prisca Damascus agris, Terruit et densas pavido cum rege cohortes, Aere dum vacuo buccina clara sonat,

Cornea pulvereum dum verberat ungula campum, Currus arenosam dum quatit actus humum,

Auditurque hinnitus equorum ad bella ruentúm, Et strepitus ferri, murmuraque aita virûm.

Et tu (quod superest miseris) sperare memento, Et tua magnanimo pectore vince mala;

Nec dubites quandoque frui melioribus annis, Atque iterum patrios posse videre lares.

ELEGIA QUINTA,

Anno Ætatis 20.

In adventum veris.

In se perpetuo Tempus revolubile gyro
Jam revocat Zephyros vere tepente novos;
Induiturque brevem Tellus reparata juventam,
Jamque soluta gelu dulce virescit humus.
Fallor? an et nobis redeunt in carmina vires,
Ingeniumque mihi munere veris adest?

Munere veris adest, iterumque vigescit ab illo (Quis putct?), atque aliquod jam sibi poscit opus Castalis ante oculos, bifidumque cacumen oberrat,

Et mihi Pyrenen somnia nocte ferunt;

Concitaque arcano fervent mihi pectora motu,

Et furor, et sonitus me sacer intùs agit. Delius ipse venit, video Penëide lauro

Implicitos crines, Delius ipse venit.

Jam mihi mens liquidi raptatur in ardua cœli,

Perque vagas nubes corpore liber eo;

Perque umbras, perque antra feror penetralia vatum,

Et mihi fana patent interiora Deûm;

Intuiturque animus toto quid agatur Olympo, Nec fugiunt oculos Tartara cæca meos.

Quid tam grande sonat distento spiritus ore? Quid parit hæc rabies, quid sacer iste furor?

Ver mihi, quod dedit ingenium, cantabitur illo;

Profuerint isto reddita dona modo. Jam Philomela tuos foliis adoperta novellis

Instituis modulos, dum silet omne nemus: Urbe ego, tu sylvâ, simul incipiamus utrique,

Et simul adventum veris uterque canat. Veris Io! rediere vices, celebremus honores

Veris, et hoc subeat Musa perennis opus. Jam sol Æthiopas fugiens Tithoniaque arva, Flectit ad Arctoas aurea lora plagas.

Est breve noctis iter, brevis est mora noctis opacæ,

Horrida cum tenebris exulat illa suis. Jamque Lycaonius plaustrum cœleste Bootes

Non longâ sequitur fessus ut ante viâ;

Nunc etiam solitas circum Jovis atria toto Excubias agitant sidera rara polo.

Nam dolus, et cædes, et vis cum nocte recessit, Neve Giganteum Dii timuere scelus.

Forte aliquis scopuli recubans in vertice pastor,

Roscida cum primo sole rubescit humus, Hac, ait, hac certè caruisti nocte puellà,

Phœbe tuâ, celeres quæ retineret equos. Læta suas repetit sylvas, pharetramque resumit

Cynthia, Luciteras ut videt alta rotas,

Et tenues ponens radios gaudere videtur Officium fieri tam breve fratris ope.

Desere, Phæbus ait, thalamos Aurora seniles,

Quid juvat effecto procubuisse toro?

Te manet Æolides viridi venator in herba, Surge, tuos ignes altus Hymettus habet.

Flava verecundo dea crimen in ore fatetur,

Et matutinos ocius urget equos.

Exuit invisam Tellus rediviva senectam, Et cupit amplexus, Phæbe, subire tuos;

Et cupit, et digna est. Quid enim formosius illâ,

Pandit ut omniferos luxuriosa sinus,

Atque Arabum spirat messes, et ab ore venusto, Mitia cum Paphiis fundit amoma rosis!

Ecce coronatur sacro frons ardua luco,

Cingit ut Idæam pinea turris Opim; Et vario madidos intexit flore capillos,

Floribus et visa est posse placere suis.

Floribus effusos ut erat redimita capillos Tenario placuit diva Sicana Deo.

Aspice. Phæbe, tibi faciles hortantur amores, Mellitasque movent flamina verna preces.

Mellitasque movent flamma verna preces. Cinnameâ Zephyrus leve plaudit odorifer alâ,

Blanditiasque tibi ferre videntur aves, Nec sine dote tuos temeraria quærit amores

Terra, nec optatos poscit egena toros,

Alma salutiferum medicos tibi gramen in usus Præbet, et hine titulos adjuvat ipsa tuos.

Quòd si te pretium, si te fulgentia tangunt

Munera (muneribus sæpe coëmptus Amor), Illa tibi ostentat quascunque sub æquore vasto,

Et superinjectis montibus abdit opes. Ah quoties, cum tu clivoso fessus Olympo

An quoties, cum tu chvoso fessus Olympo In vespertinas præcipitaris aquas,

Cur te, inquit, cursu languentem, Phæbe, diurno Hesperiis recipit Cærula mater aquis?

Quid tibi cum Tethy? Quid cum Tartesside lympha,

Dia quid immundo perluis ora salo? Frigora, Phœbe, meâ melius captabis in umbrâ,

Huc ades, ardentes imbue rore comas.

Mollior egelidâ veniet tibi somnus in herbâ,
Huc ades, et gremio lumina pone meo.
Quàque jaces, circum mulcebit lene susurrans
Aura, per humentes corpora fusa rosas.
Nec me (crede mihi) terrent Semeleïa fata,
Nec Phaetonteo fumidus axis equo;
Cum tu, Phœbe, tuo sapientius uteris igni,

Huc ades, et gremio lumina pone meo. Sic Tellus lasciva suos suspirat amores;

Matris in exemplum cætera turba ruunt. Nunc etenim toto currit vagus orbe Cupido, Languentesque fovet solis ab igne faces.

Insonuere novis lethalia cornua nervis,
Triste micant ferro tela corusca novo.

Jamque vel invictam tentat superasse Dianam, Quæque sedet sacro Vesta pudica foco.

Ipsa senescentem reparat Venus annua formam, Atque iterum tepido creditur orta mari.

Marmoreas juvenes clamant Hymenæe per urbes, Littus Io Hymen, et cava saxa sonant.

Cultior ille venit, tunicâque decentior aptâ,
Puniceum redolet vestis odora crocum.

Egrediturque frequens ad amœni gaudia veris
Virgineos auro cincta puella sinus. [unun

Votum est cuique suum, votum est tamen omnibus Ut sibi quem cupiat, det Cytherea virum.

Nunc quoque septenâ modulatur arundine pastor, Et sua quæ jungat carmina Phyllis habet.

Navita nocturno placat sua sidera cantu, Delphinasque leves ad vada summa vocat.

Jupiter ipse alto cum conjuge ludit Olympo, Convocat et famulos ad sua festa Deos.

Nunc etiam Satyri, cum sera crepuscula surgunt, Pervolitant celeri florea rura choro, Sylvanusque suâ cyparissi fronde revinctus, Semicaperque Deus, semideusque caper.

Quæque sub arboribus Dryades latuere vetustis Per juga, per solos expatiantur agros.

Per sata luxuriat fruticetaque Mænalius Pan, Vix Cybele mater, vix sibi tuta Ceres; Atom diquementation condition Oreada Pinnas.

Consulit in trepidos dum sibi nympha pedes,
Jamque latet, latitansque cupit male tecta videri,
Et fugit, et fugiens pervelit ipsa capi.
Dii quoque non dubitant eœlo preponere sylvas,
Et sua quisque sibi numina lucus habet.
Et sua quisque diu sibi numina lucus habeto,
Nec vos arborea, dii, precor, ite domo.
Te referant miseris te, Jupiter, aurea terris
Sæcla, quid ad nimbos aspera tela redis?
Tu saltem lentè rapidos age Phæbe jugales
Quà potes, et sensim tempora veris eant;
Grummonte per datas strede for a hispida noctes,
Ingruat et nostro serior umbra polo.

ELEGIA SEXTA.

Ad CAROLUM DEODATUM ruri commorantem,

Qui cum Idibus Decemb, scripsisset, et sua carmina excusari postuasset si solito minus essent bona, quod inter lautitias, quibus evat ab amicis exceptus, hand satis felicem operam Musis dare se posse aftirmabat, hoc habuit responsim.

Mitto tibi sanam non pleno ventre salutem,
Qua tu distento fortè carcre potes.

At tua quid nostram prolectat musa camœnam,
Nec sinit optatas posse sequi tenebras?

Carmine scire vélis quam te redamemque colamque,
Crede mihi vix hoc carmine scire queas.

Nam neque noster amor modulis includitur arctis,
Nec venit ad claudos integer ipse pedes.

Onim Le estaque collingam que colucre Deum,

Deliciasque refers, hyberni gaudia ruris, Haustaque per lepidos Gallica musta focos! Quid anumque rain a companya desir?

Carmen amat Bacchum, carmina Bacchus amat.

Atque hederam lauro præposuisse suæ. Sæpius Aoniis clamavit collibus Euœ Mista Thyoneo turba novena choro. Naso Corallæis mala carmina misit ab agris: Non illic epulæ, non sata vitis erant.

Quid nisi vina, rosasque racemiferumque Lyæum, Cantavit brevibus Teïa Musa modis?

Pindaricosque inflat numeros Teumesius Euan, Et redolet sumptum pagina quæque merum;

Dum gravis everso currus crepat axe supinus,

Et volat Eleo pulvere fuscus eques.

Quadrimoque madens Lyricen Romanus Iaccho Dulce canit Glyceran, flavicomamque Chloen. Jam quoque lauta tibi generoso mensa paratu

Mentis alit vires, ingeniumque fovet.

Massica fœcundam despumant pocula venam, Fundis et ex ipso condita metra cado.

Addimus his artes, fusumque per intima Phæbum Corda, favent uni Bacchus, Apollo, Ceres.

Scilicet haud mirum tam dulcia carmina per te Numine composito tres peperisse Deos.

Nunc quoquè Thressa tibi cælato barbitos auro Insonat argutâ molliter ieta manu;

Auditurque chelys suspensa tapetia circum,

Virgineos tremulâ quæ regat arte pedes. Illa tuas saltem teneant spectacula musas, Et revocent, quantum crapula pellit iners.

Crede mili dum paliti ebur, comitataque plectrum

Implet odoratos festa chorea tholos;

Percipies tacitum per pectora serpere Phæbum, Quale repentinus permeat ossa calor,

Perque puellares oculos digitumque sonantem Irruet in totos lapsa Thalia sinus.

Namque elegia levis multorum cura Deorum est, Et vocat ad numeros quemlibet illa suos;

Liber adest elegis, Eratoque, Ceresque, Venusque,

Et cum purpureâ matre tenellus Amor. Talibus inde licent convivia larga poetis,

Sepius et veteri commaduisse mero.

At qui bella refert, et adulto sub Jove cœlum, Heroasque pios, semideosque duces,

Et nunc sancta canit superum consulta deorum, Nunc latrata fero regna profunda cane, Ille quidem parcè, Samii pro more magistri, Vivat, et innocuos præbeat herba cibos; Stet prope faginco pellucida lympha catillo,

Sobriaque è puro pocula fonte bibat.

Additur huic scelerisque vacans, et casta juventus, Et rigidi mores, et sine labe manus.

Anno ÆTATIS 17.

Jam pius extremâ veniens Iäcobus ab arcto Teucrigenas populos, latéque patentia regna Albionum tenuit, jamque inviolabile fœdus Sceptra Caledoniis conjunxerat Anglica Scotis: Pacificusque novo, felix divesque, sedebat In solio, occultique doli securus et hostis: Cum ferus ignifluo regnans Acheronte tyrannus, Eumenidum pater, æthereo vagus exul Olympo, Forte per immensum terrarum erraverat orbem, Dinumerans sceleris socios, vernasque fideles, Participes regni post funera mæsta futuros; Hic tempestates medio ciet aëre diras, Illie unanimes odium struit inter amicos, Armat et invictas in mutua viscera gentes; Regnaque olivifera vertit florentia pace: Et quoscunque videt puræ virtutis amantes, Hos cupit adjicere imperio, fraudumque magister Tentat inaccessum sceleri corrumpere pectus, Insidiasque locat tacitas, cassesque latentes Tendit, ut incautos rapiat, seu Caspia tigris Insequitur trepidam deserta per avia prædam Nocte sub illuni, et somno nictantibus astris. At simul hanc opibusque et festâ pace beatam Aspicit, et pingues donis Cerealibus agros, Quodque magis doluit, venerantem numina veri Sancta Dei populum, tandem suspiria rupit Tartareos ignes et luridum olentia sulphur; Qualia Trinacria trux ab Jove clausus in Ætna Efflat tabifico monstrosus ob ore Typhœus. AD PATREM.

Nunc mea Pierios cupiam per pectora fontes Irriguas torquere vias, totumque per ora Volvere laxatum gemino de vertice rivum; Ut tenues oblita sonos audacibus alis Surgat in officium venerandi Musa parentis. Hoc utcunque tibi gratum, pater optime, carmen Exiguum meditatur opus, nec novimus ipsi Aptiùs à nobis que possint munera donis Respondere tuis, quamvis nec maxima possint Respondere tuis, nedum ut par gratia donis Esse queat, vacuis que redditur arida verbis. Sed tamen hæc nostros ostendit pagina census, Et quod habemus opum chartâ numeravimus istâ, Quæ mihi sunt nullæ, nisi quas dedit aurea Clio, Quas mihi semoto somni peperere sub antro, Et nemoris laureta sacri Parnassides umbræ.

Nec tu vatis opus divinum despice carmen, Quo nihil æthereos ortus, et semina cæli, Nil magis humanam commendat origine mentem, Sancta Promethéæ retinens vestigia flammæ. Carmen ament superi, tremebundaque Tartara carmen Ima ciere valet, divosque ligare profundos, Et triplici duros Manes adamante coercet. Carmine sepositi retegunt arcana futuri Phæbades, et tremulæ pallentes ora Sibyllæ; Carmina sacrificus sollennes pangit ad aras, Aurea seu sternit motantem cornua taurum; Seu cum fata sagax fumantibus abdita fibris

Consulit, et tepidis Parcam scrutatur in extis. Nos etiam patrium tunc cum repetemus Olympum, Æternæque moræ stabunt immobilis ævi, Ibimus auratis per cœli templa coronis, Dulcia suaviloquo sociantes carmina pleetro, Astra quibus, geminique poli convexa sonabunt. Spiritus et rapidos qui circinat igneus orbes, Nunc quoque sidereis intercinit ipse choreis Immortale melos, et inenarrabile carmen; Torrida dum rutilus compescit sibila serpens, Demissoque ferox gladio mansuescit Orion; Stellarum nec sentit onus Maurusius Atlas. Carmina regales epulas ornare solebant, Cum nondum luxus, vastæque immensa vorago Nota gulæ, et modico spumabat cæna Lyæo. Tum de more sedens festa ad convivia vates, Æsculeâ intonsos redimitus ab arbore crines. Heroumque actus, imitandaque gesta canebat, Et chaos, et positi latè fundamina mundi, Reptantesque deos, et alentes numina glandes, Et nondum Ætnæo guæsitum fulmen ab antro. Denique quid vocis modulamen inane juvabit, Verborum sensusque vacans, numerique loquacis? Silvestres decet iste choros, non Orphea cantus, Qui tenuit fluvios et quercubus addidit aures Carmine, non citharâ, simulachraque functa canendo Compulit in lacrymas; habet has à carmine laudes.

Nec tu perge, precor, sacras contemnere Musas, Nec vanas inopesque puta, quarum ipse peritus Munere, mille sonos numeros componis ad aptos, Millibus et vocem modulis variare canoram Doctus, Arionii meritò sis nominis hæres. Nunc tibi quid mirum, si me genuisse poëtam Contigerit, charo si tam propè sanguine juncti Cognatas artes, studiumque affine sequamur? Ipse volens Phæbus se dispertire duobus, Altera dona mihi, dedit altera dona parenti, Dividuumque Deum genitorque puerque tenemus.

Tu tamen ut simules teneras odisse Camœnas, Non odisse reor, neque enim, pater, ire jubebas Quà via lata patet, quà pronior area lucri, Certaque condendi fulget spes aurea nummi: Nec rapis ad leges, malè custoditaque gentis Jura, nec insulsis damnas clamoribus aures: Sed magis excultam cupiens ditescere mentem, Me procul urbano strepitu, secessibus altis Abductum, Aoniæ jucunda per otia ripæ, Phæbæo lateri comitem sinis ire beatum. Officium chari taceo commune parentis, Me poscunt majora: tuo, pater optime, sumptu Cùm mihi Romuleæ patuit facundia linguæ, Et Latii veneres, et quæ Jovis ora decebant Grandia magniloquis elata vocabula Graiis, Addere suasisti quos jactat Gallia flores, Et quam degeneri novus Italus ore loquelam Fundit, barbaricos testatus voce tumultus, Quæque Palæstinus loquitur mysteria vates. Denique quicquid habet cœlum, subjectaque cœlo Terra parens, terræque et cælo interfluus aer, Quicquid et unda tegit, pontique agitabile marmor, Per te nosse licet, per te, si nosse libebit. Dimotáque venit spectanda scientia nube, Nudaque conspicuos inclinat ad oscula vultus, Ni fugisse velim, ni sit libâsse molestum.

I nunc, confer opes, quisquis malesanus avitas Austriaci gazas, Perüanaque regna, præoptas. Quæ potuit majora pater tribuisse, vel ipse Jupiter, excepto, donâsset ut omnia, cælo? Non potiora dedit, quamvis et tuta fuissent, Publica qui juveni commisit lumina nato Atque Hyperionios currus, et fræna diei, Et circum undantem radiatâ luce tiaram. Ergo ego jam doctæ pars quamlibet ima catervæ Victrices hederas inter, laurosque sedebo, Jamque nec obscurus populo miscebor inerti, Vitabuntque oculos vestigia nostra profanos. Este procul vigiles curæ, procul este querelæ, Invidiæque acies transverso tortilis hirquo, Sæva nec anguiferos extende calumnia rictus; In me triste nihil fædissima turba potestis.

Nec vestri sum juris ego; securaque tutus Pectora, vipereo gradiar sublimis ab ictu.

At tibi, chare pater, postquam non æqua merenti Posse referre datur, nec dona rependere factis, Sit memorâsse satis, repetitaque munera grato Percensere animo, fidæque reponere menti.

Et vos, O nostri, juvenilia carmina, lusus, Si modo perpetuos sperare audebitis annos, Et domini superesse rogo, lucemque tueri, Nec spisso rapient oblivia nigra sub Orco, Forsitan has laudes, decantatumque parentis Nomen, ad exemplum, sero servabitis ævo.

AD SALSILLUM, POETAM ROMANUM, ÆGRO-TANTEM.

SCAZONTES.

O Musa gressum que volens trahis claudum. Vulcanioque tarda gaudes incessu, Nec sentis illud in loco minus gratum, Quàm cùm decentes flava Deïope suras Alternat aureum ante Junonis lectum. Adesdum et hæc s' is verba pauca Salsillo Refer, Camæna nostra cui tantum est cordi, Quamque ille magnis prætulit immeritò divis. Hæc ergo alumnus ille Londini Milto, Diebus hisce qui suum linguens nidum Polique tractum (pessimus ubi ventorum, Insanientis impotensque pulmonis, Pernix anhela sub Jove exercet flabra), Venit feraces Itali soli ad glebas, Visum superbâ cognitas urbes famâ Virosque doctæque indolem juventutis. Tibi optat idem hic fausta multa Salsille, Habitumque fesso corpori penitùs sanum; Cui nunc profunda bilis infestat renes, Præcordiisque fixa damnosum spirat. Nec id pepercit impia quòd tu Romano Tam cultus ore Lesbium condis melos.

O dulce divûm munus, O Salus, Hebes Germana! Tuque Phæbe morborum terror, Pythone cæso, sive tu magis Pæan Liberter audis, hic tuus sacerdos est. Querceta Fauni, vosque rore vinoso Colles benigni, mitis Evandri sedes, Siguid salubre vallibus frondet vestris, Levamen ægro ferte certatim vati. Sic ille charis redditus rursum Musis Vicina dulci prata mulcebit cantu. Ipse inter atros emirabitur lucos Numa, ubi beatum degit otium æternum, Suam reclinis semper Ægeriam spectans. Tumidusque et ipse Tibris, hinc delinitus, Spei favebit annuæ colonorum: Nec in sepulchris ibit obsessum reges Nimium sinistro laxus irruens loro: Sed fræna melius temperabit undarum, Adusque curvi salsa regna Portumni.

MANUS.

Joannes Baptista Mansus Marchio Villensis, vir ingenii laude, tum litterarum studio, nec non et bellica virtute, apud Italos clarus in printis est. Ad quem Torquati Tassi Dialogus extat de Amicitia scriptus: erat enim Tassi amicissimus: ab quo etiam inter Campania principes celebratur, in illo poemate cui titulus Gerusalemme Conquistata, lib. 20---

"Fra cavalier magnanimi, è cortesi Risplende il Manso"—

is authorem Neapoli commorantem summâ benevolentiâ prosecutus est, multaque ei detulit humanitatis efficia. Ad hunc itaque hospes ille antequam ab ea urbe discederet, ut ne ingratum se ostenderet, hoc carmes misit.

H.Ec quoque, Manse, tuæ meditantur carmina laudi Pierides, tibi, Manse, choro notissime Phæbi, Quandoquidem ille alium haud æquo est dignatus honore, Post Galli cineres, et Mecænatis Hetrusci. Tu quoque, si nostræ tantum valet aura Camœnæ, Victrices hederas inter, laurosque sedebis.

Te pridem magno felix concordia Tasso Junxit, et æternis inscripsit nomina chartis;

Mox tibi dulciloquum non inscia Musa Marinum Tradidit, ille tuum diei se gandet alumnum, Dum canit Assyrios divûm prolixus amores; Mollis et Ausonias stupefecit carmine nymphas. Ille itidem moriens tibi soli debita vates Ossa, tibi soli, supremaque vota reliquit: Nec manes pietas tua chara fefellit amici, Vidirius arridentem operoso ex ære poetam. Nee satis hoe visum est in utrumque, et nec pia cessant Officia ir tumulo, cupis integros rapere Orco, Quà potes, atque avidas Parcarum eludere leges: Amborum genus, et varia sub forte peractam Describis vitam, moresque, et dona Minervæ; Æmulus illius Mycalen qui natus ad altam Rettulit Æolii vitam facundus Homeri. Ergo ego te, Cliûs et magni nomine Phæbi, Manse pater, jubeo longum salvere per ævum Missus Hyperboreo juvenis peregrinus ab axe. Nec tu longinguam bonus aspernabare Musam, Quæ nuper gelidá vix enutrita sub Arcto Imprudens Italas ausa est volitare per urbes. Nos etiam in nostro modulantes flumine cygnos Credimus obscuras noctis sensisse per umbras, Quà Thamesis late puris argenteus urnis Oceani glaucos perfundit gurgite crines: Quin et in has quondam pervenit Tityrus oras. Sed neque nos genus incultum, nec inutile Phæbo. Quà plaga septeno mundi sulcata Trione Brumalem patitur longâ sub nocte Boöten. Nos etiam colimus Phæbum, nos munera Phæbo Flaventes spicas, et lutea mala canistris, Halantemque crocum (perhibet nisi vana vetustas) Misimus, et lectas Druidum de gente choreas. (Gens Druides antiqua sacris operata deorum Heroum landes imitandaque gesta canebant) Hinc quoties festo cingunt altaria cantu, Delo in herbosâ, Graiæ de more puellæ, Carminibus lætis memorant Corincida Loxo, Fatidicamque Upin, cum flavicomâ Hecaërge, Nuda Caledonio variatas pectora fuco.

Fortunate senex, ergo, quacunque per orbem Torquati decus, et nomen celebrabitur ingens, Claraque perpetui succrescet fama Marini, Tu quoque in ora frequens venies plausumque virorum, Et parili carpes iter immortale volatu. Dicetur tum sponte tuos habitasse penates Cynthius, et famulas venisse ad limina Musas: At non sponte domum tamen idem, et regis adivit Rura Pheretiadæ cœlo fugitivus Apollo; Ille licet magnum Alciden susceperat hospes; Tantum ubi clamosos placuit vitare bubulcos, Nobile mansueti cessit Chironis in antrum, Irriguos inter saltus, frondosaque tecta, Peneium prope rivum: ibi sæpe sub ilice nigrâ, Ad citharæ strepitum, blandâ prece victus amici Exilii duros lenibat voce labores. Tum neque ripa suo, barathro nec fixa sub imo Saxa stetere loco, nutat Trachinia rupes, Nec sentit solitas, immania pondera, silvas, Emotæque suis properant de collibus orni, Mulcenturque novo maculosi carmine lynces.

Diis dilecte senex, te Jupiter æquus oportet Nascentem, et miti lustrarit lumine Phæbus, Atlantisque nepos; neque enim nisi charus ab ortu Diis superis poterit magno favisse poetæ. Hinc longæva tibi lento sub flore senectus Vernat, et Æsonios lucratur vivida fusos, Nondum deciduos servans tibi frontis honores, Ingeniumque vigens, et adultum mentis acumen. O mihi si mea sors talem concedat amicum, Phæbæos decorasse viros qui tam bene nôrit, Si quando indigenas revocabo in carmina reges, Arturumque etiam sub terris bella moventem; Aut dicam invictæ sociali fædere mensæ Magnanimos heroas, et (O modo spiritus adsit!) Frangam Saxonicas Britonum sub Marte phalanges. Tandem ubi non tacitæ permensus tempora vitæ, Annorumque satur, cineri sua jura relinquam, Ille mihi lecto madidis astaret ocellis, Astanti sat erit si dicam sim tibi curæ;

Ille meos artus, liventi morte solutos,
Curaret parva componi molliter urna.
Forsitan et nostros ducat de marmore vultus,
Nectens aut Paphia myrti aut Parnasside lauri
Fronde comas, at ego secura pace quiescam.
Tum quoque, si qua fides, si præmia certa bonorum,
Ipse ego cœlicolûm semotus in æthera divûm,
Quò labor et mens pura vehunt, atque ignea virtus,
Secreti hæc aliqua mundi de parte videbo
(Quantum fata sinunt): et tota mente serenům
Ridens purpureo suffundar lumine vultus,
Et simul æthereo plaudam mihi lætus Olympo.

EPITAPHIUM DAMONIS.

ARGUMENTUM.

Thyrsis et Damon ejusdem viciniæ pastores, eadem studia sequuti a pueritia amici erant, ut qui plurimum. Thyrsis animi causa profectus peregrè de obitu Damonis nuncium accepit. Domum postea reversus, et rem ita esse comperto, se suamque solitudinem hoc carmine deplorat. Damonis autem sub persona hie intelligitur Carolus Deodatus ex urbe Hetruriæ Luca paterno genere oriundus, cætera Anglus; ingenio, doctrina, clarissimisque cæteris virtutibus, dum viveret, juvenis egregius.

Himerides nymphæ (nam vos et Daphnin et Hylan, Et plorata diu meministis fata Bionis) Dicite Sicelicum Thamesina per oppida carmen: Quas miser effudit voces, que murinura Thyrsis. Et quibus assiduis exercuit antra querelis, Fluminaque, fontesque vagos, nemorumque recessus, Dum sibi præreptum queritur Damona, neque altam Luctibus exemit noctem loca sola pererrans. Et jam bis viridi surgebat culmus arista, Et totidem flavas numerabant horrea messes, Ex quo summa dies tulerat Damona sub umbras, Nec dum aderat Thyrsis; pastorem scilicet illum Dulcis amor Musæ Thusca retinebat in urbe. Ast ubi mens expleta domum, pecorisque relicti Cura vocat, simul assuetâ seditque sub ulmo, Tum verò amissum tum denique sentit amicum, Cæpit et immensum sic exonerare dolorem. Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.

Hei mihi! quæ terris, quæ dicam numina cælo, Postquam te immiti rapuerunt funere, Damon! Siccine nos linquis, tua sic sine nomine virtus Ibit, et obscuris numero sociabitur umbris? At non ille, animas virgâ qui dividit aureâ, Ista velit, dignumque tui te ducat in agmen, Ignavumque procul pecus arceat omne silentum.

Ite domun impasti, domino jam nou vacat, agni. Quicquid erit, certè, nisi me lupus antè videbit, Indeplorato non comminuere sepulchro, Constabitque tuus tibi honos, longumque vigebit Inter pastores: illi tibi vota secundo Solvere post Daphnin, post Daphnin dicere laudes Gaudebunt, dum rura Pales, dum Faunus amabit: Si quid id est, priscamque fidem coluisse, piúmque, Palladiasque artes, sociumque habuisse canorum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Hæc tibi certa manent, tibi erunt hæc præmia, Damon, At mihi quid tandem fiet modo? quis mihi fidus Hærebit lateri comes, ut tu sæpe solebas Frigoribus duris, et per loca fæta pruinis, Aut rapido sub sole, siti morientibus herbis; Sive opus in magnos fuit eminus ire leones, Aut avidos terrere lupos præsepibus altis, Quis fando sopire diem, cantuque solebit?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Pectora cui credam? quis me lenire docebit
Mordaces curas, quis longam fallere noctem
Dulcibus alloquiis, grato cum sibilat igni
Molle pyrum, et nucibus strepitat focus, et malus auster
Miscet cuncta foris, et desuper intonat ulmo?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Aut æstate, dies medio dum vertitur axe, Cum Pan æsculcâ somnum capit abditus umbrâ, Et repetunt sub aquis sibi nota sedilia nymphæ, Pastoresque latent, stertit sub sepe colonus, Quis mihi blanditiasque tuas, quis tum mihi risus, Cecropiosque sales referet, cultosque lepores?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. At jam solus agros, jam pascua solas oberro,

Sicubi ramosæ densantur vallibus umbræ, Hic scrum expecto, supra caput imber et Eurus Triste sonant, fractæque agitata crepuscula sylvæ.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Heu, quam culta mihi prius arva procacibus herbis Involvuntur, et ipsa situ seges alta fatiscit! Innuba neglecto marcescit et uva recemo, Nec myrteta juvant; ovium quoque tædet, at illæ Mærent, inque suum convertunt ora magistrum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Tityrus ad coryles vocat, Alphesibœus ad ornos, Ad salices Ægon, ad flumina pulcher Amyntas, "Hic gelidi fontes, hic illita gramina musco, Hie Zephyri, hic placidas interstrepit arbutus undas;" Ista camunt surdo, frutices ego nactus abibam.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Mopsus ad hæc, nam me redeuntem forte notarat (Et callebat avium linguas, et sidera Mopsus), "Thyrsi quid hoc?" dixit, "quæ te coquit improbabilis? Aut te perdit amor, aut te male fascinat astrum, Saturni grave sæpe fuit pastoribus astrum, Intimaque obliquo figit præcordia plumbo."

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Mirantur nymphæ, et "quid te, Thyrsi, futurum est? Quid tibi vis?" ainnt, "non hæe solet esse juventæ Nubila frons, oculique truces, vultusque severi, Illa choros, lususque leves, et semper amorem Jure petit, bis ille miser qui serus amavit."

Ite domum impasti, domino jam nou vacat, agni. Venit Hyas. Dryopeque, et filia Baucidis Ægle, Docta modos, citharæque sciens, sed perdita fastu, Venit Idumanii Chloris vicina fluenti; Nil me blanditiæ, nil me solantia verba, Nil me, si quid adest, movet, aut spes ulla fut ri.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agai. Hei mihi, quam similes ludunt per prata javenci. Omnes unanimi secum sibi lege sodales!
Nec magis hunc alio quisquam secernit amicum De grege, sic densi veniunt ad pabula thoes, Inque vicem kirsuti paribus jangamtur onagri:

Lex eadem pelagi, deserto in littore Proteus Agmina phocarum numerat, vilisque voluerum Passer habet semper quicum sit, et omnia circum Parra libens volitet, sero sua tecta revisens, Quem si sors letho objecit, seu milvus adunco Fata tulit rosero, seu stravit arundine fossor, Protinus ille alium socio petit inde volatu. Nos durum genus, et diris exercita fatis Gens homines aliena animis, et pectore discors, Vix sibi quisque parem de millibus invenit unum, Aut si sors dederit tandem non aspera votis, Illum inopina dies, qua non speraveris hora, Surripit, æternum linguens in sæcula damnum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agn Heu quis me ignotas traxit vagus error in oras Ire per aëreas rupes, Alpemque nivosam! Ecquid erat tanti Romam vidisse sepultam (Quamvis illa foret, qualem dum viseret olim, Tityrus ipse suas et oves et rura reliquit); Ut te tam dulci possem caruisse sodale, Possem tot maria alta, tot interponere montes, Tot sylvas, tot saxa tibi, fluviosque sonantes! Ah certè extremum licuisset tangere dextram Et bene compositos placidè morientis ocellos, Et dixisse, "Vale, nostri memor ibis ad astra."

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Quamquam etiam vestri nunquam meminisse pigebit, Pastores Thusci, Musis operata juventus, Hic Charis, atque Lepos; et Thuscus tu quoque, Damon, Antiquâ genus unde petis Lucumonis ab urbe. O ego quantus eram, gelidi cum stratus ad Arni Murmura, populeumque nemus, quà mollior herba, Carpere nunc violas, nunc summas carpere myrtos. Et potui Lycidæ certantem audire Menalcam! Ipse etiam tentare ausus sum, nec puto multum Displicui, nam sunt et apud me munera vestra Fiscellæ, calathique, et cerea vincla cicutæ: Quin et nostra suas docuerunt nomina fagos Et Datis, et Francinus, erant et vocibus ambo Et studiis noti, Lydorum sanguinis ambo.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Hee mihi tum leto dictabat roscida luna, Dum solus teneros claudebam cratibus hædos. Ah quoties dixi, cum te cinis ater habebat. Nunc canit, aut lepori nunc tendit retia Damon. Vimina nunc texit, varios sibi quod sit in usus! Et quæ tum facili sperabam mente futura Arripui voto levis, et præsentia finxi: "Heus bone numquid agis? nisi te quid forte retardat. Imus? et argutâ paulum recubamus in umbrâ. Aut ad aquas Colni, aut ubi jugera Cassibelauni? Tu mihi percurres medicos, tua gramina, succos, Helleborúmque, humilésque, crocos, foliúmque, hyacinthi, Quasque habet ista palus herbas, artesque medentûm." Ah pereant herbæ, pereant artesque medentûm, Gramina, postquam ipsi nil profecere magistro. Ipse etiam, nam nescio quid mihi grande sonabat Fistula, ab undecimâ jam lux est altera nocte, Et tum forte novis admôram labra cicutis, Dissiluere tamen ruptâ compage, nec ultra Ferre graves potuere sonos; dubito quoque ne sim Turgidulus, tamen et referam; vos cedite, sylvæ. Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.

Ipse ego Dardanias Rutupina per æquora puppes Dicam, et Pandrasidos regnum vetus Inogenia, Brennúmque Arvigarúmque duces, priscúmque Belimum, Et tandem Armoricos Britonum sub lege colonos; Tum gravidam Arturo fatali fraude lögernen, Mendaces vultus, assumptaque Gorloïs arma, Merlini dolus. O mihi tum si vita supersit, Tu procul annosa pendebis fistula pinu Multum oblita mihi, aut patriis mutata Camœnis Brittonicum strides, quid enim? omnia non licet uni; Non sperâsse uni licet omnia; mi satis ampla, Merces, et mihi grande decus (sim ignotus in ævum Tum licet, externo penitusque inglorius orbi) Si me flava comas legat Usa, et potor Alauni, Vorticibusque frequens Abra, et nemus omne Treantæ, Et Thamesis meus ante onnes, et fusca metallis Tamara, et extremis me discant Orcades undis.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni. Hæc tibi servabam lentâ sub cortice lauri, Hæc, et plura simul, tum quæ mihi pocula Mansus, Mansus Chalcidicæ non ultima gloria ripæ, Bina dedit, mirum artis opus, mirandus et ipse, Et circum gemino cælaverat argumento: In medio rubri maris unda, et odoriferum ver, Littora longa Arabum, et sudantes balsama sylvæ, Has inter Phænix divina avis, unica terris, Cæruleum fulgens diversicoloribus alis Auroram vitreis surgentem respicit undis. Parte alia polus omnipatens, et magnus Olympus, Quis putet? hic quoque Amor, pictæque in nube pharetræ, Arma corusca faces, et spicula tineta pyropo; Nec tenues animas, pectûsque ignobile vulgi Hine ferit, at circum flammantia lumina torquens Semper in erectum spargit sua tela per orbes Impiger, et pronos nunquam collimat ad ictus, Hinc mentes ardere sacræ, formæque deorum. Tu quoque in his, nec me fallit spec lubrica, Damon, Tu quoque in his certé es, nam quò tua dulcis abiret Sanctaque simplicitas, nam quò tua candida virtus?

Nec te Lethao fas quæsivisse sub orco, Nec tibi conveniunt lacrymæ, nec flebimus ultrà, Ite procul lacrymæ, purum colit æthera Damon, Æthera purus habet, pluvium pede reppulit arcum ; Heroúmque animas inter, divósque perennes, Æthereos haurit latices, et gaudia potat Ore sacro. Quin tu carli post jura recepta Dexter ades, placidúsque fave quicunque vocaris, Seu tu noster eris Damon, sive æquior audis Diodotus, quo te divino nomine cuneti Cœlicolæ nôrint, sylvisque vocabere Damon. Quòd tibi purpureus pudor, et sine labe juventus Grata fuit, quòd nulla tori libata voluptas, En etiam tibi virginei servantur honores; Ipse caput nitidum cinctus rutilante corona, Lætáque frondentis gestans umbracula palmæ Æternum perages immortales hymenæos; Cantus ubi, choreisque furit lyra mista beatis, Festa Sionæo bacchantur et Orgia thyrso.

Gemelle cultu simplici gaudens liber,
Fronde licet geminâ,
Munditiéque nitens non operosâ,
Quam manus attulit
Juvenilis olim,
Sedula tamen haud nimii poetæ;
Dum vagus Ausonias nunc per umbras,
Nunc Britannica per vireta lusit
Insons populi, barbitóque devius
Indulsit patrio, mox itidem pectine Daunio
Longinquum intonuit melos
Vicinis, et humum vix tetigit pede;

ANTISTROPHE.

Quis te parve liber, quis te fratribus Subduxit reliquis dolo?
Cum tu missus ab urbe,
Docto jugiter obsecrante amico,
Illustre tendebas iter
Thamesis ad incunabula
Cærulei patris,
Fontes ubi limpidi
Aonidum, thyasusque sacer
Orbi notus per immensos
Temporum lapsus redeunte cælo,
Celeberque futurus in ævum?

STROPHE II.

Modò quis deus, aut editus deo Pristinam gentis miseratus indolem (Si satis noxas luimus priores, Mollique luxu degener otium),
Tollat nefandos civium tumultus,
Almaque revocet studia sanctus,
Et relegatas sine sede Musas
Jam penè totis finibus Angligenûm;
Immundasque volucres
Unguibus imminentes
Figat Apollineâ pharetra,
Phinéamque abigat pestem procul amne Pegaséo?

ANTISTROPHE.

Quin tu, libelle, nuntii licet malâ Fide, vel oscitantiâ, Semel erraveris agmine fratrum, Seu quis te teneat specus, Seu qua te latebra, forsan unde vili Callo teréris institoris insulsi, Lætare felix, en iterum tibi Spes nova fulget posse profundam Fugere Lethen, vehique superam In Jovis aulam remige pennâ;

STROPHE III.

Nam te Roüsius sui
Optat peculî, numeróque justo
Sibi pollicitum queritur abesse,
Rogatque venias ille cujus inclyta
Sunt data virûm monumenta curæ:
Téque adytis etiam sacris
Voluit reponi, quibus et ipse præsidet
Æternorum operum custos fidelis;
Quæstorque gazæ Lobilioris,
Quàm cui præfuit Iön,
Clarus Erechtheides,
Opulenta dei per templa parentis,
Fulvosque tripodas, donaque Delphica,
Iön Actæâ genitus Creusâ.

ANTISTROPHE.

Ergo tu visere lucos
Musarum ibis amænos,
Diamque Phæbi rursus ibis in domum,
Oxoniâ quam valle colit,
Delo posthabitâ,
Bifidóque Parnassi jugo:
Ibis honestus,
Postquam egregiam tu quoque sortem
Naetus abis, dextri prece sollicitatus amiei.
Illic legéris inter alta nomina
Authorum, Graiæ simul et Latinæ
Antiqua gentis lumina, et verum decus.

EPODOS.

Vos tandem haud vacui mei labores, Quicquid hoe sterile fudit ingenium, Jam serò placidam sperare jubeo Perfunctam invidià requiem, sedesque beatas, Quas bonus Hermes Et tutela dabit solers Rousi. Flonge Quo neque lingua procax vulgi penetrabit, atque Turba legentum prava facesset: At ultimi nepotes, Et cordation ætas, Judicia rebus æquiora forsitan Adhibebit integro sinu. Tum, livore sepulto, Si quid meremur sana posteritas sciet, Rousio favente.

Ode tribus constat Strophis, totidémque Antistrophis, una demum Epodo clausis, quas, tametsi ounes nec versuum numero, nec certis ubique colis exacté respondeant, ita tamen secuinus, commodé legendi potius, quam ad antiquos concinendi modos, rationem spectantes. Alioquin hoc genus rectius fortasse dici monostrophicum debuerat. Metra partim sunt κατά σχεσιε, partim ἀπολελημένου. Phaleucia que sunt, spondeaum tertio loco bis admittunt, quod idem in secundo loco Catullus ad libitum fecit.

AD CHRISTINAM SUECORUM REGINAM NOMINE CROMWELLI.

Bellipotens virgo, septem regina trionum,
Christina, Arctoï lucida stella poli!
Cernis quas merui dura sub casside rugas,
Utque senex armis impiger ora tero;
Invia fatorum dum per vestigia nitor,
Exequor et populi fortia jussa manu.
Ast tibi submittit frontem reverentior umbra;
Nec sunt hi vultus regibus usque truces.
